Davis Says State Cash Crisis Grave

Mail Ballot Asks Solons To Back Emergency Acts

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Gov. Jimmie H. Davis told lawmakers Saturday Louisiana is faced with a "grave financial problem."

Davis asked the legislators to give state Treasurer A. P. Tugwell assurance, in a mail ballot, they will support Tugwell's emergency action to meet payrolls and current expenses.

ENDORSES ACTION

"I personally feel," Davis told the lawmakers in a letter, "the treasurer is entitled to such assurance, if he is to co-operate in this matter, which would temporarily solve our problem until the Legislature convenes in regular session.

"Therefore," Davis said, "I wish to recommend that you give the state treasurer your assurance that you will support legislation to ratify his action in paying general fund warrants, submitted by state agencies, covering appropriations made for the month of April, 1962."

The governor enclosed a ballot for the legislators to sign and return to his office.

Davis' letter said:

As a member of the legislature, you no doubt are aware of the fact that on taking office two years ago we inherited a serious financial problem from previous administrations.

"I say this without casting any reflection whatever on my predecessors," he said, "and with full understanding of the problems with which they themselves were confronted during the period of increasing costs and declining revenues.

"That problem is also a problem with which we have continued to struggle since May 1960.

"As a result," he said, "we completed the first year of my present administration with a substantial deficit, which was brought forward into the current fiscal year.

"That deficit, together with the fact that certain anticipated revenues for the current year have fallen below budget estimates, brings us face to face with a larger deficit and a grave financial problem for which I hope the upcoming legislature will find it possible to devise a permanent solunfion.

"Until this is done, however," Davis said, "it is imperative that we continue to operate the government and meet the monthly payrolls.

"The state treasurer informs me that this can not be done without resorting to the use of funds which he himself does not

U.S. Consulate Bombed; One Employe Killed

CARACAS, Venezuela (UPI)—The U.S. Consulate at Puerto de la Cruz was bombed Saturday killing one local employe and injuring another person, the U.S. Embassy announced.

It was the second attack on U.S. diplomatic posts in Venezuela this year. The Embassy here was bombed in Janary.

The Embassy said the bomb, presumably made of dynamite, went off outside the front door of the Consulate, causing considerable damage to it and adjacent offices. Consul Peter Roberts was not in the office at the time of the blast.

The building's janitor was killed. Identity of the wounded man was not immediately known.

Puerto de la Cruz is a Caribbean oil port about 150 mles east of Caracas. The Consulate handles the affairs of the large American oil colony in the area, as well as oil tanker traffic papers.

Ohio Honors Glenn's Mother

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The mother of Ohio's favorite son officially became the state's favorite mom here Saturday as Mrs. John Glenn Sr. of New Concord accepted the citation as Ohio Mother of 1962.

Some 325 women and about three dozen men provided the largest audience in the nine-year history of the Ohio mother award to pay tribute to the woman who will represent Ohio in the American Mother of the Year competition May 7-11 in New York.

In a long-distance telephone call, her astronaut son Lt. Col. John H. Glenn Jr. messaged to the audience, "The people of Ohio are just finding out what I have known all along. So far as I'm concerned, Mom and Dad are the mother and dad of many years, not just this year."

Judges Order Redistricting

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — The Alabama Legislature, which has not been reapportioned since the plantation era of 1901, got a blunt do-it-now-or-we-will warning Saturday from a federal court.

In an historic decision which followed a 45-minute hearing, a three - judge panel declared unequivocally that the House and Senate must be redistricted before a new legislature is elected in November.

Unless the outgoing lawmaking assembly enacts a reapportionment bill in special session this summer, the judges warned that the court will draw up its own plan and order it put into effect.

Tentatively, the panel fixed the deadline at July 16, and ordered a further hearing for that day.

The three judges in their unanimous decree made it clear that the court would not wait much longer because of the time required to get the names of the candidates on the November ballot and for the Democrats—and the Republicans, too, in one or two counties—to pick their nominees.

The traditionally predominant Democratic party will nominate candidates for the legislature, along with scores of other offices, in a primary May 1 and a runoff four weeks later.

But those candidates are running for a legislature apportioned as it has been without change for 61 years despite a state constitutional mandate to reapportion on the basis of population every 10 years.

The court's four-page decision was read by Judge Richard T. Rives of the U. S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals. Sitting on either side of him were Dist. Court Judges Frank M. Johnson Jr., Montgomery and Daiel Thomas, Mobile.

STEEL INDUSTRY

Congress Pushes Ahead On Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress pushed ahead with antimonopoly investigations Saturday despite the steel industry's backdown on price increases.

A Senate Antitrust subcommittee headed by Sen. Estes Kefauver, D—Tenn., issued subpoenaes for figures on production costs of 12 steel firms, including Inland and others that didn't raise their prices.

Sen. Albert Gore, D—Tenn., prepared to introduce in the Senate Monday three bills he said are "designed to protect the public interest against unjustified prices and profits in monopoly-controlled industries."

"This whole episode in which the steel companies made almost uniform price increases and then rescinded them demonstrates the need for additional machinery to protect the public interest in the future," Gore said in a statement. The rollback was completed Saturday when Wheeling Steel rescinded it sposted price increases.

The dramatic process started Friday afternoon. Bethlehem Steel, the No. 2 producer, announced that it was cancelling the higher prices it had made effective the day before. Bethlehem's action followed announcements by Inland and Kaiser that they would not follow the $6-a-ton increase posted by the bellwether U.S. Steel Corp. Tuesday night.

A few hours later U.S. Steel rescinded its increase, and the lesser producers then fell in line one by one.

President Kennedy, who denounced the original increase bitterly and marshalled the full force of his administration to bring about the quick rollback, made a restrained comment.

Zoo Official Faints As Elephant Born

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)—Belle the Elephant gave birth to a wobbly 34-inch baby elephant Saturday while the zoo director passed out from the strain.

It was the first elephant birth in this country in 43 years.

Belle, the ten-year-old Siamese elephant, gave birth to the tiny, hairy grey baby at 5:58 Saturday morning in the holding room of the elephant house.

Both mother and baby were doing fine.

But zoo director Jack Marks—who has paced the floor with Belle for many days and nights during the past two months—suddenly collapsed.

He was rushed by ambulance to a Portland hospital, where doctors said he was exhausted. Later, in spite of his pleas to return to the zoo, he was sent home to rest.

Three other female elephants were present at the birth, and one of them—Pet—tried to attack the baby.

Marks and other attendants used hooks to steer the three to separate quarters.

The tiny elephant, estimated at 175 pounds, tottered to its feet within ten minutes and started nursing within a half hour.

Belle nudged it affectionately as it wobbled through the straw, shook its 18 - inch trunk, and weaved between Belle's legs. Belle showed all of a mother's protective instincts, and attendants stayed a respectful distance away.

The last elephant birth in this country was April 29, 1918, when the old circus elephant Princess Alice delivered a baby at Salt Lake City.

It died. Its death was blamed on its inability to digest cows milk after the mother refused to nurse it.

Berlin Plan Is Opposed By Adenauer

U.S. Proposals Seen As Step To Recognize Reds

WASHINGTON (AP) — German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer was reported Saturday to have objected strenuously to new U. S. proposals for Berlin which in his view would move toward recognition of Communist East Germany.

Two days before the start of a new round of U. S.-Soviet talks on a possible Berlin settlement, crucial tensions appeared to be building up between Washington and Bonn.

The State Department protested to the Germans against what administration officials considered a deliberate leak of information bout U. S. proposals for the new round of Berlin discussions.

The West German government denied responsibility for any leak.

Press reports from Bonn indicated sharp displeasure with the trend of U. S. thinking and a lack of confidence in here the Kennedy administration would draw the line on accomodations of Western policy with Soviet policy in its attempts to reach a settlement.

Informants here said Adenauer had made his objection known in unmistakable terms and for consideration by President Kennedy. Diplomats said he seemed to be annoyed and upset by indications he saw in the U. S. negotiating plan that the Kennedy administration is willing to move toward at least a limited, practical recognition of East Germany.

Syrians Get Koudsi Back As President

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—Nazem el Koudsi stepped back into the role of president of Syria Saturday and promised the nation a free referendum to decide whether it wants unity with other Arab states, "beginning with dear Egypt."

As Koudsi returned civilian leadership to the nation, the army opened Syria's borders and called off its emergency curfew throughout the country 17 days after it overthrew the government.

ARRESTED IN COUP

Koudsi, arrested in the army coup but reinstalled as president after his release Friday, began consultations to form a new civilian government. He indicated the 172-member old Parliament is now dissolved and that he would call an election for a new one. But he set no date.

"The great majority of deptuies have handed in their resignations to me," he said in his first broadcast since his release.

"They asked me to find a transitional government that will enjoy with me the right to reconcile, to promulgate laws and to lay down the foundation for democracy in the future."

N.O. Socialite Refuses To Pay Federal Taxes

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Miss Evelyn Jahncke, member of a social prominent New Orleans family said Saturday she was refusing to pay federal income taxes this year because they are "unconstitutional."

Miss Jahncke said she returned uncompleted tax forms to the district director of Internal Revenue Service at New Orleans, together with a letter stating why she refused to fill out the forms.

She said her letter told the director: "I stand on my constitutional rights and refuse to incriminate myself by giving any information as to my financial status."

Miss Jahncke said she based her stand on a portion of Article Five of the U.S. Constitution which says: "No person shall be . . . deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation."

ARRIVE IN MIAMI

60 Ailing Cuban Prisoners Freed

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Sixty wounded and ailing survivors of the Cuban invasion, still wearing their prison uniforms, limped down the steps of an airliner Saturday into the arms of their joyously weeping families.

Thousands of exiled Cubans thronged Miami International Airport to greet the first men liberated since Prime Minister Fidel Castro's forces rounded up the invaders nearly a year ago.

All were hurried to Mercy Hospital, some in ambulances. But all managed to leave the airliner under their own power. Each paused to give a brave military salute before starting down the steps—a tortured descent for most of them.

CROWD ROARS

A roar went up from the waiting thousands as the big plane taxied into view and a cloud of waving handkerchiefs appeared over the heads of the throng.

But as the door of the plane opened and the first prisoner emerged, a strange stillness fell over the crowd. Tears were on almost every cheek. Twice the crowd attempted to sing the Cuban national anthem but voices faltered and broke.

Little was said as the prisoners and their families embraced. Many seemed unable to speak as they clung together. For some it was the first sight of their loved ones in nearly two years. Numbers had gone into training months before the invasion.

Taxpayers Get Extra Day On Filing Returns

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Baby, I don't get the message," wrote a beatnik lady to the Internal Revenue Service. "Are you for me — or against me?"

This thought will be crossing the minds of several million Americans this weekend as they put the finishing touches on federal income tax returns that must be filed by midnight Monday.

Normally, the filing deadline would come Sunday. But taxpayers get an extra day of grace this year because April 15 falls on a Sunday.

To help dispel last-minute tax woes, IRS made available Saturday its annual collection of offbeat happenings recorded during 1961.

For example, one man who was due a refund pinned this note to his return: "You can take 2 per cent discount if you get this check back to me in 10 days." And another wrote, "Please send my refund check by return mail. I must have it to bury my mother-in-law."

Finish Of Bridge During Year Seen

Inclement weather conditions in recent weeks have slowed progress on the Interstate 20 project, but officials are still hoping for completion of the bridge between Monroe and West Monroe by the end of this year.

"Work on the bridge is running just about on schedule, although most of the other work is running behind because of excessive rain during recent months," Ellis Ross, district engineer for the State Department of Highways, reported.

Presently, concrete is being poured in work on the approaches to the bridge on the West Monroe side.

Ross said pouring of the bridge slab on the West Monroe side is approximately 33 per cent complete.

Most of the steel has been erected on the Monroe side, and Ross estimated this phase of the project as 90 per cent complete.

"Some of the spans are being formed on the West Monroe side, and workers probably will begin pouring concrete on the bridge by the middle of this coming week," he explained.

"After is has been completed on the West Monroe side, we will begin pouring concrete on the Monroe side," he added.

Ross siad the next contract in the I-20 project probably will be about July 1.

"I have received no notice as to what the next contract will involve, although it possibly could be the Stella Street exchange in West Monroe," he explained.

Meanwhile, grading work and installation of drainage structures have been resumed on the pro-

Bodies Found Inside House After Blaze

By SARAH LITTLE
World Staff Writer

A West Monroe couple died in the flames of their house located on Hicks Street late Saturday night.

The two were tentatively identified as Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Walther of 1000 Hicks Street, West Monroe.

The bodies were found inside the house in a back bedroom. Whereabouts of their two children were not known immediately.

Neighbors noticed the blazing inferno around 11 p.m. and notified the West Monroe Fire Department.

RESCUE ATTEMPT

William C. Richardson, who lives at 919 Hicks Street, rushed across the street, broke in windows, and called out to the couple but could get no answer.

Richardson, shirtless, dashed into the blazing house in an attempt to save the couple but was unable to get close enough because of the intense heat.

Trucks of the West Monroe Fire Department arrived and quickly brought the flames under control. However, the two were dead by the time they were reached.

Mr. and Mrs. Walther apparently died of suffocation, firemen said. Dr. John P. Burton, parish coroner, had not returned a ruling in the deaths.

Cause of the fire was still being investigated.

The fire apparently started the front room of the three - bedroom brick structure.

The family's pet dog was found dead in another bedroom.

Their two teenage boys, Larry and Charles Walther had not been located at 11:30 p.m. and apparently were not in the house.

Mr. Walther reportedly was a carpenter contractor and his wife was a mail carrier.

De Gaulle Appoints Premier

PARIS (AP)-President Charles de Gaulle accepted the resignation of Premier Michel Debre Saturday — and as forecast — named Georges Pompidou, a banker with no previous political experience, to succeed him.

Debre's resignation and that of other members of his government had been rumored for more than a month and Pompidou always had been considered the leading candidate for the job.

Debre stepped aside after three years and three months. In his letter of resignation, he declared his term in office had been dominated by the Algerian problem and now that a cease-fire has been signed with the Algerian nationalist rebels, a solution approved by the nation, he felt it was time to leave.

In response, De Gaulle praised Debre's contributions and accomplishments and gave him leave to retire "in order to prepare yourself to undertake, at the proper moment and under new circumstances, another phase of your activities."

After a 35-minute talk with De Gaulle at Elysee Palace Pompidou told reporters, "I hope to work very quickly in the formation of my government."

Pompidou had plenty of advance notice of his appointment and is already far along in assembling his new government team. But he seemed to be running into minor difficulties in his effort to add some political coloring to the cabinet.

Syrians Get Koudsi Back As President

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP)—Nazem el Koudsi stepped back into the role of president of Syria Saturday and promised the nation a free referendum to decide whether it wants unity with other Arab states, "beginning with dear Egypt."

As Koudsi returned civilian leadership to the nation, the army opened Syria's borders and called off its emergency curfew throughout the country 17 days after it overthrew the government.

ARRESTED IN COUP

Koudsi, arrested in the army coup but reinstalled as president after his release Friday, began consultations to form a new civilian government. He indicated the 172-member old Parliament is now dissolved and that he would call an election for a new one. But he set no date.

"The great majority of deptuies have handed in their resignations to me," he said in his first broadcast since his release.

"They asked me to find a transitional government that will enjoy with me the right to reconcile, to promulgate laws and to lay down the foundation for democracy in the future."

N.O. Socialite Refuses To Pay Federal Taxes

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Miss Evelyn Jahncke, member of a social prominent New Orleans family said Saturday she was refusing to pay federal income taxes this year because they are "unconstitutional."

Miss Jahncke said she returned uncompleted tax forms to the district director of Internal Revenue Service at New Orleans, together with a letter stating why she refused to fill out the forms.

She said her letter told the director: "I stand on my constitutional rights and refuse to incriminate myself by giving any information as to my financial status."

Miss Jahncke said she based her stand on a portion of Article Five of the U.S. Constitution which says: "No person shall be . . . deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law, nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation."

ARRIVE IN MIAMI

60 Ailing Cuban Prisoners Freed

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Sixty wounded and ailing survivors of the Cuban invasion, still wearing their prison uniforms, limped down the steps of an airliner Saturday into the arms of their joyously weeping families.

Thousands of exiled Cubans thronged Miami International Airport to greet the first men liberated since Prime Minister Fidel Castro's forces rounded up the invaders nearly a year ago.

All were hurried to Mercy Hospital, some in ambulances. But all managed to leave the airliner under their own power. Each paused to give a brave military salute before starting down the steps—a tortured descent for most of them.

CROWD ROARS

A roar went up from the waiting thousands as the big plane taxied into view and a cloud of waving handkerchiefs appeared over the heads of the throng.

But as the door of the plane opened and the first prisoner emerged, a strange stillness fell over the crowd. Tears were on almost every cheek. Twice the crowd attempted to sing the Cuban national anthem but voices faltered and broke.

Little was said as the prisoners and their families embraced. Many seemed unable to speak as they clung together. For some it was the first sight of their loved ones in nearly two years. Numbers had gone into training months before the invasion.

The first sight the men saw as

Taxpayers Get Extra Day On Filing Returns

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Baby, I don't get the message," wrote a beatnik lady to the Internal Revenue Service. "Are you for me — or against me?"

This thought will be crossing the minds of several million Americans this weekend as they put the finishing touches on federal income tax returns that must be filed by midnight Monday.

Normally, the filing deadline would come Sunday. But taxpayers get an extra day of grace this year because April 15 falls on a Sunday.

To help dispel last-minute tax woes, IRS made available Saturday its annual collection of offbeat happenings recorded during 1961.

For example, one man who was due a refund pinned this note to his return: "You can take 2 per cent discount if you get this check back to me in 10 days." And another wrote, "Please send my refund check by return mail. I must have it to bury my mother-in-law."

DESPITE WEATHER

Finish Of Bridge During Year Seen

Inclement weather conditions in recent weeks have slowed progress on the Interstate 20 project, but officials are still hoping for completion of the bridge between Monroe and West Monroe by the end of this year.

"Work on the bridge is running just about on schedule, although most of the other work is running behind because of excessive rain during recent months," Ellis Ross, district engineer for the State Department of Highways, reported.

Presently, concrete is being poured in work on the approaches to the bridge on the West Monroe side.

Ross said pouring of the bridge slab on the West Monroe side is approximately 33 per cent complete.

Most of the steel has been erected on the Monroe side, and Ross estimated this phase of the project as 90 per cent complete.

"Some of the spans are being formed on the West Monroe side, and workers probably will begin pouring concrete on the bridge by the middle of this coming week," he explained.

"After is has been completed on the West Monroe side, we will begin pouring concrete on the Monroe side," he added.

Ross siad the next contract in the I-20 project probably will be about July 1.

"I have received no notice as to what the next contract will involve, although it possibly could be the Stella Street exchange in West Monroe," he explained.

Meanwhile, grading work and installation of drainage structures have been resumed on the pro-

Bodies Found Inside House After Blaze

By SARAH LITTLE
World Staff Writer

A West Monroe couple died in the flames of their house located on Hicks Street late Saturday night.

The two were tentatively identified as Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Walther of 1000 Hicks Street, West Monroe.

The bodies were found inside the house in a back bedroom. Whereabouts of their two children were not known immediately.

Neighbors noticed the blazing inferno around 11 p.m. and notified the West Monroe Fire Department.

RESCUE ATTEMPT

William C. Richardson, who lives at 919 Hicks Street, rushed across the street, broke in windows, and called out to the couple but could get no answer.

Richardson, shirtless, dashed into the blazing house in an attempt to save the couple but was unable to get close enough because of the intense heat.

Trucks of the West Monroe Fire Department arrived and quickly brought the flames under control. However, the two were dead by the time they were reached.

Mr. and Mrs. Walther apparently died of suffocation, firemen said. Dr. John P. Burton, parish coroner, had not returned a ruling in the deaths.

Cause of the fire was still being investigated.

The fire apparently started the front room of the three - bedroom brick structure.

The family's pet dog was found dead in another bedroom.

Their two teenage boys, Larry and Charles Walther had not been located at 11:30 p.m. and apparently were not in the house.

Mr. Walther reportedly was a carpenter contractor and his wife was a mail carrier.

De Gaulle Appoints Premier

PARIS (AP)-President Charles de Gaulle accepted the resignation of Premier Michel Debre Saturday — and as forecast — named Georges Pompidou, a banker with no previous political experience, to succeed him.

Debre's resignation and that of other members of his government had been rumored for more than a month and Pompidou always had been considered the leading candidate for the job.

Debre stepped aside after three years and three months. In his letter of resignation, he declared his term in office had been dominated by the Algerian problem and now that a cease-fire has been signed with the Algerian nationalist rebels, a solution approved by the nation, he felt it was time to leave.

In response, De Gaulle praised Debre's contributions and accomplishments and gave him leave to retire "in order to prepare yourself to undertake, at the proper moment and under new circumstances, another phase of your activities."

After a 35-minute talk with De Gaulle at Elysee Palace Pompidou told reporters, "I hope to work very quickly in the formation of my government."

Pompidou had plenty of advance notice of his appointment and is already far along in assembling his new government team. But he seemed to be running into minor difficulties in his effort to add some political coloring to the cabinet.

States," he said, "are most gratified".

In one of the bills which Gore has drafted, he proposes to give the President authority under the Taft - Hartley Act to call for an 80-day cooling-off period when any general price increase in steel or other basic commodities is threatened. This would be similar to presidential authority to halt certain types of strikes.

Another bill would give the courts "the same yardstick to apply to breaking up existing large concentrations that is already applicable in preventing proposed mergers and acquisitions," Gore said.

A third measure would establish a national consumers advisory board, with fact-finding and information — dissemination authority to bring public opinion to bear against what it might find were unjustified price increases.

U.S. marshals are expected to serve the Kefauver subcommittee's subpoenas the first of next week. The subpoenas call for submission of the requested data within a month. Staff aides said it probably will take another two to three months to analyze the figures.

The steel companies are directed to furnish information on production costs, exclusive of administrative and sales expenses and income taxes. The aim is to find out how much it costs to produce a ton of steel.

A House Judiciary subcommittee headed by Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., has scheduled public hearings beginning May 2 on the steel price situation.

Celler said this will be a study of whether the antitrust laws need strengthening. He added, with reference to the price increase cancellations, that, "The penitent shall not be punished."

Gore challenged the contention of Roger M. Blough, board chairman of U.S. Steel, that the company needs larger profits to modernize its machinery in order to remain in a competitive position.

"This type of argument is economic nonsense," Gore said. "Domestic steel cannot meet price competition from foreign steel or from such substitute materials as prestressed concrete by making its prices even less competitive.

"Even disregarding economics, what are the equities? Is U.S. Steel not making a good profit? Can it not afford to make proper expenditures for plant and equipment?"

Gore said labor costs could not be blamed for a drop in U.S. Steel profits.

He said that in 1961, employment costs, as shown by U.S. Steel's own annual report, were $1.62 billion, while in 1960 the comparable figure was $1.70 billion.

"Net income, after taxes, was still high, amounting to more than $190 million, but it was 38 per cent lower than net income in 1960," Gore said. "Could such a decrease labor costs when labor costs were actually lower? Impossible.

"I do not know what caused U.S. Steel's reductions in profits last year, but the record shows that it was not increased labor costs."

Atty. Gen Robert F. Kennedy said a New York federal grand jury investigation into the price increases will continue, adding that the rollback will not have any effect on this.

Berlin Plan Is Opposed By Adenauer

from Bonn Friday with such precision that the first reaction of top officials in the government here was a combination of anger and shock. They suspected there was a calculated leak designed to arouse opposition against ideas set forth in a U. S. memo circulated to Bonn, London and Paris.

A West German government spokesman said any such accusation was completely without foundation. He said West Germany has absolute faith in U. S. policies concerning Berlin.

Secretary of State Dean Rusk is scheduled to meet Monday afternoon with Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin. They will resume Berlin talks where Rusk and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko left off in Geneva last month.

Four main proposals were set forth in the U. S. working paper submitted to Allied governments for comment and—Rusk hoped—approval.

Adenauer is said to have objected, among other things, to a provision for freezing the present demarcation lines which divide East Germany and Poland, and East and West Germany, on the ground that this would give new prestige and respect to Communist East Germany.

Apparently Adenauer objected also to modification of a U. S. proposal for an international authority to operate the Berlin supply lines. Under this proposition as it now stands the East Germans apparently would have an important role to play, giving them a basis for claiming de facto recognition by the Western powers. Adenuer is opposed to any kind of recognition for the German Communist state.

The four U. S. proposals in brief are:

1. The North Atlantic Treaty Organization and Warsaw Pact military groups would issue nonaggression declarations coupled with guarantees against violations of present demarcation lines on the cold war frontiers. This would have the effect of freezing disputed German boundaries even without a German peace treaty.

2. The big nuclear powers would sign a treaty to prohibit the spread of nuclear weapons so far as they can. This would assure the Soviets that the United States had no intention of turning over nuclear weapons to West Germany. But it would not rule out a nuclear capacity for NATO as an international defense organization.

3. The access routes from West Germany to West Berlin would be placed under direct operational control of an international authority essentially composed of the United States, Britain, France and Russia, but with roles for East and West Germans. The East Germans already control about 95 per cent of the traffic—all the surface civilian traffic—to West Berlin.

4. Creation of joint East-West German committees to work on such problems as eventual unification of Germany under free elections, promotion of East-West contacts, economic relations, and practical problems raised by the sealing off of East Berlin.

have the right to use without authority from the legislature.

"This is true, he states, because he has exhausted all revenue which can be anticipated for the general fund during the entire current fiscal year."

"However," Davis said, "the state treasurer agrees that the salaries of the state employes must be paid, and that he would therefore be willing to honor general fund warrants for the month of April, if he could be assured by a majority of the members of the legislature that they immediately upon convening for the regular session, on the 14th of May, would support legislation to approve and ratify his actions in paying the agencies of the state their appropriations against the general fund for the month of April.

"This would require approximately $12 million," Davis said, "but would provide funds for payrolls due May 1 and May 15, after which the legislature could take such action as it sees fit to provide for future operations."

they pressed their faces eagerly against the plane windows was a color guard of their invasion comrades—the men who had managed to make it back immediately after the Bay of Pigs attack failed.

American and Cuban flags and the proud banner of the invasion brigade itself were borne by wounded survivors among those who had escaped after the assault. One of the men, Rolando Novoa, 42, still was using a crutch. Eleven other invaders were drawn up in a stiff line behind the colors.

The prisoners were released on credit. Members of the negotiating team which went to Havana to confer with Castro about the release said that so far not a cent has changed hands. Castro has demanded $62 million in ransom for his 1,179 prisoners but agreed to free Saturday's arrivals on the promise that the money for them will be handed over later.

The returnees pledged they will go back to Havana's frowning Principe Prison voluntarily unless a way is found to free their comrades in arms. They set no deadline for this return but a negotiating team member quoted Castro as telling the captives that he expects all will be out within three months.

"We shall consider ourselves prisoners until the last one of our companions is at liberty. Should our companions not be set free, we would return voluntarily to the Castillo del Principe," said a spokesman for the invalids.

The men are each under sentences of 30 years at hard labor if their ransom is not paid. But a negotiator who was asked what labor the men would have to perform said he hopes none will be put to work.

"We hope they will not do any kind of hard labor," said Enrique Llaca, expressing confidence that Castro's ransom demand will be met.

The ransoms range from a half-million dollars each for the three invasion leaders—judged the most guilty by the court which sentenced the men—to $25,000 apiece for the soldiers in the lowest ranks.

For parents, wives, and other relatives it was the first happy day since their menfolk were named among survivors of the disastrous April 17, 1961, attempt to overthrow Castro by force of arms.

One prisoner summoned the strength to jump up and down when he spied his wife and children in the crowd.

By the time the liberated men were helped to walk 100 feet to the ambulances, thousands of spectators had jostled through the terminal and formed a clapping, screaming, waving lane for the vehicles' journey toward Mercy Hospital.

At the hospital, the returnees declined to make any statements.

But Maria Allen, wife of one returnee, Carlos, 29, said, "Now we shall start living all over again. I am unashamedly happy."

Then she and Allen left the hospital. He lost his right leg in the Bay of Pigs landing.

just entered high school and was holding a part time job. Asked how much her son was earning, she replied, "oh, around $5,000."

The taxpayer assistance section at another office received the following telephone inquiry:

"We have 57 gallons of paint. The boss said to send 40 per cent to one customer and the rest to another. How much do I send to each customer?"

"I'm sorry," the caller was told, "but that doesn't seem to have anything to do with tax information."

"Well, I know that," said the taxpayer, "but I can't think of anybody better to call to get the answer."

Equally unusual was the case of the man who received a notice of error in computation — a form showing how much he owed in additional taxes. He took the card to his travel agent, cashed it, and left on an extended trip.

Judges Order Redistricting

representation had asked the three-judge panel to block the nomination of legislative candidates in the May primaries.

The court denied the injunction, holding that the lame-duck House and Senate will have ample time during the summer to take action.

Because of the failure to redistrict the House and Senate, small rural counties where the population was centered in the cotton-and-crinoline days when the present state constitution was adopted in 1901 still have more representation than others many times larger.

A special session would be necessary for the legislature to act this summer because the House and Senate normally will not meet until next year, and then only after a new legislature has been elected.

Gov. John Patterson is touring South America. Anticipating a possible federal court order after the Supreme Court ruled that U. S. judges have jurisdiction, Patterson said last month that he might call the legislature during the summer.

The three-judge panel made it clear that if the court enters a reapportionment order, it will be limited in scope, and the incoming legislature will have the responsibility to finish the task.

Exiles Picket White House, Ask For Arms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nearly one hundred Cuban exiles picketed the White House Saturday with placards saying, "Give us rifles—we will do the rest."

Ironically, five North American picketed 30 feet away with signs saying, "Women march for Peace."

The Cubans were New York and Washington area members of Rescate, an affiliate of the Cuban Revolutionary Council.

Sergio Aparicio, chairman of the New York chapter and in charge of the picket, said similar demonstrations were being held in other U.S. cities and in several Latin American capitals.

"All we need," Aparicio said, "are the guns and the airplanes. We can get Castros, both Fidel and Raul, Che Guevara and Khrushchev and all their Communist pilots and other Reds out of Cuba in very little time. We do not need American boys to help us... give us the materials and we will do the rest."

they pressed their faces eagerly against the plane windows was a color guard of their invasion comrades—the men who had managed to make it back immediately after the Bay of Pigs attack failed.

American and Cuban flags and the proud banner of the invasion brigade itself were borne by wounded survivors among those who had escaped after the assault. One of the men, Rolando Novoa, 42, still was using a crutch. Eleven other invaders were drawn up in a stiff line behind the colors.

The prisoners were released on credit. Members of the negotiating team which went to Havana to confer with Castro about the release said that so far not a cent has changed hands. Castro has demanded $62 million in ransom for his 1,179 prisoners but agreed to free Saturday's arrivals on the promise that the money for them will be handed over later.

The returnees pledged they will go back to Havana's frowning Principe Prison voluntarily unless a way is found to free their comrades in arms. They set no deadline for this return but a negotiating team member quoted Castro as telling the captives that he expects all will be out within three months.

"We shall consider ourselves prisoners until the last one of our companions is at liberty. Should our companions not be set free, we would return voluntarily to the Castillo del Principe," said a spokesman for the invalids.

The men are each under sentences of 30 years at hard labor if their ransom is not paid. But a negotiator who was asked what labor the men would have to perform said he hopes none will be put to work.

"We hope they will not do any kind of hard labor," said Enrique Llaca, expressing confidence that Castro's ransom demand will be met.

The ransoms range from a half-million dollars each for the three invasion leaders—judged the most guilty by the court which sentenced the men—to $25,000 apiece for the soldiers in the lowest ranks.

For parents, wives, and other relatives it was the first happy day since their menfolk were named among survivors of the disastrous April 17, 1961, attempt to overthrow Castro by force of arms.

One prisoner summoned the strength to jump up and down when he spied his wife and children in the crowd.

By the time the liberated men were helped to walk 100 feet to the ambulances, thousands of spectators had jostled through the terminal and formed a clapping, screaming, waving lane for the vehicles' journey toward Mercy Hospital.

At the hospital, the returnees declined to make any statements.

But Maria Allen, wife of one returnee, Carlos, 29, said, "Now we shall start living all over again. I am unashamedly happy."

Then she and Allen left the hospital. He lost his right leg in the Bay of Pigs landing.

Taxpayers Get Extra Day On Filing Returns

just entered high school and was holding a part time job. Asked how much her son was earning, she replied, "oh, around $5,000."

The taxpayer assistance section at another office received the following telephone inquiry:

"We have 57 gallons of paint. The boss said to send 40 per cent to one customer and the rest to another. How much do I send to each customer?"

"I'm sorry," the caller was told, "but that doesn't seem to have anything to do with tax information."

"Well, I know that," said the taxpayer, "but I can't think of anybody better to call to get the answer."

Equally unusual was the case of the man who received a notice of error in computation — a form showing how much he owed in additional taxes. He took the card to his travel agent, cashed it, and left on an extended trip.

Judges Order Redistricting

representation had asked the three-judge panel to block the nomination of legislative candidates in the May primaries.

The court denied the injunction, holding that the lame-duck House and Senate will have ample time during the summer to take action.

Because of the failure to redistrict the House and Senate, small rural counties where the population was centered in the cotton-and-crinoline days when the present state constitution was adopted in 1901 still have more representation than others many times larger.

A special session would be necessary for the legislature to act this summer because the House and Senate normally will not meet until next year, and then only after a new legislature has been elected.

Gov. John Patterson is touring South America. Anticipating a possible federal court order after the Supreme Court ruled that U. S. judges have jurisdiction, Patterson said last month that he might call the legislature during the summer.

The three-judge panel made it clear that if the court enters a reapportionment order, it will be limited in scope, and the incoming legislature will have the responsibility to finish the task.

Exiles Picket White House, Ask For Arms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Nearly one hundred Cuban exiles picketed the White House Saturday with placards saying, "Give us rifles—we will do the rest."

Ironically, five North American picketed 30 feet away with signs saying, "Women march for Peace."

The Cubans were New York and Washington area members of Rescate, an affiliate of the Cuban Revolutionary Council.

Sergio Aparicio, chairman of the New York chapter and in charge of the picket, said similar demonstrations were being held in other U.S. cities and in several Latin American capitals.

"All we need," Aparicio said, "are the guns and the airplanes. We can get Castros, both Fidel and Raul, Che Guevara and Khrushchev and all their Communist pilots and other Reds out of Cuba in very little time. We do not need American boys to help us... give us the materials and we will do the rest."

Pakistanian Set In Address For Local Lions Club

Maurice K. Elahi of Sialkol, West Pakistan, will be the guest speaker at the Tuesday luncheon of the North Monroe Lions Club at the Saddle and Spur Restaurant, it was announced Saturday by Frank McDermott, International Counselor of the Lions Clubs in this area.

He will give a general review of the culture, customs, educational systems, government and how communisum has effected Pakistan Immediately following his address, there will be a discussion on the same subject with the members of the club, one of the members said.

Elahi came with his wife to the United States last June. She was reared in the community of Swartz, where the couple now make their home, and they have one daughter who is 16 months old.

The Pakistani is a graduate of Murray College in his home country. After finishing his formal education, he taught in the Murrea Language School, also in Sialkol. This school is primarily for the Christian Missionaries who come from all over the world. It was in this school that he met his wife.

Elahi speaks eight languages and holds the distinction of obtaining the highest grades ever received as an education major while going to Murray College.

Education Team Works Schools In Catahoula

JONESVILLE (Special) — The Catahoula Parish School Board has secured the services of a special education team from Northeast Louisiana State College, according to A. L. Brooks, superintendent of Catahoula Parish schools.

Team consists of Eris J. Ginn, social worker; Thomas C. Pennel, psychologist; Willis B. Knight, education consultant and special education; Miss Sarah Nell Taylor, educational consultant and reading specialist; and Edward J. Rynes, speech and hearing consultant.

As a result of this work in the parish a "special education class" was organized in the Jonesville elementary school on January 22.

Other work done by this group included a screening program for speech problems for all schools of the parish. Ninety-four children were referred to this team for screening. The team found 65 who would benefit from speech therapy and 23 who would benefit from speech improvement training. With two more months of school the team has not been able to evaluate all the children who have been called to their attention.

As a result of this study the Catahoula parish school board authorized Brooks to employ a speech therapist, Miss Clarice Dans.

Dietetic Group Donates Books To Northeast

Members of the Northeast Area Dietetic Association have donated six past volumes for years 1956 through 1961 of the Journal of the American Dietetic Association to the library of Northeast State Louisiana College.

These volumes will be used by students in many fields including home economics, nursing, business and management and premed. The contain reference material on many phases of dietetics.

For the past three years the Northeast Area Dietetic Association has sent a current volume of Journal of American Dietetic Association to Delfina Bautista Aguillon in Manila, Philippines.

My Answer

By BILLY GRAHAM

QUESTION: I served on a criminal court jury some time ago and voted for the death penalty for a man accused of murder. He was guilty, I am sure, but since his execution I have been conscience-stricken and often dream of this man. I know that God will forgive me if I have done wrong, but it is constantly on my mind. What do you advise? R.B

ANSWER: As citizens we have a responsibility, not only to obey the law but to see that justice is done. If the man was guilty, you did not condemn him — he condemned himself! As to his sentence, the court carried this out in keeping with existing laws. All you did was conscientiously to give a verdict as to his guilt in the light of the evidence brought out in the trial. Actually, you neither condemned nor sentenced him. You simply did your duty as a citizen.

Justice is indeed a delicate business, but suppose all citizens refused to serve jury duty. Fair and just trials would be impossible. We would be overrun with criminals. The greatest deterrent to crime is justice. Even the Bible says of God who is the essence of love, "He will by no means clear the guilty." Legal justice is necessary in a world filled with sin and evil, and though most of us shy from judging our fellow man, the courts of justice must exist to deter crime.

COULD EXTEND SESSION

Main JFK Bills Run Into Logjam

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy's major 1962 legislative proposals have run into a logjam in the Senate Finance Committee which threatens to extend the session for weeks.

Chairman Harry F. Byrd, D-Va., told a reporter Saturday the crush "is the worst I've seen in my 29 years in the Senate. I don't know how we're going to work our way out of it."

In the end, the committee may clear most of the bills including three at the top of the President's list—tax revision, trade expansion and health care for the aged.

But, it it does, the July adjournment target set by House leaders and even the Labor Day closing hoped for in the Senate probably will have to be abandoned.

The committee has developed into the bottleneck because so many of the administration's proposals involve the taxing power, which comes under jurisdiction of this committee, and because all such legislation must originate in the House.

Byrd resisted a personal plea from Kennedy in January that the committee open its public hearings on the tax and trade bills before passage by the House.

Byrd said Saturday he remains convinced he was right.

"If we had held advance hearings we simply would have had to repeat them once we got the House bill," he said. "Witnesses want to testify on a specific bill." Byrd has been swamped with requests from hundreds of prospective witnesses on the tax and trade legislation. He expects another flood of such mail if the House passes a health-care bill.

In addition to this trio of far-reaching measures, another half-will be before the Senate group before Congress adjourns.

The committee now is plowing through its five weeks of public hearings on the bulky tax revision bill.

These are scheduled to end May 3 but Byrd said Secretary of the Treasury Douglas Dillon and possibly some other key witnesses then would be recalled.

After all the testimony is in, Byrd said, he has been advised by staff experts it might take four weeks to complete closed-door consideration and votes on the bill.

This would put it on the Senate floor in June. But Byrd pointed out that the committee also will have to handle three other vital bills that month, all bearing a June 30 deadline—Sugar Act extension, extension of corporation and major excise tax rates, and a further increase in the national debt limit.

In the present thinking of the committee, this means that public hearings on the trade bill probably cannot begin until after July 4, even if the House passes it in May.

Byrd said it is almost certain the trade hearings would run at least as long as those on the tax bill and possibly longer.

The committee already has agreed formally to hold hearings on health-care legislation as soon as the House passes a bill.

Other Kennedy proposals up for action in the committee this year are a House-passed bill revising the public assistance welfare program, which the Senate committee has not yet set for hearings, and an extension of the temporarily lengthened unemployment compensation program.

STOLEN IN CIVIL WAR

Famed Engine Returns South

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — The General returned in triumph Saturday, along the 100-mile route it made famous 100 years ago in defeat in the great locomotive chase.

Happy youngsters of all ages—waving, cheering, and squealing crowded the tracks from Atlanta to Chattanooga to glimpse the antique steam locomotive in action.

The Civil War Centennial run commemorates the famed Andrews raid on April 12, 1862. That was when 22 Union spies stole the engine north of Marietta, Ga., and raced toward Chattanooga with Confederate trainmen pursuing them.

Everyone old enough to walk had a camera to take pictures of the black and red engine restored for the event by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. Many home movie fans drove their cars alongside the moving General, their cameras whirring.

Many of the men were bearded, dressed like their Civil War grandfathers; many of the women and several of the girls wore hoop skirts and gingham over long laced petticoats.

Everyone, dressed for the occasion or not, turned out under a blazing sun, braving a stiff breeze to greet the General and its single yellow passenger car.

At Big Shanty, (Kennesaw) a little blind girl crept up and fingered one of the locomotive's big red drive wheels; at Adairsville, the train was forced to an unscheduled stop by high-stepping high school majorettes dancing on the tracks.

It was Saturday, school was out, businesses were closed and north Georgia was in a festive mood.

Nearly everywhere, high school bands struck up "Dixie" as the General pulled in. Firecrackers were set off at several stops.

Only the cows appeared unmoved by it all. The sight and sound of the General stirred dogs to the chase and caused horses used by mounted patrols, to shy and rear.

At one point near Etowah, the stone piers of the old bridge over which the General passed a hundred years ago, were visible. But a modern superhighway now runs between the present tracks and those originally traveled by the General.

The bright sunshine was in marked contrast to the drizzling rain through which the chase was run in 1862.

Ten, 21 disguised members of the Ohio Volunteer Infantry, led by professional spy James Andrews of Kentucky, conceived the theft of the General as a way to burn the railroad bridges between Chattanooga and Atlanta.

Had they succeeded in isolating Atlanta from its northern supply lines, some experts say the Civil War would have been shortened by three years. But the plan was foiled by William A. Fuller, young conductor for the Georgia-owned Western & Atlantic Railroad.

The spies were rounded up, and eight of them, including Andrews, were hanged. Nineteen of them won the nation's first Medals of Honor for their exploit. Those who were hanged were buried in Chattanooga's Historical National Cemetary around a statue of the General.

The Louisville & Nashville railroad, which leases the General from the State of Georgia, completely reconditioned the venerable woodburner for the run. It converted its fuel from wood to oil—but left it a steam locomotive nonetheless.

Viet Nam Building Frontier Outposts

EDITOR'S NOTE—The dark guerrilla war of South Viet Nam is a cruel struggle fought by tough professionals on both sides. But it takes on a new dimension when an adventurous young American girl wearing her first bullet-proof vest drops from the sky for a refreshing, offbeat look.

KHAM DUC, South Viet Nam (AP)—I thought I was seeing the filming of a cowboys and Indians movie. Below me, as the helicopter circled, was a bit of the old frontier days of the Wild West.

The large wooden fort with gun ports and log cabins were not in Hollywood. They were real. In the deep jungles of South Viet Nam on cleared jungle land only 13 miles from the Laotian border, they protect against an enemy more serious than the Indians—the Communist Viet Cong guerrillas.

The project at Kahm Duc might be called President Ngo Dinh Diem's new frontier. One of about 20 outposts dotting the Laotian border, it involves clearing 3,166 acres of jungle to build a resettlement village—a protected fortress—for Vietnamese and mountaineer tribesmen for miles around.

More than 3,000 villagers will be brought into Kham Duc on its expected completion in May. They will come from isolated jungle areas where the Viet Cong harass them for intelligence information, rice, young men for recruits, women and children for porters and for any available weapons.

Each family is to be given two acres of cleared land on the outskirts of the village—one of the largest resettlement schemes in the country.

I visited the area in a modern-day metal stagecoach — the helicopters used to ferry troops or cargo. The H21 Shawnee, loaded with TNT, flew 50 miles from Da Nang, a large seaport south of the 17th parellel separating North and South Viet Nam. It flew through the passes of mountains covered with jungle, over small riverlets creeping down the crevices and followed a red clay road hugging the hillside contours.

"That's one of the most ambushed roads in the country," the helicopter pilot told me over the earphones.

Bundled in a heavy bullet-proof vest, I sat on the emergency survival kit, a wooden box containing medicine, purified water, food and a long machete.

"That vest doesn't stop the bullets," the pilot said. "It just eases the pain."

The roaring helicopter landed on a small circular area cleared from the maze of hilly jungle. A mile-long airstrip, capable of landing C47s, was nearly finished, but three months more of cutting 100-foot trees and leveling mountain tops remained.

Terraced along the hillsides were log cabins with grass roofs, a shack with a cross on top and an administrative center. On an opposite hillside was the five-sided fort—the pentagon of Kham Duc—built from a row of logs packed with clay two feet thick at the top and five foot thick at the bottom.

"That fort will stop almost any kind of bullet," I was told.

Steel helmets, used as wash-basins, and potted flowers decorated the porches of living quarters. Steps hewn out of hardened clay led to the administrative office of a representative of the province chief. The province chiefs in South Viet Nam are comparable to state governors in the United States.

"Phase I in Kham Duc consists of building a market, school, church, pagoda, medical and social services in the village for military and administrative personnel," the young administrative officer explained to me.

The second phase was to build houses and shops for the Vietnamese and mountaineers, he said.

"Phase III is to pull Vietnamese and mountaineers in from the hills to live in the strategic hamlet, to train them to fight the V.C. so the regular army can eventually withdraw," he said.

Also included in the project are a town hall, water wells and a V.I.P. house — the only white-washed, tile-floored building in the village.

A network of outposts is also planned to dot the surrounding hills. The number of outposts and the entire cost of the project are classified.

Military security is provided by two companies of Vietnamese.

Construction is being done by 400 civilians and a 450-man engineer combat battalion.

President Diem visited the site in 1960 for a simple ceremony. He gave the name of Kham Duc to what had been an old deserted mountaineer village of leveled grass shacks.

Work began in last November but the rainy season slowed progress until the middle of March when the dry season began.

"We'd been completely finished now if it hadn't been for the wet weather," one American lamented. "But we've done more in the last six weeks than we have in the past six months."

Coeds May Set Record At LSU

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Louisiana State University expects a record enrollment next fall of more than 3,700 coeds.

The young women will make up almost one-third of LSU's expected enrollment of 11,500 here.

Dean of Women Helen B. Gordon said housing for them will cause no concern. For the first time in recent years, she said, LSU will be able to accept all women applicants, out-of-state coeds included.

Future Teachers Convention Set

BATON ROUGE (AP) — About 375 student delegates and teachers will attend the annual convention of the Louisiana Future teachers of America organization here April 15-17.

Future teachers clubs are organized at high schools over the state under sponsorship of the Louisiana Teachers' Association and its commission on teacher education and professional standards. The main purpose is to encourage capable boys and girls to consider teaching as a career.

Retired Businessman Lets Rural Electricity Do His Housework

Electrical Appliances Do His Housework

Semi-retired, our Bachelor friend, Cenas Gaines, enjoys his all-electric home on distant Bayou Jack. It affords all the comforts of city life while offering all the joys of outdoor sports and good country living...thanks to the local Electric Cooperative.

He's become an enthusiastic spokesman for home-owned Electric Cooperatives. Why? Because, he's learned they are owned by the rural folks they serve; and, they are helping both town and country progress through their visionary rural area coverage and development programs. This means more jobs, more business, more profits!

He's seen first-hand a remote bayou transformed into a thriving, sporting community with plenty of business for Main Street. And, being a prudent businessman, he's cost-conscious. That's why he puts low-cost rural power to work wherever possible, cooking, washing, heating—the works!

"My electrical housewives do all my work," he laughs.

Like all members of the privately-owned Electric Cooperatives, Mr. Gaines realizes that non-profit Co-ops are still the ONLY way ALL rural people can have electricity at rates ALL can afford.

Town and Country progress is inseparable. That's why it is vitally important to maintain the territorial integrity of the Cooperatives.

STOLEN IN CIVIL WAR

Famed Engine Returns South

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — The General returned in triumph Saturday, along the 100-mile route it made famous 100 years ago in defeat in the great locomotive chase.

Happy youngsters of all ages—waving, cheering, and squealing crowded the tracks from Atlanta to Chattanooga to glimpse the antique steam locomotive in action.

The Civil War Centennial run commemorates the famed Andrews raid on April 12, 1862. That was when 22 Union spies stole the engine north of Marietta, Ga., and raced toward Chattanooga with Confederate trainmen pursuing them.

Everyone old enough to walk had a camera to take pictures of the black and red engine restored for the event by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad. Many home movie fans drove their cars alongside the moving General, their cameras whirring.

Many of the men were bearded, dressed like their Civil War grandfathers; many of the women and several of the girls wore hoop skirts and gingham over long laced petticoats.

Everyone, dressed for the occasion or not, turned out under a blazing sun, braving a stiff breeze to greet the General and its single yellow passenger car.

At Big Shanty, (Kennesaw) a little blind girl crept up and fingered one of the locomotive's big red drive wheels; at Adairsville, the train was forced to an unscheduled stop by high-stepping high school majorettes dancing on the tracks.

It was Saturday, school was out, businesses were closed and north Georgia was in a festive mood.

Nearly everywhere, high school bands struck up "Dixie" as the General pulled in. Firecrackers were set off at several stops.

Only the cows appeared unmoved by it all. The sight and sound of the General stirred dogs to the chase and caused horses used by mounted patrols, to shy and rear.

At one point near Etowah, the stone piers of the old bridge over which the General passed a hundred years ago, were visible. But a modern superhighway now runs between the present tracks and those originally traveled by the General.

The bright sunshine was in marked contrast to the drizzling rain through which the chase was run in 1862.

Ten, 21 disguised members of the Ohio Volunteer Infantry, led by professional spy James Andrews of Kentucky, conceived the theft of the General as a way to burn the railroad bridges between Chattanooga and Atlanta.

Had they succeeded in isolating Atlanta from its northern supply lines, some experts say the Civil War would have been shortened by three years. But the plan was foiled by William A. Fuller, young conductor for the Georgia-owned Western & Atlantic Railroad.

The spies were rounded up, and eight of them, including Andrews, were hanged. Nineteen of them won the nation's first Medals of Honor for their exploit. Those who were hanged were buried in Chattanooga's Historical National Cemetary around a statue of the General.

The Louisville & Nashville railroad, which leases the General from the State of Georgia, completely reconditioned the venerable woodburner for the run. It converted its fuel from wood to oil—but left it a steam locomotive nonetheless.

Coeds May Set Record At LSU

BATON ROUGE (AP)—Louisiana State University expects a record enrollment next fall of more than 3,700 coeds.

The young women will make up almost one-third of LSU's expected enrollment of 11,500 here.

Dean of Women Helen B. Gordon said housing for them will cause no concern. For the first time in recent years, she said, LSU will be able to accept all women applicants, out-of-state coeds included.

Future Teachers Convention Set

BATON ROUGE (AP) — About 375 student delegates and teachers will attend the annual convention of the Louisiana Future teachers of America organization here April 15-17.

Future teachers clubs are organized at high schools over the state under sponsorship of the Louisiana Teachers' Association and its commission on teacher education and professional standards. The main purpose is to encourage capable boys and girls to consider teaching as a career.

A BACHELOR'S WAY OF COOKING SUPPER

Retired Businessman Lets Rural Electricity Do His Housework

Electrical Appliances Do His Housework

Semi-retired, our Bachelor friend, Cenas Gaines, enjoys his all-electric home on distant Bayou Jack. It affords all the comforts of city life while offering all the joys of outdoor sports and good country living...thanks to the local Electric Cooperative.

He's become an enthusiastic spokesman for home-owned Electric Cooperatives. Why? Because, he's learned they are owned by the rural folks they serve; and, they are helping both town and country progress through their visionary rural area coverage and development programs. This means more jobs, more business, more profits!

He's seen first-hand a remote bayou transformed into a thriving, sporting community with plenty of business for Main Street. And, being a prudent businessman, he's cost-conscious. That's why he puts low-cost rural power to work wherever possible, cooking, washing, heating—the works!

"My electrical housewives do all my work," he laughs.

Like all members of the privately-owned Electric Cooperatives, Mr. Gaines realizes that non-profit Co-ops are still the ONLY way ALL rural people can have electricity at rates ALL can afford.

Town and Country progress is inseparable. That's why it is vitally important to maintain the territorial integrity of the Cooperatives.

Arkansas State Rights Officials Resign Posts

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—The state chairman and the secretary-treasurer of the National States Rights party resigned here Friday night amid indications the secregationist political party might fold in Arkansas.

Chairman Pat R. Crawford tendered his resignation, saying party members weren't supporting him. Theodore C. Baldwin, the secretary-treasurer, said he did not like what the party stood for.

Both are from Little Rock.

Following their resignations J. B. Stoner, Atlanta, Ga., attorney for the national party, took over the meeting.

Baldwin condemned what he called the party's national hate campaign directed at Negroes and Jews. He also said he disagreed with the tactics of labeling party opponents as Communists.

Stoner spoke for 1½ hours on topics ranging from a denunciation of the FBI as a Communist-front organization to proposing that Negroes be shipped to Africa.

He referred to the United Nations as the "United Jewish forces against white Christian civilization."

Stoner said he was sent to Arkansas because the national headquarters felt the party was having trouble in the state.

At one point Baldwin and Stoner exchanged heated words when Stoner asked Baldwin if he worked for the FBI.

"The FBI doesn't even know who I am," Baldwin retorted.

The meeting was the first opened to newsmen by the party in Arkansas.

Only 13 persons attended.

STATE GRIDIRON SKITS

Davis' Top Fiscal Officials Targets

BATON ROUGE (AP)—A gridiron audience of more than 850, ers, watched the footlights Saturday night as Gov. Jimmie H. Davis' top fiscal officer got caught in a gambling raid.

Commissioner of Administration James S. Reily, portrayed in a skit, turned around from a dice table to face the audience — his hands, shirt front and pockets stuffed with money — and demanded:

"You got any better idea how to make up this state deficit?"

Later, state Treasurer A. P. Tugwell, hunting emergency money to meet state payrolls, stalked into Gov. Davis' office, grabbed up all the cash in sight, and strode out happily singing, "You Are My Sunshine. . . ."

This was the annual press, radio and television gridiron picture of how money-short state officials struggled to solve state financial difficulties.

At one point, startled tourists visiting the state capitol found only a horse in the governor's office—a talking horse.

At another, Gov. Davis, irked by a television station's report of gambling activities, dramatically ordered state police Supt. Tom Burbank to clamp down the lid —on the TV station!

The real Gov. Davis and his party occupied front tables for the gridiron dinner.

Others among guests included former Govs. Robert Kennon—who once was a gridiron target himself—and Sam Jones, U.S. Sen. Russell B. Long and former Mayor deLesseps Morrison of New Orleans, U.S. Ambassador to the Organization of American States.

The governor—his stage counterpart, that is—went off to Washington for a rocking chair visit with JFK. But neither could concentrate as the first lady bragged how fond of her everyone was in far off, foreign places.

When the President's wife asked Davis whether Louisiana was close to New Orleans, the governor snorted, "Ma'am, Louisiana hasn't been anywhere close to that place for over a year now."

Hard working administration press agents were in a skit, building the Davis public image.

Their bright idea was to promote a Jimmie Davis cocktail—"Louisiana on the rocks."

Searchers Find Body Of Lost Tennessee Boy

KINGSTON, Tenn. (UPI) — Searchers found the body of a 4-year-old boy early Saturday seven hours after he wandered away from home with his dog.

The child, Albert Monger, had fallen into Cave Creek. Charles Cregg and Bill Turpin of Harriman were led to the scene by the howling of the boy's dog.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Payton Monger, said their son walked away from the Monger's farm home shortly before nightfall. Mrs. Monger called him to come back, but he began running and refused to answer.

Coroner Howard Booth said the child drowned in one foot of water in the creek near Cave Creek Church. Booth said he apparently had fallen into the stream about three hours before Turpin and Cregg found his body at 1:15 a.m. EST.

Rescue squads from three counties had joined the search for the boy when he failed to come home for supper.

With the curtain down on last night's "Thurber Carnival," the Northeast State Concerts series closed its 1961-62 season.

This followed close on the heels of the grand finale of the Louisiana Tech series, which took place in Ruston's Howard Auditorium with Tuesday's presentation of the National Ballet of Canada.

There are still some after-season attractions. The Twin City Symphony Orchestra has scheduled a Sunday afternoon concert for the first week in May, and Louisiana Tech is offering a bonus concert on June 19 featuring the first-chair players of flute, oboe, clarinet, bassoon and French Horn from the Houston Symphony. The Tech music faculty will also present three additional musical recitals with one set for 4 p.m. today.

Dr. Harry Lemert of the Fine Arts Division at Northeast has announced that membership enrollment for the local series' 1962-63 season is already open and that any questions or requests for reservations should be directed to his office.

The final opera of the Paramount Theatre's film festival is a full-color; CinemaScope production of Puccini's "Tosca," slated for Thursday of this week.

Attendance at these showings has increased throughout the run of the first three classics, "Madame Butterfly," "La Traviata," and "Faust." Though the filmed versions don't always follow the operatic scores, it cannot be doubted that the grand old stories and tunes make good movies.

BAND SHELL

The recently completed bandstand in Forsythe Park will go into steady use today for a series of school band concerts sponsored by the Monroe Junior Junior Chamber of Commerce.

The concerts in the park will feature bands from throughout the Monroe area. The Neville High School band under the direction of Herbert Gathright will begin the series at 2 p.m. today, according to Jack Murphy, Jaycee project chairman.

The series will continue through July 4th and will be climaxed by a traditional Independence Day celebration. The present schedule lists bands from Neville, Lee Junior High (April 29), Ouachita High School (May 13), Northeast State College (May 20), Thomas Jefferson Junior High (May 27), and Ouachita Parish Junior High (June 17).

LITTLE THEATRE

Friday the Thirteenth proved a wonderful night to open the year's murder mystery, "Speaking of Murder" at Strauss Playhouse. The so-called "whodunnit," which in this case is a "how-I-thought-I'd-do-it," is reviewed elsewhere in today's Morning World.

The Little Theatre of Monroe has grown to the extent that persons leaving the glare of local spotlights to go to larger cities comment on the community's standing in this respect. Dell Moore, whose performances in "Damn Yankees" and "Guys and Dolls" will be recalled by many playgoers, assured us there is nothing like the Monroe setup in the oil capital of Dallas, Texas.

Yet Leon Hammonds, cultural sparkplug of the northeast Louisiana vicinity, said he recalls only several years back that local theatre was limited to a few skits he helped present at noon meetings of civic clubs. Just takes a little time, effort and money to outpoint the big cities in certain matters, that's all.

The adult choir of Grace Episcopal Church will sing a contemporary work on the Passion of Christ at 4 p.m. today. The work is a composition of the contemporary Englishman, Martin Shaw. Along with the music, there will be shown slides of the life of Christ.

Driving Charge Filed By Police

West Monroe police booked 22-year-old Jimmie T. Singleton of West Monroe, for driving while under the influence of intoxicating beverages early Saturday morning.

Singleton, who was apprehended at a service station at 1:05 a.m., was also booked for carrying a concealed weapon and operating a motor vehicle without a valid state driver's license in his possession.

Soviet Shows No Sign Of Changing Stand On Test Ban, Berlin

By PRESTON GROVER

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Khrushchev's answer to President Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan on nuclear tests and his refusal to budge from the Soviet position was viewed by important Western sources Saturday as a rough one.

The tone of the Khrushchev letter depressed Western diplomats, who saw no indication that the Russian has changed his stand in any degree either on the German and Berlin situation, nuclear testing, disarmament or general East - West relations.

In the light of the latest Khrushchev letter to Macmillan and the unchanged position in Berlin and Geneva, one Westerner commented: "He talks peaceful coexistence but acts China."

This was a reference to the Red Chinese demand for a harder line toward the Western powers than Khrushchev's avowed policy of peaceful coexistence.

Westerners have felt Khrushchev has been under considerable pressure for some time at home and abroad to improve his public image and make some progress in solving major problems under his policy of coexistence. In Western eyes, however, the situation is at dead center on all big issues.

Western sources felt certain the letter to Macmillan, which also was given to the U. S. Embassy, was dictated by Khrushchev himself and not merely framed by the Foreign Office for his signature. It thus had greater impact.

Khrushchev refused to reconsider Soviet refusal to accept an international inspection system as a condition for a nuclear test ban treaty, as Macmillan and Kennedy urged him to do. He vowed to match blast for blast, the nuclear tests of the United States if it goes ahead with its mid-Pacific series this month.

He said international inspection was a scheme to carry out unhampered intelligence in the Soviet Union, and urged the Western powers to put us to the test by showing trust in the Soviet Union and signing an unpoliced test ban.

One high Western source said it appeared to him Krushchev felt his public image in the West and among the neutrals had deteriorated and he was trying to improve it.

What caused the deterioration? The observer listed these items:

Attacks by East German soldiers on American and British military cars. The spraying of metal foil in the Berlin air corridors to confuse Allied air traffic.

Adverse reaction of neutrals at the Geneva disarmament conference to the Soviet position on nuclear test verification.

One highly placed Westerner said the whole attitude of the neutrals had changed since they heard Western explanations of the need for verification of any agreement to ban nuclear testing.

Western sources were particularly irritated by Khrushchev's insistence that it was up to the West to establish trust and confidence with Russia.

One source noted that Khrushchev omitted all reference to the series of massive Soviet nuclear tests last fall that broke a three - year moratorium.

"This is unfair and very propagandistic," he added.

Another irritant was Khrushchev's suggestion that the people in Western nations call to power parties which will really reflect the interests of the people. To some Westerners this seemed almost like a call for insurrection.

The Khrushchev letter was published here along with the Macmilan letter to which he replied. But the orginal joint Macmillan-Kennedy statement never has been published here, though it has frequently been referred to in critical comment.

Khrushchev's letter apparently was addressed to Macmillan because he alone wrote emphasizing that trust must be established before real progress could be made in settling major problems.

For people who always knew there must be a medical reason why "everything they eat seems to turn to fat"... here's news of a revolutionary new bio-chemical concept of weight control, developed by doctors!

The CDC Plan

First weight-reducing plan promising three satisfying meals a day

"Don't count calories," says this new concept. This is not a crash diet. Not a "starvation" diet. The CDC plan, developed by a well-known doctor, reported in an important medical journal, urges you to eat plenty of roasts, steaks, chops, fried chicken, fried potatoes, bacon, ham, avocados and other heretofore "forbidden foods." No need to be hungry. No haggard dieter's look. You'll feel better. Best of all, this doctor reports that you can expect to rid your body of stubborn deposits of excess fat.

Now, from a pioneering group of courageous doctors, comes a radical new bio-chemical concept of weight control that challenges previous thinking about the cause and management of overweight and obesity. True, there are differences of medical opinion about a method of weight-control as radically new as this. But a well-known doctor has achieved dramatic success using this plan with hundreds of patients for a period of years.

It is now possible according to these doctors to pinpoint the real reason why so many people get fat on the same kinds and amounts of food that keep the lucky few slim; and why crash diets and other low-calorie starvation diets so seldom work permanently.

Your body may not be able to handle carbohydrates

Contrary to popular belief, these dissident doctors maintain it is not so much a matter of lack of will-power, or "gluttony" as some obesity experts are fond of saying. It's a matter of body chemistry. These doctors say it's the way your body handles carbohydrates (sugars and starches) that determines whether or not you get fat.

That is why the CDC plan, unlike some low-calorie diets, drastically reduces your intake of carbohydrates.

The more fat you eat, the more fat you lose!

Based upon clinical observations, these doctors maintain that most low-calorie diets do not supply sufficient fats which, in their opinion, are essential for your body to burn up its excess fat. In fact, a well-known doctor advocates that to get rid of excess fat, you must eat three full meals each day, and you must consume more fats of a very special kind. These are the polyunsaturated fats.

Impressive medical evidence

An impressive body of medical evidence now points the way to this new bio-chemical concept of weight control. And the new CDC plan calls for the foods you eat to enable your body to melt down, burn up, take off excess body fat. You can keep it off, too. because the CDC weight control program is so satisfying and easy to stay on.

Polyunsaturated fats essential

The cornerstone of the new CDC plan is a radical new diet pattern that calls for plenty of fats, preferably polyunsaturated fats. You don't count calories. You eat three big meals each day, and satisfy your appetite completely with more good solid foods than you may have eaten in years.

And because it is sometimes difficult for people unaccustomed to large amounts of fats in the diet to take in each day the quantities of fats called for, the CDC plan also provides you with polyunsaturated fats in convenient capsule form to supplement your meals. These capsules are orange and white. (Caution: to make sure you have the same capsules used by this well-known doctor in his work on this new concept of dietary management of obesity, be sure you get the genuine CDC capsules with the distinctive orange and white jackets.)

The combination of CDC capsules and the CDC weight control is designed to help you lose excess fat wherever you have it—buttocks, abdomen, neck, upper arms, thighs, etc. —without looking haggard and hungry

No need to starve yourself, no need to feel hungry

Under the CDC plan you eat steaks, roasts, chops, fried potatoes, avocados, cheese, ham, bacon, sausage, salads with rich dressing and choose vegetables from a long list low in carbohydrates. You eat three full meals a' day. And you don't count calories!

The only foods forbidden to you are the high carbohydrates such as bread, cake, pies, crackers, rolls, doughnuts, sweets, and some fruits and vegetables with high carbohydrate content. You'll soon find you don't have the cravings that go with so many diets because the many good foods you must eat as part of the CDC plan are so satisfying.

What you get in the CDC plan

With your CDC plan you get everything you need to start at once on this new happier way of life. In addition to the original orange and white CDC capsules, you get "The CDC Plan," a booklet complete with food charts and a doctor's easy-to-understand explanation of the foods to eat and the foods to shun.

Steady loss of fat

You should know this important fact. The CDC plan doesn't promise to make you slim overnight, but the pioneering doctor responsible for this new concept of weight control has reported a pattern of definite, steady loss of overweight patients. That is why we have introduced the CDC plan to the general public, so many thousands of overweight people can now try for themselves this exciting new concept of weight control.

Ask your Doctor

We suggest you show this page to your doctor and ask him what he thinks about the CDC plan for you. Whether you're only a little overweight, or weigh many pounds too much, we believe (unless you are one of the only 5% of all obese people with glandular imbalance) he'll give you his blessing and urge you to get started without delay. Today!

'Calamity' Goes Through Period Of Tribulation

FERRIDAY (Special) — Sometimes the life of a youngster can grow mighty hazardous. With an assist from World correspondent Elizabeth Bamburg, Freddie Boyekin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Boyekin, gives an illustration:

"I am Freddie 'Calamity' Boyekin. My troubles started when my big brother Keith promised me a ride on his motor ped — if he could start it. Whoom! It ran smack over me!

"Mama said my arm was broken. She ran back in the house for the car keys so we could go to the doctor. About that time my big brother Wren fed the dogs and went to put the bowl back in the kitchen — you've never heard such a dog fight.

"When I tried to stop them, Ol' Trigger bit my broken arm all up. Daddy drove in from work and gave me the quarter just as we started down the road. I stopped crying and Lake St. John looked pretty again.

"It was the little bitty tear on the end of my nose that made me swallow my quarter.

"Mama has lots of boys — grown boys — and she says with the help of the Good Lord, I'll out-grow being five years old."

N.O. Catholic Schools Finish Student Signup

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Registration of new and transfer students in New Orleans archdiocese Roman Catholic schools ended Saturday, but there were no figures to indicate how many Negro children registered in previously all-white schools.

The schools will be desegregated next fall under an edict by Archbishop Joseph Francis Rummel. The two-day registration period began Friday.

Catholic spokesmen said it probably would be some time next week before figure were available on the registrations. However, they expected the number of pupils to equal this year's registration of 50, 174 white pupils and 10,851 Negroes.

The archbishop's order affects all 116 elementary and 37 high schools in the archdiocese which covers nine civil parishes and part of a 10th.

U.S., Britain To Stand On Test Policy

GENEVA (AP) — The United States and Britain seemed confident Saturday they will withstand new assaults on their nuclear policy, which they expect will develop inside and outside the 17-nation general disarmament conference in the next few days.

Western sources noted the Americans and British have come through a stormy week of diplomatic pressures with their unity unshaken and their basic position intact.

As the deadline for new American atmospheric tests draws closer the tensions probably will increase rather than diminish.

The Japanese government, for example, has made yet another protest against American plans to explode nuclear devices in the central Pacific in the vicinities of Christmas and Johnston Island late this month.

The eight middle group nations in the disarmament conference—Brazil, Burma, Ethiopia, India, Mexico, Nigeria, Sweden and the United Arab Republic—also are readying a compromise in an effort to bridge differences between the Russians and the Americans and British on test ban controls. Their plan may come before the conference Monday.

The eight in the middle are playing their own hand. They have avoided being put in the position of fighting Moscow's battle on the testing issue.

U. S. Ambassador Arthur H. Dean and British Minister of State Joseph B. Godber thus far have kept a tight grip on this basic position:

The United States, with Britain's backing, intends to go ahead with its series of atmospheric tests unless Moscow accepts an internationally enforced test ban — something Soviet Premier Khrushchev said again last week that he will not do.

He threatened to touch off new explosions of his own if the Americans test.

The Russians tried to get an unpoliced moratorium on further tests. When this was firmly rejected by Dean and Godber, the Russians sought to make it appear that the American and British governments were defying world opinion.

'Calamity' Goes Through Period Of Tribulation

FERRIDAY (Special) — Sometimes the life of a youngster can grow mighty hazardous. With an assist from World correspondent Elizabeth Bamburg, Freddie Boyekin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Boyekin, gives an illustration:

"I am Freddie 'Calamity' Boyekin. My troubles started when my big brother Keith promised me a ride on his motor ped — if he could start it. Whoom! It ran smack over me!

"Mama said my arm was broken. She ran back in the house for the car keys so we could go to the doctor. About that time my big brother Wren fed the dogs and went to put the bowl back in the kitchen — you've never heard such a dog fight.

"When I tried to stop them, Ol' Trigger bit my broken arm all up. Daddy drove in from work and gave me the quarter just as we started down the road. I stopped crying and Lake St. John looked pretty again.

"It was the little bitty tear on the end of my nose that made me swallow my quarter.

"Mama has lots of boys — grown boys — and she says with the help of the Good Lord, I'll out-grow being five years old."

Harrisonburg Girl Performs As Audubon

HARRISONBURG (Special) — Miss Ann Reeves, 17-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Reeves Jr., of Harrisonburg, performed the coveted role of "Audubon, The Dancing Master," in The Confederate Pageant of the 30th annual Natchez (Miss.) Pilgrimage.

It is the desire of many dancing students to get the role of Audubon in the annual affair which attracts tourists from every state in the union to the "Tableaux of the Days of Long Ago". Ann realized her "heart's ambition" this year and got the part of the famous "dancing master."

In the early part of the 19th century, John James Audubon made some of his finest bird studies in Natchez. During a lengthy sojourn there he taught at Jefferson college and also gave painting and dancing lessons to the young people of the plantation neighborhood.

The "Dancing Master instructed his pupils in the popular dances of the period, the waltz, the Gavotte, the Minuet, and aesthetic dances.

Here (in this last role played by Miss Reeves) he appeared with his class — carefully chosen young people of Southern families of affluence and distinction.

The tableaux was created by Mrs. Martha Hootsell. Participants are pupils of her dancing school. The performances were conducted for 17 nights during the month of March. During the nightly performances, Ann portrayed the famous John James Audubon, who spent many months in Natchez and for whom many parks have been named, entertained "pilgrims" from all parts of the country.

Ann, a junior at Harrisonburg High School, says that she is interested in the foreign diplomatic service of the United States and expects to attend Newcomb college, New Orleans, after graduation. Her favorite subjects are home economics and history, and of course, her favorite hobby is dancing.

She has been active in her school work and student council and other school activities. She, along with Miss Tommie McMillin, attended the Southern Association of Student Council Convention held in New Orleans.

ANN REEVES performed in the role of Audubon in "Audubon, The Dancing Master" in the Confederate Pageant at Natchez. She is junior at Harrisonburg High School.

AIR SAFETY DEVICE

Soft, Sexy Voices Alert Pilots Fast

By ROBERT J. SERLING

WASHINGTON (UPI) — So there you are, an airline captain cruising along in a DC8 at 25,000 feet when a soft, sexy feminine voice murmurs:

"Your pressure ratio's dropping in number four engine."

Don't laugh, because malfunction warnings issued in soft, sexy feminine voices may be the next step in air safety.

The Air Force is using such a system on its B58 bombers, the theory being that any red-blooded American pilot will perk up his ears faster if he hears a woman's voice in the usually all-male flight deck.

The device, developed by Northrop Corp. of Beverly Hills, Calif., consists of an eight-pound package of electronically-controlled tape messages recorded by a real, life woman. The tape is hooked to various major aircraft components and covers 50 different emergency situations.

The Air Force tested the woman-powered warning system against conventional red light emergency signals. It found that pilots averaged 12 seconds reacting to the lights and sometimes took as long as a half hour to notice them. But with the voice interruption priority system (known as VIPS), pilot reactions averaged only three seconds. Red blooded pilots, that is.

Airliner pilots interviewed by UPI on the possibility of VIPS for commercial transports were a bit dubious, even though they insisted their blood is as red as the next guy's.

"It may be fine for a B58," one commented, "But a B58 moves at 1,300 miles an hour and I don't think we need any faster malfunction warnings on a 600-mile-an-hour airliner than we already have."

Another said the idea was theoretically fine but could lead to ridiculous extremes.

"Next thing you know, the stewardesses will want their own warnings recorded by Rock Hudson," he predicted.

It found that pilots averaged 12 seconds reacting to the lights and sometimes took as long as a half hour to notice them. But with the voice interruption priority system (known as VIPS), pilot reactions averaged only three seconds. Red blooded pilots, that is.

Airliner pilots interviewed by UPI on the possibility of VIPS for commercial transports were a bit dubious, even though they insisted their blood is as red as the next guy's.

"It may be fine for a B58," one commented, "But a B58 moves at 1,300 miles an hour and I don't think we need any faster malfunction warnings on a 600-mile-an-hour airliner than we already have."

Another said the idea was theoretically fine but could lead to ridiculous extremes.

"Next thing you know, the stewardesses will want their own warnings recorded by Rock Hudson," he predicted.

Rockefeller Skips Race In Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI)—Winthrop Rockefeller, younger brother of New York's Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, told the people of Arkansas Saturday he will not try this year to become their first Republican governor since Reconstruction days.

In a 10-minute talk over seven television stations, the 49-year-old gentleman farmer said he had decided after much soul-searching not to become a candidate. He said the decision was in the best interests "of the long-range prospects of the Republican party in Arkansas."

He told newsmen he reached his decision without consulting his brother.

"I have not had direct discussion with my brother about my plans," Rockefeller said. "He's got enough troubles of his own."

Rockefeller, considered the strongest threat the GOP ever posed to the state's entrenched Democratic party, bowed out with a prediction that Gov. Orval Faubus will run for a fifth term despite his recent announcement to the contrary.

The transplanted New Yorker said he would pledge his efforts to eradicating the present one-party system in Arkansas which he said has made "the theme of voting in our state a theme of fear."

"Every one of you should be able to go to the polling place with your head held high because you know you are casting a secret balot," Rockefeller said.

"That isn't the way things are done now. But mark my words, the time is coming, and coming soon, when the blanket of fear will be lifted."

Asked to clarify this statement, Rockefeller said a "seasoned politician" told him this week that if he ran, 80,000 votes could have been stolen from him without difficulty. He called this "traditional."

BUYING OF FAMILIES

Nearly Half Use Installment Credit

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — While almost half the country's households continue to use installment credit, the University of Michigan Survey Research Center says there are no indications the burden of installment debt has become greater over the last five years.

The center said that the most significant recent change found in a nationwide survey of 7,000 families was an incrase in the number of persons with incomes of more than $10,000 buying on the installment plan.

The survey, made in January and February, of 1961, showed that 48 per cent of families with incomes of more than $10,000 owed installment debts, compared with only 38 per cent in 1959.

In a newly published book, "1961 Survey of Consumer Finances," the center added, "In previous years it has been repeatedly observed that installment buying is a middle-income phenomenon. It was most frequent a few years ago among spending units with incomes between $3,000 and $7,500 a year, and much less frequent among units with lower or higher incomes.

"Early in 1961, 11.5 per cent of all spending units were receiving annual incomes of over $10,000, as were 8.5 per cent early in 1959 and less than 6 per cent early in 1955.

"Many families have advanced into this income group in the last few years, and it appears that they have carried over their previous habit of using installment credit into their new income position. As a result of this process, some improvement in the ability of the average debtor to carry his debt burden is probable."

Installment buying is most prevalent in the 25-to-34 age bracket, in which 65 per cent have installment debts averaging $680. Next biggest installment buying group is in the 18-to-24 bracket, in which 61 per cent owe an average $450.

In the 65-and-over age bracket only 14 per cent had installment debt and the average was only $200.

Installment buying, the survey developed, varies by regions.

"It occurs most frequently in the West, which has a growing young population, and as frequently, but not in such large amounts, in the South with its substantial Negro population. Installment debt is least frequent in the Northern Atlantic states."

This finding of the survey also may surprise some: "Families living in the 12 largest cities of the country purchase goods on the installment plan less frequently than other families."

It points out this, however, may be related to the fact that installment buying is less frequent in the Northeast, where many of the largest cities are located.

Installment debt was found slightly more frequent among Negores than whites, but large debt more frequent among whites.

Only 10 per cent of the families surveyed were found to have installment debts amounting to as much as 20 per cent or more of their annual income.

Turning to automobiles, furniture, appliances and house repairs, the center reported that its 1961 survey showed that Americans are spending 2.0 per cent of their income on household durables, 5 per cent on automobiles, and 3.2 per cent on additions and repairs to houses.

Automobile and household durable expenditures were down slightly from the previous year; additions and repairs the same.

And, it added, over 60 per cent of new automobile purchases were being made on credit.

MOST SACRED PERIOD

Christians Begin Holy Week Today

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Holy Week, the most sacred period of the year for Christians, begins Sunday with the celebration of Palm Sunday.

Palm Sunday derives its name from the palm branches which welcoming throngs of Jews strewed in the path of Jesus as He rode into Jerusalem on a donkey's back to begin the climactic week of teaching which culminated in His Crucifixion.

Each day of Holy Week is associated with a particular event. Monday is the day on which Jesus mortally offended powerful interests by driving the moneychangers out of the temple. On Tuesday He returned to the temple for a final — and futile — attempt to explain His mission to the ecclesiastical authorities. Wednesday is the day of betrayal, when Judas Iscariot accepted 30 pieces of silver as his price for revealing where Jesus could be secretly arrested the following night.

Thurday commemorates Jesus' Last Supper with His disciples in the upper room of a suburban home. Because of the mandates which He issued to his disciples on this occasion (including the commandment that they love one another), the day was known to the medieval English as "Mandate Thursday" or, as the word was corrupted in popular usage, "Maundy Thursday."

Friday is the day on which Jesus was put to death by Roman soldiers on a hill outside Jerusalem. It once was called "Black Friday" because of the mourning colors which are used in churches on this day. But centuries ago, the name "Good Friday" was substituted, to emphasize the good which flowed to mankind from Christ's redemptive sacrifice.

Saturday is the day when Jesus lay in the tomb. It is a traditional time for baptisms in some churches.

Holy Week ends on Easter Sunday, when Christian churches around the world resound with a proclamation which has lost none of its joy since two awestruck women first rushed away from an empty tomb with the news:

"He Is Risen!"

The Jewish festival of the Passover, which commemorates the delivery of the children of Israel from slavery in Egypt, begins at sundown on Wednesday, April 18.

The week-long festival opens with a ceremonial meal called the Seder, at which the story of the Exodus is read from a special book of prayers called the Haggadah. The Seder is traditionally a family observance, conducted at home.

Ancient custom prescribes many colorful details of the Passover feast, including use of symbolic foods such as bitter herbs (recalling the bitterness of a slave's life in Egypt) and unleavened "matzoh" bread (which recalls that that the Israelits had to flee Egypt in haste, without time for properly baking their bread.)

Russia's 2,000,000 Jews will have to celebrate the Passover without unleavened bread. The Communist regime has refused to let government-operated bakeries produce the ritual food this year. B'nai B'rith, U.S. Jewish fraternal organization, offered to airlift a supply of American matzoh bread to Russia, but Jewish leaders in Moscow declined the offer lest it provoke even more severe Communist persecution of Jews.

Eleven Protestant denominations are making a concerted effort through the National Council of Churches to raise ministers' salaries. It is essentially an educational campaign, which seeks to acquaint local congregations with the fact that the typical clergyman must try to support his family on an income which is at least $1,000 a year below that of the average American family.

Rockefeller Skips Race In Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (UPI)—Winthrop Rockefeller, younger brother of New York's Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, told the people of Arkansas Saturday he will not try this year to become their first Republican governor since Reconstruction days.

In a 10-minute talk over seven television stations, the 49-year-old gentleman farmer said he had decided after much soul-searching not to become a candidate. He said the decision was in the best interests "of the long-range prospects of the Republican party in Arkansas."

He told newsmen he reached his decision without consulting his brother.

"I have not had direct discussion with my brother about my plans," Rockefeller said. "He's got enough troubles of his own."

Rockefeller, considered the strongest threat the GOP ever posed to the state's entrenched Democratic party, bowed out with a prediction that Gov. Orval Faubus will run for a fifth term despite his recent announcement to the contrary.

The transplanted New Yorker said he would pledge his efforts to eradicating the present one-party system in Arkansas which he said has made "the theme of voting in our state a theme of fear."

"Every one of you should be able to go to the polling place with your head held high because you know you are casting a secret balot," Rockfeller said.

"That isn't the way things are done now. But mark my words, the time is coming, and coming soon, when the blanket of fear will be lifted."

Asked to clarify this statement, Rockefeller said a "seasoned politician" told him this week that if he ran, 50,000 votes could have been stolen from him without difficulty. He called this "traditional."

BUYING OF FAMILIES

Nearly Half Use Installment Credit

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — While almost half the country's households continue to use installment credit, the University of Michigan Survey Research Center says there are no indications the burden of installment debt has become greater over the last five years.

The center said that the most significant recent change found in a nationwide survey of 7,000 families was an incrase in the number of persons with incomes of more than $10,000 buying on the installment plan.

The survey, made in January and February, of 1961, showed that 48 per cent of families with incomes of more than $10,000 owed installment debts, compared with only 38 per cent in 1959.

In a newly published book, "1961 Survey of Consumer Finances," the center added, "In previous years it has been repeatedly observed that installment buying is a middle-income phenomenon. It was most frequent a few years ago among spending units with incomes between $3,000 and $7,500 a year, and much less frequent among units with lower or higher incomes.

"Early in 1961, 11.5 per cent of all spending units were receiving annual incomes of over $10,000, as were 8.5 per cent early in 1959 and less than 6 per cent early in 1955.

"Many families have advanced into this income group in the last few years, and it appears that they have carried over their previous habit of using installment credit into their new income position. As a result of this process, some improvement in the ability of the average debtor to carry his debt burden is probable."

Installment buying is most prevalent in the 25-to-34 age bracket, in which 65 per cent have installment debts averaging $680. Next biggest installment buying group is in the 18-to-24 bracket, in which 61 per cent owe an average $450.

In the 65-and-over age bracket only 14 per cent had installment debt and the average was only $200.

Installment buying, the survey developed, varies by regions.

"It occurs most frequently in the West, which has a growing young population, and as frequently, but not in such large amounts, in the South with its substantial Negro population. Installment debt is least frequent in the Northern Atlantic states."

This finding of the survey also may surprise some: "Families living in the 12 largest cities of the country purchase goods on the installment plan less frequently than other families."

It points out this, however, may be related to the fact that installment buying is less frequent in the Northeast, where many of the largest cities are located.

Installment debt was found slightly more frequent among Negores than whites, but large debt more frequent among whites.

Only 10 per cent of the families surveyed were found to have installment debts amounting to as much as 20 per cent or more of their annual income.

Turning to automobiles, furniture, appliances and house repairs, the center reported that its 1961 survey showed that Americans are spending 2.6 per cent of their income on household durables, 5 per cent on automobiles, and 3.2 per cent on additions and repairs to houses.

Automobile and household durable expenditures were down slightly from the previous year; additions and repairs the same.

And, it added, over 60 per cent of new automobile purchases were being made on credit.

MOST SACRED PERIOD

Christians Begin Holy Week Today

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Holy Week, the most sacred period of the year for Christians, begins Sunday with the celebration of Palm Sunday.

Palm Sunday derives its name from the palm branches which welcoming throngs of Jews strewed in the path of Jesus as He rode into Jerusalem on a donkey's back to begin the climactic week of teaching which culminated in His Crucifixion.

Each day of Holy Week is associated with a particular event. Monday is the day on which Jesus mortally offended powerful interests by driving the money-changers out of the temple. On Tuesday He returned to the temple for a final — and futile — attempt to explain His mission to the ecclesiastical authorities. Wednesday is the day of betrayal, when Judas Iscariot accepted 30 pieces of silver as his price for revealing where Jesus could be secretly arrested the following night.

Thursday commemorates Jesus' Last Supper with His disciples in the upper room of a suburban home. Because of the mandates which He issued to his disciples on this occasion (including the commandment that they love one another), the day was known to the medieval English as "Mandate Thursday" or, as the word was corrupted in popular usage, "Maundy Thursday."

Friday is the day on which Jesus was put to death by Roman soldiers on a hill outside Jerusalem. It once was called "Black Friday" because of the mourning colors which are used in churches on this day. But centuries ago, the name "Good Friday" was substituted, to emphasize the good which flowed to mankind from Christ's redemptive sacrifice.

Saturday is the day when Jesus lay in the tomb. It is a traditional time for baptisms in some churches.

Holy Week ends on Easter Sunday, when Christian churches around the world resound with a proclamation which has lost none of its joy since two awe-struck women first rushed away from an empty tomb with the news:

"He Is Risen!"

The Jewish festival of the Passover, which commemorates the delivery of the children of Israel from slavery in Egypt, begins at sundown on Wednesday, April 18.

Russia's 2,500,000 Jews will have to celebrate the Passover without unleavened bread. The Communist regime has refused to let government-operated bakeries produce the ritual food this year. B'nai B'rith, U.S. Jewish fraternal organization, offered to airlift a supply of American matzoh bread to Russia, but Jewish leaders in Moscow declined the offer lest it provoke even more severe Communist persecution of Jews.

It is essentially an educational campaign, which seeks to acquaint local congregations with the fact that the typical clergyman must try to support his family on an income which is at least $1,000 a year below that of the average American family.

'Horses With 'Cow Sense' Gain Favor

By FRANK NOONAN

Horses are returning triumphantly to area farms.

Endowed with showmanship and "cow sense," they are gaining acceptance, but not as plow animals.

As beasts of burden they were edged off of many farms several years ago by tractors and other agricultural machines. Their popularity dropped drastically.

FEATURED

Now, at special gatherings at Delhi, Winnsboro, Monroe, and in other sections of northeast Louisiana, they are featured performers.

One of the most fascinating and action-packed roles in which they are cast is that of cutting, separating cattle from a herd.

Creaking leather, flying dust, a pivoting, darting horse and a beleaguered steer, are the sounds and sights in this display of equine skill. It may be in sport or in performance of a necessary farm chore.

While a cutting horse may be of any breed, most of those in the area are registered Quarter Horses. The Quarter Horse, with an ancestory running back to Colonial days in Virginia, is master of short bursts of speed.

FAST QUARTER

The name comes from its ability to run a very fast quarter mile. This power on the short thrust makes the Quarter Horse a nautural at cutting animals from a herd.

Some people say that the shifting emphasis from a farm economy based primarily on cotton, to more diversified agriculture, including an increase in beef cattle, is responsible for the increasing popularity of cutting horses. They serve a practical purpose in handling cattle.

There are others who maintain that their acceptance in the realm of sports and recreation is the reason for their gaining popularity.

SPECIALIST'S VIEW

Lee Berwick, Quarter Horse breeder and cattleman living near St. Joseph, who started Louisiana State University's Quarter Horse breeding program in 1946, has this viewpoint:

"The Quarter Horse has increased in the last few years because it is being used for so many purposes. It is versatile. It has broken into the field of recreation. It is used in halter shows, and for racing, reining, cutting, and other purposes. Its popularity is two-fold, for its use on the farm, and for recreation. That is what expanded the market."

After starting the Quarter Horse program at LSU, Berwick stayed there as assistant professor in charge of the horse breeding program, livestock judging coach and taught general livestock production until 1950.

He now has about 90 head of registered Quarter Horses, and for the first time is planning to start training cutting horses, "Since there is a natural interest in this all over the country and it adds value to the horses."

Berwick said it is easier to sell a horse that has been trained for cutting, "and Quarter Horses are definitely the best fur cutting and for several other purposes."

A trip to Pinetucky Farm in the pine tree studded hill section of Ouachita Parish, owned by Ernest and Mildred Marchman, will give an insight into what makes a cutting horse tick.

TRAINING SESSIONS

There, David Marchman, son of the owners, and Charles "Hook" Robinson, trainer, conduct regular training sessions for cutting horses. Five of the Marchmans' registered Quarter Horses, including four-year-old Stallion, Buck's Saltillo, and three horses from other herds were in training recently.

The Marchmans have about 35 registered Quarter Horses and five registered Appaloosas, and plan to train all of them in the art of cutting.

Trainer Robinson said that the cutting horse originated in the southwest. A basic text and reference on the American Quarter Horse, quotes a cutting horse authority as describing the development of the animal in this way:

"The great southwest was built on sweat, hide and intestinal fortitude, and from its soil, the cutting horse was born — born of necessity."

The reference book described the "necessity as the cattle industry, where the cutting horse became a 'tool' of high economic value." It stated further, "There is no expedient for the cutting horse. There is no accurate and time-saving machine or method that can separate one animal from a herd and keep it at bay or on deposit."

TEXAS INFLUENCE

Trainer Robinson said the popularity of cutting horses in recent years was spurred from Texas, where "In herding up cattle, riders would separate the mammas and the calves. The horse would cut out the animals. And this finally was done for sport."

One example of the popularity of the sport can be seen generally on the first Sunday of every month when the Northeast Louisiana Cutting Horse Association holds a show at Delhi or on the farm of a member near Winnsboro, or some other section of the district.

John H. Parks of Delhi, vice president of the association, said most of the 50 members have little outdoor arenas on their farms, and in good weather "They drag up some flat-bedded cotton trailers, put hay on them and the people sit on them. Most of the time we have from 300 to 500 people present, depending on weather conditions."

During the winter months the show is held in the judging arena at the district livestock show barn in Delhi to provide shelter. In the spring when weather is favorable, the shows are held on various farms around the district. From 25 to 50 animals are generally entered in the competition.

At the end of the year, awards are given on the basis of animals with highest points in the four classes, which include novice, for beginning horse and rider; Class A for little more advanced horse and rider; Class AA for more highly advanced horse and rider, and open cutting class which usually draws more advanced horses and riders but is open to anyone.

The awards are gold engraved belt buckles.

'COW SENSE'

One of the essential qualifications of a cutting horse is "cow sense," which said Trainer Robinson of Pinetucky Farm, "is bred into horses, just like a bird dog starts out with natural instinct. The cutting horse comes from the line of cattle horses."

Robinson explained how training is carried on:

"We start a young horse in the pasture. Then we pick out a cow and draw his attention to it. We make the horse watch the cow. Then after it becomes accustomed to paying attention to cattle we bring it into the arena and work it out more.

"I like to break in a horse when it is two years old or older. I ride the horse and get a pretty good handle on him. Then I train him for cutting. There's a lot of reining and handling involved.

"It doesn't take long for horses to catch on and until they will do well without reining. Sometimes after two weeks the horse will do the cutting routine without reining."

DEVELOPMENT

Some horses are considered finished cutting animals after four years training, and others gain skill and experience more rapidly.

Said David Marchman, "It takes about two years to train a cutting horse real well. In cutting, the horse moves into the herd where you spot the animal you want and train his attention on it. The horse does the rest."

The training is strenuous, not only on horses, but on trainers and cattle.

"We can wear out 10 head of cattle a week working with eight horses," said "Hook" Robinson.

"Once you center the horse's attention on the cow, it takes over until reined off or touched on the neck. During the cutting performance after the animal has been spotted, the action is strictly that of the horse. The rider just rides and lets the horse do the work on his own."

Nutritional needs of horses in training on the Marchman farm are well supplied.

HIGHER PROTEIN

"We feed a higher protein feed to horses being used for cutting purposes," said Robinson. "We feed two protein and vitamin supplements in addition to regular feed."

"In cutting contests," said Robinson, "horses are judged on the way they go into the herd quietly and bring out the cow without disturbing the rest of the herd. Then when they get the cow out they are judged on the way they handle it, the way they set it up, block, and work on their own."

A good cutting horse seems to anticipate many of the moves of the steer or calf being separated from the herd. The horse moves swiftly to block each move of the animal toward the herd and works with such intense interest that even a casual spectator is apt to become an admirer of the performer.

Where the cutting is being done for the purpose of moving an animal from a herd to be corralled or caught, the horse continues to hold it at bay until it is roped or guided into a pen.

In show competition the action lasts two and one-half minutes.

Cutting horses in training at Pinetucky farm have workout sessions about three times a week, but are ridden every day to keep them in shape.

ASSOCIATIONS

The American Quarter Horse Association was launched in Texas in 1940. The National Cutting Horse Association was formed in 1946.

Since the founding of these two organizations, state, regional and local affilated associations have been formed around the nation.

There are Louisiana Quarter Horse Association, North Louisiana Quarter Horse Association, Ouachita Valley Quarter Horse Association, to name a few.

The Northeast Louisiana Cutting Horse Association has a membership spreading well over the district and into Arkansas and Mississippi.

In addition to Vice President Parks, other officials include president, John Brown McIntosh, Darnel!; and directors, D. O. Baker, LeLand, Miss.; Clifford Benson, Monroe; W. W. Turner, Ferriday; Albert Paxton, Tallulah and Vicksburg, Miss.; D. D. Shuller, Eudora, Ark., and Jack Brown, Lake Providence.

The Cutting Horse Association's monthly show was held last Sunday on the Quarter Horse and Hereford cattle farm operated by Ralph King Jr. and his father, Dr. Ralph King, at Winnsboro.

They have a number of registered Quarter Horses and also train cutting horses. The trainer is Carroll Williamson.

The association's next show is scheduled for Pinetucky Farm, on the first Sunday in May. Attendance is open to the public.

CATTLE HERD

Parks, who has a commerical beef herd five miles north of Delhi, has 10 Quarter Horses. He uses two for cutting, has a two-year-old mare that he shows at halter, and a gleding that won several grand championships in halter competition.

"There's somebody stopping by my place all the time to look at the horses," Parks explained. "I'm not a breeder. It's a hobby with me."

Parks has been superintendent of the Quarter Horse show at the Northeast Louisiana District Livestock Show at Delhi for the past three years. He started with Quarter Horses in 1943, and has seen a steady growth in interest and numbers of animals.

He said that of more than 4,400 Quarter Horses registered in the state "a fourth or better are in Northeast Louisiana."

"Most of the people with registered Quarter Horses have a $2,000 trailer besides," he said. A Quarter Horse sells from $1,500 to $25,000. It's quite an investment. Most of the people who have them are not trying to get their investment back. They use two or three for work purposes and the rest as a hobby."

Some Quarter Horses sell for prices ranging well above the $25,000 mark, some breeders report.

RAPID SPIRAL

Berwick recalled the rapid spiral of interest in Quarter Horses following the opening of the breeding program at Louisiana State University. He was instrumental in helping start several of the horse shows in the state. The first spring Quarter Horse show at LSU was started in 1948. Now LSU has spring and fall National Quarter Horse Shows.

There were 455 entries in the last fall National Quarter Horse Show there.

Said Berwick, "It ranks as one of the top two or three Quarter Horse Shows in the nation. We've made a lot of strides in Louisiana with horses. The horse won't fade out now."

Berwick added, "There is a National Cutting Horse Association, and there are various riding clubs, American Quarter Horse Association, and a lot of urban people are interested in horses."

The St. Joseph breeder is building an indoor arena for training cutting horses, and hired Lee Young as trainer. Young has worked with Matlock Rose, an outstanding cutting horse and Quarter Horse trainer and manager of G. B. Howell Ranch at Seagoville, Texas, near Dallas.

CLUB PROJECTS

Interest in horses has spread to 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America members in the state. Berwick said members started with 25 horses in 1958, and now there are 2,173 horse projects in the state/ Quite a few of the horses are registered and there are some grade horses.

"The young folks are shifting toward better kinds and registered as quickly as they can," Berwick said. "It makes a wonderful youth project, because the youngster doesn't have to sell the animal after the show. He can keep it and ride it and take part in contests in other shows. The prime of a horse's life is from four to 12 years, but you can ride it from two years until it is around 15 years of age, and some times longer. But the longer period is the exception instead of the general rule."

Shows featuring Quarter Horses are held in many places around the state.

Berwick said, "We have shows approved by the American Quarter Horse Association, at Monroe, Delhi, Winnsboro, Ringgold, Marksville, Kaplan, New Iberia, Lake Charles, Jennings, Lafayette, Ferriday, and two in Baton Rouge."

The judging standard for cutting horse contests is based on rules adopted by the National Cutting Horse Association.

Here are a few highlights from those rules:

"A horse will be given credit for his ability to enter a herd of cattle and bring one out with very little disturbance to the herd or to the one brought out. If he (or his rider) creates unnecessary disturbance throughout his working period, he will be penalized . . . When an animal is cut from the herd it must be taken toward the center of the arena. . .

". . .If a horse runs into, scatters the herd, lanes or circles the herd against the arena fence, while trying to head an animal, he will be penalized heavily. If a horse turns the wrong way with tail toward animal, he will be disqualified for that go-round with no score.

"A horse will be penalized one point each time he is reined or cued in any manner. If he is reined or cued several times during a performance, he will be penalized each time. When a horse is picked up hard with reins and set over, one reined, cued excessively, or spurred in the shoulder, a heavier penalty will be marked against him.

"For riding with a tight rein through a performance, a penalty will be given; for part of the time during a performance, less penalty."

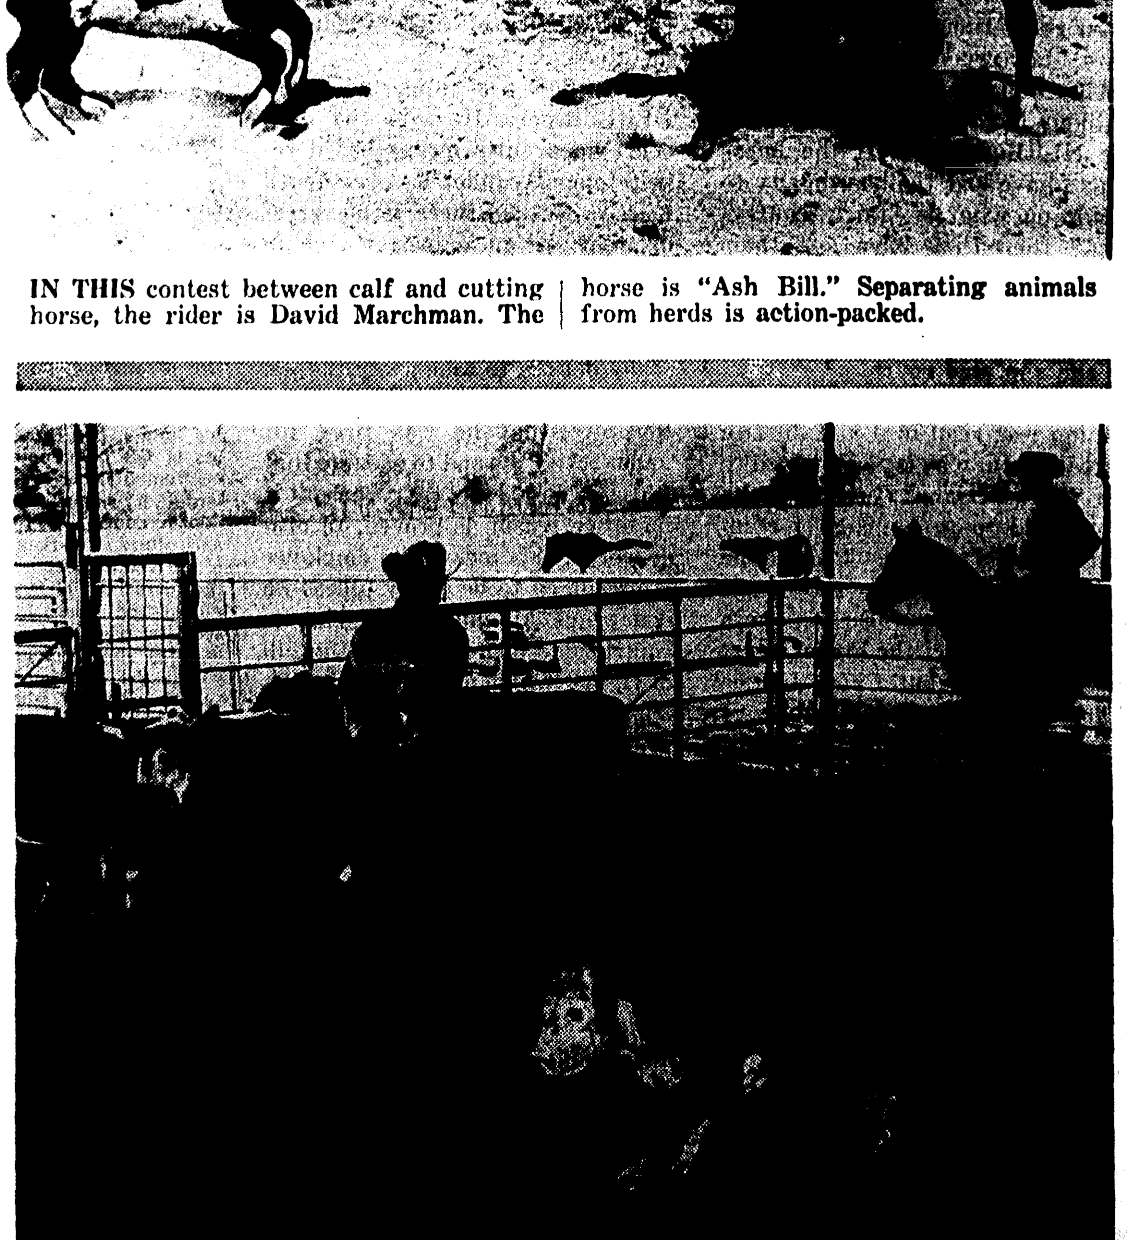
IN THIS contest between calf and cutting horse, the rider is David Marchman. The horse is "Ash Bill." Separating animals from herds is action-packed.



AT THE RECENT Northeast Louisiana Cutting Horse Association sponsored show on the Ralph King farm, Winnsboro, Jimmy Orell of Jerome, Ark., rides "Joe Peg Jr." The association holds shows every month on area farms.

'Horses With 'Cow Sense' Gain Favor

By FRANK NOONAN

Horses are returning triumphantly to area farms.

Endowed with showmanship and "cow sense," they are gaining acceptance, but not as plow animals.

As beasts of burden they were edged off of many farms several years ago by tractors and other agricultural machines. Their popularity dropped drastically.

FEATURED

Now, at special gatherings at Delhi, Winnsboro, Monroe, and in other sections of northeast Louisiana, they are featured performers.

One of the most fascinating and action-packed roles in which they are cast is that of cutting, separating cattle from a herd.

Creaking leather, flying dust, a pivoting, darting horse and a beleaguered steer, are the sounds and sights in this display of equine skill. It may be in sport or in performance of a necessary farm chore.

While a cutting horse may be of any breed, most of those in the area are registered Quarter Horses. The Quarter Horse, with an ancestory running back to Colonial days in Virginia, is master of short bursts of speed.

FAST QUARTER

The name comes from its ability to run a very fast quarter mile. This power on the short thrust makes the Quarter Horse a nautural at cutting animals from a herd.

Some people say that the shifting emphasis from a farm economy based primarily on cotton, to more diversified agriculture, including an increase in beef cattle, is responsible for the increasing popularity of cutting horses. They serve a practical purpose in handling cattle.

There are others who maintain that their acceptance in the realm of sports and recreation is the reason for their gaining popularity.

SPECIALIST'S VIEW

Lee Berwick, Quarter Horse breeder and cattleman living near St. Joseph, who started Louisiana State University's Quarter Horse breeding program in 1946, has this viewpoint:

"The Quarter Horse has increased in the last few years because it is being used for so many purposes. It is versatile. It has broken into the field of recreation. It is used in halter shows, and for racing, reining, cutting, and other purposes. Its popularity is two-fold, for its use on the farm, and for recreation. That is what expanded the market."

After starting the Quarter Horse program at LSU, Berwick stayed there as assistant professor in charge of the horse breeding program, livestock judging coach and taught general livestock production until 1950.

He now has about 90 head of registered Quarter Horses, and for the first time is planning to start training cutting horses, "Since there is a natural interest in this all over the country and it adds value to the horses."

Berwick said it is easier to sell a horse that has been trained for cutting, "and Quarter Horses are definitely the best fur cutting and for several other purposes."

A trip to Pinetucky Farm in the pine tree studded hill section of Ouachita Parish, owned by Ernest and Mildred Marchman, will give an insight into what makes a cutting horse tick.

TRAINING SESSIONS

There, David Marchman, son of the owners, and Charles "Hook" Robinson, trainer, conduct regular training sessions for cutting horses. Five of the Marchmans' registered Quarter Horses, including four-year-old Stallion, Buck's Saltillo, and three horses from other herds were in training recently.

The Marchmans have about 35 registered Quarter Horses and five registered Appaloosas, and plan to train all of them in the art of cutting.

Trainer Robinson said that the cutting horse originated in the southwest. A basic text and reference on the American Quarter Horse, quotes a cutting horse authority as describing the development of the animal in this way:

"The great southwest was built on sweat, hide and intestinal fortitude, and from its soil, the cutting horse was born — born of necessity."

The reference book described the "necessity as the cattle industry, where the cutting horse became a 'tool' of high economic value." It stated further, "There is no expedient for the cutting horse. There is no accurate and time-saving machine or method that can separate one animal from a herd and keep it at bay or on deposit."

TEXAS INFLUENCE

Trainer Robinson said the popularity of cutting horses in recent years was spurred from Texas, where "In herding up cattle, riders would separate the mammas and the calves. The horse would cut out the animals. And this finally was done for sport."

One example of the popularity of the sport can be seen generally on the first Sunday of every month when the Northeast Louisiana Cutting Horse Association holds a show at Delhi or on the farm of a member near Winnsboro, or some other section of the district.

John H. Parks of Delhi, vice president of the association, said most of the 50 members have little outdoor arenas on their farms, and in good weather "They drag up some flat-bedded cotton trailers, put hay on them and the people sit on them. Most of the time we have from 300 to 500 people present, depending on weather conditions."

During the winter months the show is held in the judging arena at the district livestock show barn in Delhi to provide shelter. In the spring when weather is favorable, the shows are held on various farms around the district. From 25 to 50 animals are generally entered in the competition.

At the end of the year, awards are given on the basis of animals with highest points in the four classes, which include novice, for beginning horse and rider; Class A for little more advanced horse and rider; Class AA for more highly advanced horse and rider, and open cutting class which usually draws more advanced horses and riders but is open to anyone.

The awards are gold engraved belt buckles.

'COW SENSE'

One of the essential qualifications of a cutting horse is "cow sense," which said Trainer Robinson of Pinetucky Farm, "is bred into horses, just like a bird dog starts out with natural instinct. The cutting horse comes from the line of cattle horses."

Robinson explained how training is carried on:

"We start a young horse in the pasture. Then we pick out a cow and draw his attention to it. We make the horse watch the cow. Then after it becomes accustomed to paying attention to cattle we bring it into the arena and work it out more.

"I like to break in a horse when it is two years old or older. I ride the horse and get a pretty good handle on him. Then I train him for cutting. There's a lot of reining and handling involved.

"It doesn't take long for horses to catch on and until they will do well without reining. Sometimes after two weeks the horse will do the cutting routine without reining."

DEVELOPMENT

Some horses are considered finished cutting animals after four years training, and others gain skill and experience more rapidly.

Said David Marchman, "It takes about two years to train a cutting horse real well. In cutting, the horse moves into the herd where you spot the animal you want and train his attention on it. The horse does the rest."

The training is strenuous, not only on horses, but on trainers and cattle.

"We can wear out 10 head of cattle a week working with eight horses," said "Hook" Robinson. "Once you center the horse's attention on the cow, it takes over until reined off or touched on the neck. During the cutting performance after the animal has been spotted, the action is strictly that of the horse. The rider just rides and lets the horse do the work on his own."

Nutritional needs of horses in training on the Marchman farm are well supplied.

HIGHER PROTEIN

"We feed a higher protein feed to horses being used for cutting purposes," said Robinson. "We feed two protein and vitamin supplements in addition to regular feed."

"In cutting contests," said Robinson, "horses are judged on the way they go into the herd quietly and bring out the cow without disturbing the rest of the herd. Then when they get the cow out they are judged on the way they handle it, the way they set it up, block, and work on their own."

A good cutting horse seems to anticipate many of the moves of the steer or calf being separated from the herd. The horse moves swiftly to block each move of the animal toward the herd and works with such intense interest that even a casual spectator is apt to become an admirer of the performer.

Library Tax Vote

Close on the heels of National Library Week, Ouachita Parish has scheduled a tax election to boost the support of the Public Library to 1.5 mills. The election will be held Tuesday of this week.

The Morning World and News-Star take this opportunity to offer full support to the small tax increase. It is indeed a minute figure when the community benefits are considered.

Since 1956, the Ouachita Parish Public Library, actually a library system with four branches and bookmobile facilities—has operated on returns from a .75 mill tax. In spite of all attempts by the library board to juggle figures in order to make ends meet, the deficit has climbed to $22,723.94.

Jefferson Parish operates library facilities through a 5 mill tax. The City of Lake Charles has approved 2.25 mills for library support. Jackson and Caldwell parishes are assured of library support through 3.5 mills.

Actually, the old .75 mill tax—approved for a five-year period—has already expired. If the present proposal does not pass, the Ouachita library system will be completely without funds and will have to cease operations as of July 1.

Ouachita's request for 1.5 mills—an increase over the old tax of only .75 mills—could be considered a bargain even if the old facilities were still in use. The rise in costs of living and other expenses more than justifies the request for a ¾ mil increase.

But Ouachita Parish has undergone a library expansion program of which it may be justly proud. And the library board feels the proposed 1.5 mill tax will take care of the new program even with today's higher costs. By the way, since this is a parish tax, homestead exemptions for homeowners will apply.

The American Library Association recommends a budget of $349,654 for a county of 100,000 population. This amounts to $3.49 per year per capita. The 1.5 mill tax would furnish Ouachita $161,587, or a per capita assessment of $1.60. That's less than half the national estimate.

This in itself is good testimony to our excellent library management. Also it gives property owners good reason to make the effort Tuesday to cast a vote in behalf of the 1.5 mill library tax. The polls will be open from 7 a.m. until 6 p.m.

NLRB Becomes 'Court'

One of the most odious decisions in its history has been returned by the United States supreme court. It seems to take away the power of the lower federal courts as far as the national labor relations board is concerned and to set that board up as a court of law in labor relations cases. Inasmuch as the labor relations board is patently prejudicied in favor of labor as against management, the supreme court, in effect, is taking away a large part of management's right to appeal.

The national labor relations board won a victory when the susupreme court told lower courts not to stray from a 1961 ruling in overturning NLRB decisions.

The 11-year-old guidelines—the Universal Camera Corporation case—said the courts may not "displace the board's choice between two fairly conflicting views."

If the lower courts do not have the authority to decide what are and what are not "two fairly conflicting views" who does? If the lower court thought the two views were "fairly conflicting," that is, having equal merit, it would not be likely in the first place to upset the NLRB decision. If the lower courts have lost their authority to decide on what is "fairly conflicting," then they have lost their authority over the labor relations board and it, in effect, becomes a court which can be overruled only by the supreme court.

The supreme court's unsigned opinion was read by Chief Justice Earl Warren, who is committeed to the views of labor, just as he is committed to a campaign for integration. Of course, it would be possible for the supreme court to let the lower courts pass on these cases and then let the higher court reverse them but Chief Justice Warren and five other members of the eight-member court apparently felt they could relieve themselves of a good many instances of overruling the lower courts by giving the NLRB full authority in this particular phase of the issue.

The 6-2 decision ordered the United States circuit court of appeals in New Orleans to reconsider its ruling which overturned board orders directing three firms to reinstate with back pay workers fired in labor disputes.

Involved were Walton Manufacturing Company and Loganville Pants company, jointly-owned garment firms in Loganville, Ga., and the Florida Citrus Canners Cooperative in Lake Wales, Fla.

The NLRB, backed by Robert Kennedy's department of justice, complained that the New Orleans court had frequently applied improper principles in substituting its own judgment for that of the board.

The opinion read by Justice Warren seemed, without flatly saying so, to tell the lower court to get rid of its old yardstick for gauging the credibility of witnesses in reinstatement cases.

This view was supported by an NLRB expert. He said the high court apparently means board reinstatement cannot be overturned merely because there is no direct disproof of an employer's claim that union activity was not the reason for the firings.

What the high court's ruling really does is to take away the necessity on the part of the employe to prove that he was fired for union activities and to assume that he was fired for that reason if no other reason is proved. In other words, this means the employer is presumed to be guilty unless he can prove his innocence. This is contrary to a provision of the bill of rights, which says a man is presumed to be innocent until he is proved guilty.

Satellite Ownership

Who will own the communication satellite system when it is established by the United States? That is a question before congress and it is one that deserves serious consideration.

Not many years ago congressional discussion of the ownership of communication facilities located out in space, away from the world, would have been considered fantastic. Now the issue is one that must be decided within the near future.

Objecting to ownership of the system by a combine of communication common carriers, Senator Russell B. Long, D., La., charged that two bills, S. 2650 and S. 2814, creating a special exemption from the anti-trust laws, would overturn long-standing congressional policies. Urging competition in the traditional free - enterprise style, Senator Long said:

"If, as under S. 2814, the communications carriers own 50 per cent of a satellite communications corporation, we can reasonably assume that the manufacturing divisions or subsidiaries of the carriers will be providing most of the equipment.

Final Income Tax Returns

Individual Levies Range From 20 Per Cent In Lowest Bracket To 91 Per Cent In Highest

An estimated sixty million Americans are now struggling with their final income tax returns for 1961. All must be completed by Monday, an extra day because April 15th comes on Sunday. So some millions of your fellow citizens will sweat over their returns this week-end.

Individual taxes range from 20 per cent in the taxable income in the lowest bracket to 91 per cent in the highest bracket. Each year it is a pastime of the taxpayer to estimate how much time he worked for himself and how much for the government.

The average man in the lowest bracket must work about 2½ months each year for the Government, leaving him 9½ months to work for himself and family. The man in the top bracket, (if his income is from salary) works 11 months each year for the Government, with only one month left to work for himself and his family.

On the in-between brackets each tax-payer can figure out for himself how much of his time is for the Government and how much for himself and his family.

From all sources the Federal Government's take for taxes will come close to $90,000,000,000 this year. It would be nice to be able to tell the tax payer that with this enormous sum the Government can pay its running expenses and modestly reduce the huge public debt piled up by decades of deficit financing.

The unhappy fact is that your Government is winding up the year broke and borrowing money just as it has in 25 out of the last 31 years — piling more billions onto the national debt.

The deficit for this fiscal year which ends June 30, will be around $7,000,000,000 according to the estimate, but at the last figures, which were in February, it was running at $9,506,000,000 which will be curtailed by the April 15 tax payments. In the fiscal year beginning July 1 there will be another deficit running to perhaps $5,000,000,000.

On the cover sheet of your income tax instructions this year is a quotation from the late Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States Supreme Court, that he liked to pay taxes: "Taxes are what we pay for civilized society."

Justice Holmes lived from 1841 to 1935. He was a man of modest means and in the low rates of the 21 years of his lifetime in which there was an income tax he probably never paid in any year as much as the average man now having income of $9,000 per year pays.

Never in any peace year in Justice Holmes lifetime or for five years thereafter did the cost of running the entire government approach the $9,300,000,000 a year it now pays for interest. Every time the minute hand of the clock moves one notch throughout the 24-hour day, $17,690 is being spent for national debt interest alone.

Every good citizen, whether he likes it or not, will pay all the Federal taxes he owes. That is just ordinary morality. It is also smart, for he can be sure that he has a better chance to get away with murder or other heinous crime than he can cheating on his income tax.

It is a shameful thing that in a period of great prosperity, and when the Federal Government has searched high and low for every tax dollar it can lay its hands on, deficits are piled up year after year.

And don't let any one tell you that its all because of the cold war. In the last eight years national defense spending has gone up from $41,000,000,000 to $53,000,000,000 or 30 per cent. Non-defense spending on the other hand, has gone up from $24,000,000,000 to $40,000,000,000 or 68 per cent.

The citizen who wants to live within his income has priorities in his spending. He puts some expenditures off. There are no priorities in spending in Washington in 1962. Everything is demanded and promised immediately.

But there is one thing about the income tax return you have to make this year. It is relatively uncomplicated. Be thankful for that. Wait until next year when the withholding of interest and dividends begins under the Administration tax bill soon to become law!

How Do You Stand, Sir?

By BARRY GOLDWATER

U. S. Senator From Arizona

President Kennedy recently made some observations on the world situation which I believe were remarkable for their unjustified optimism and their apparent disdain for the realities of the present East-West crisis.

Mr. Kennedy, in his March 23 speech at the University of California, warned the American people against becoming too much impressed with the clamor of daily events, because, as he put it, "it is the profound tendencies of history and not passing excitements that will shape our future."

He added: "The short view gives us the impression as a nation of being shoved and harried, everywhere on the defense. But this impression is surely an optical illusion. From the perspective of Moscow, the world today may seem more troublesome, more intractable, more frustrating than it does to us. The leaders of the Communist world are confronted not only by acute internal problems in each Communist country — the failure of agriculture, the rising discontent of the youth and the intellectuals, the demands of technical and managerial groups for status and security. They are confronted in addition by profound divisions within the Communist world itself — divisions which have already shattered the image of communism as a universal system guaranteed to abolish all social and international conflicts—the most valuable asset the Communists had for many years."

Now this is a comfortable view and will surely appeal to many hopeful Americans who constantly seek reasons to avoid personal concern over the trend of international events. For, in effect, the President is telling us that everything will turn out all right—and largely because of events over which we have no control. And when he employs the phrase "optical illusion" with reference to America's present position in the cold war, he is subscribing to the theory that we can minimize our own difficulties merely because the Communists have some of their own. This strikes me as a vast oversimplification.

For example, I certainly don't believe, and I'm sure most Americans will agree, that Communist Cuba can be written off as an "optical illusion." Yet, this threat off our southern doorstep is certainly part of that "short view" which gives the impression of the United States being "shoved and harried."

By the same token, the Berlin wall is certainly no illusion. It is a very present reality for the thousands of people whose freedom it confines.

And there is nothing illusory about Communist aggression in South Viet - Nam, Communist threats in Europe, Communist pressure in the Congo. Nor is there anything unreal about the fact that communism now holds one-third of mankind in a grip of slavery and is busily trying to soften up and intimidate the remaining two-thirds.

President Kennedy may not like the idea, but the truth is that the short view presents the United States in a defensive light, because our policies since the end of World War II have placed us in a defensive position. This is not something we can afford to brush under the rug with recitals of real and reported difficulties within the Communist orbit. This is not an "optical illusion." It is a reality of the cold war which we must accept and start to do something about.

I suggest that it does more harm than good to give official weight to reported difficulties within Communist countries or between Communist countries. It is wishful thinking, at best, to believe that starvation will become a vehicle for rebellion in China; or that Khrushchev and Mao Tse Tung will go for each other's throats; or that the yearning of students and intellectuals will produce the overthrow of Communism in Russia.

Such wishful thinking is dangerous, because it can easily become the fabric of complacency. It can lull us into a false sense of security by minimizing the scope and the intensity of the Communist menace. And this is not the time for complacency in the cold war. Rather, it is a time for deep concern over the progress of communism and the confinement of freedom.

For our own safety, I believe we must assume that nothing will happen within the Communist orbit to interfere with the Red timetable for world domination. I believe we must prepare for the ultimate threat and rejoice if trouble within the Communist world makes it something less.

To the Editor:

In your paper of Sunday, April 8, you printed one from a Mr. O. F. Whellis in which he takes exceptions to Gen. Walker's statements that Eleanor Roosevelt, Dean Acheson and former Pres. Truman "were definitely pink." He then takes you to task for "doing the country a disservice by accusing the president of conniving with the communists, and that it is a dirty shame that a man of your position doesn't have any more respect for the office of President."

Let's do a little looking back. Did President Kennedy, who was then Senator Kennedy, have the proper respect for the office of president when he addressed the house of representatives on Jan. 25, 1949, at which time he stated that "the responsibility for the failure of our foreign policy rests squarely on the white house (Truman) and the department of state (Acheson). The continued insistence that aid would not be forthcoming unless a coalition government with the communists were formed, was a crippling blow to the national government. This house must now assume the responsibility of preventing the onrushing tide of communism from engulfing all of Asia."

A few days later Senator Kennedy repeated his remarks at Salem, Mass., and added to them by saying America had fought for China's freedom but at Yalta "a sick Roosevelt on the advice of General Marshall and others, gave the Kwiles and other stragetic points to the Soviets. What our young men fought for, our diplomats and our president have frittered away."

Now we have another Marshall in the form of Averill Harriman, who has just demanded of the Laotian government that they take communists into their government. Perhaps what General Walker meant by the period of "agrarian reform highlights" was the period when Eleanor Roosevelt was making statements to the effect that "The Chinese Communists are not all like the Russian communists. They are agrarian reformers." We have heard that one from Peking to Havana. Is the lady a celestial being who is above critisism? She should have retracted dozens of statements she has made over the past 30 years, since she's been so wrong so often, but she and others go blandly on declaring her infallibility. Was she infallible when she stated during the war that the Russians were fighting for the four freedoms? Does anyone believe that now? It seems to millions that they were fighting to take over as much of the world as they could with our help.

Mr. Wheelis doesn't have to get sick watching young people rioting in foreign countries. He can get just as sick watching them riot against the house unAmerican activities committee in Los Angeles.

Surely the Russians didn't come by possession of Hungary, Rumania, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Estonia, Latvia, Lithuania just by luck. Nor were they permitted to occupy Manchuria and hold it for the Chinese communists, just by luck. . Manchuria has been the spring board for the whole of Asia which we are fast losing — but then we never learn, do we? The few feeble voices raised against all that happened then were squelched just as General Walker is now.

As for Dean Rusk, he was a fund - raiser for the magazine Amerasia, published by the Institute for Pacific Relations, whose offices were raided by the F B I where secret documents were found. His latest scheme, along with Dr Koston, was to send grain to China. As Lenin said, "Food is a weapon," so let's not put any more weapons in their hands. He made the remark Friday 6th in Baton Rouge that "there are those who would have us pull out of NATO, to give up our foreign bases. Hasn't he heard? Those are two of the objections set forth in the "Liberal Papers" published by his own admirers, and not by the extreme right wing.

To the Editor:

Although this is a somewhat belated answer to the two letters that appeared in the Monroe Morning World on March 25, I must state that I am in complete sympathy with Messrs. Pierron and Martin. I understand their plight and frustration because the F. B. I. has indicated there are 10,000 Communists in the United States, and that's hardly enough to go around to the many groups and individuals who are positive there is one "living next door". Now all that is left for them to do is to "create" a few more, and their logic tells them that if anyone disagrees with them, then they must certainly be a "Red dupe".

The American citizen who serves his country by assisting the F.B.I. and other government agencies in exposing Communists and other enemies of our nation deserves our praise; but the American citizen who, in the name of anti - communism, points the finger of suspicion and embarks on a name-calling campaign against his neighbor and American leaders whose proof of integrity is beyond any doubt, deserves our scorn. This nation was not built on distrust and suspicion, and it will be weakened if we are to be divided by such.

Mr. Robert Welch, John Birch leader, is a master at name-calling and finger - pointing, yet when the justice department asked him to produce any evidence supporting his charges he did not respond. This is the policy of the extreme right. Play on fears and doubts. Sow the seeds of distrust and suspicion, but if asked to put up the proof or shut up, ignore the request; then attempt to hide the ugliness by waving the American flag.

I repeat. Just as there must be some answer to the two awesome alternatives, surrender or war; so must there be some way to avoid the perils of one extreme without embracing the dangers of the other.

In a book entitled "Mein Kampf" one can also find things that are the "direct opposite" of what may be found in the official Communist Newspaper, "The Daily Worker." I deplore both publications.

THOMAS O. MOSES

P. S. Mr. Editor: There is a statement at the top of the first page of your newspaper that reads, Without Freedom of the Press There is no Democracy". Beware! Mr. Welch has said that the "World War I slogan, Make the World Safe for Democracy, was apparently Communist inspired."

West Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

May I express my appreciation for the feature in your Sunday paper on the physical fitness program here at Kiroli School. In view of the numerous favorable comments and telephone calls from school administrative personnel and from the people in this area, we feel the article was most informative, and we appreciate the opportunity to show the public this particular activity in our school.

We recognize the necessity for teaching the "whole" child in our program and attempt to enrich his experiences in each vital area of growth. We have been justifiably pleased this year. A local radio station promoted a parish-wide spelling bee recently, and our school was successful in winning three trophies. In the poetry contest sponsored annually by a local book club, Kiroli students earned five of the eight coveted awards. We have always engaged in intramural sports to encourage fair play, sportsmanship, and physical development. Without over-emphasizing any one area, we are attempting a comprehensive, balanced program which we feel will meet the needs of our children and our community.

Thank you for your help in publicizing our efforts in helping to build stronger Americans for a stronger America.

MEDICAL CARE SWITCH — Kennedy administration, which once planned to get a vote on medical care for the aged under social security at this session of Congress even if it required attaching it as a rider to another bill, no longer talks of that strategy. It is now convinced that the only chance for success is to win approval of House Ways and Means Committee and its chairman, Representative Wilbur D. Mills, Arkansas. Mills thinks that the two-year Mills-Kerr old age care law, of which he is one of the authors and which is based on the principle of federal - state cooperation, has not had a fair trial. Mills also feels that implementation of Mills - Kerr law is being carried out with remarkable speed. Twenty-three states already have Mills-Kerr law in effect, three or four others soon will have.

Library Tax Vote

Close on the heels of National Library Week, Ouachita Parish has scheduled a tax election to boost the support of the Public Library to 1.5 mills. The election will be held Tuesday of this week.

The Morning World and News-Star take this opportunity to offer full support to the small tax increase. It is indeed a minute figure when the community benefits are considered.

Since 1956, the Ouachita Parish Public Library, actually a library system with four branches and bookmobile facilities—has operated on returns from a .75 mill tax. In spite of all attempts by the library board to juggle figures in order to make ends meet, the deficit has climbed to $22,723.94.

Jefferson Parish operates library facilities through a 5 mill tax. The City of Lake Charles has approved 2.25 mills for library support. Jackson and Caldwell parishes are assured of library support through 3.5 mills.

Actually, the old .75 mill tax—approved for a five-year period—has already expired. If the present proposal does not pass, the Ouachita library system will be completely without funds and will have to cease operations as of July 1.

Ouachita's request for 1.5 mills—an increase over the old tax of only .75 mills—could be considered a bargain even if the old facilities were still in use. The rise in costs of living and other expenses more than justifies the request for a ¾ mil increase.

But Ouachita Parish has undergone a library expansion program of which it may be justly proud. And the library board feels the proposed 1.5 mill tax will take care of the new program even with today's higher costs. By the way, since this is a parish tax, homestead exemptions for homeowners will apply.

The American Library Association recommends a budget of $349,654 for a county of 100,000 population. This amounts to $3.49 per year per capita. The 1.5 mill tax would furnish Ouachita $161,587, or a per capita assessment of $1.60. That's less than half the national estimate.

This in itself is good testimony to our excellent library management. Also it gives property owners good reason to make the effort Tuesday to cast a vote in behalf of the 1.5 mill library tax. The polls will be open from 7 a.m. until 6 p.m.

NLRB Becomes 'Court'

One of the most odious decisions in its history has been returned by the United States supreme court. It seems to take away the power of the lower federal courts as far as the national labor relations board is concerned and to set that board up as a court of law in labor relations cases. Inasmuch as the labor relations board is patently prejudicied in favor of labor as against management, the supreme court, in effect, is taking away a large part of management's right to appeal.

The national labor relations board won a victory when the susupreme court told lower courts not to stray from a 1961 ruling in overturning NLRB decisions.

The 11-year-old guidelines—the Universal Camera Corporation case—said the courts may not "displace the board's choice between two fairly conflicting views."

If the lower courts do not have the authority to decide what are and what are not "two fairly conflicting views" who does? If the lower court thought the two views were "fairly conflicting," that is, having equal merit, it would not be likely in the first place to upset the NLRB decision. If the lower courts have lost their authority to decide on what is "fairly conflicting," then they have lost their authority over the labor relations board and it, in effect, becomes a court which can be overruled only by the supreme court.

The supreme court's unsigned opinion was read by Chief Justice Earl Warren, who is committeed to the views of labor, just as he is committed to a campaign for integration. Of course, it would be possible for the supreme court to let the lower courts pass on these cases and then let the higher court reverse them but Chief Justice Warren and five other members of the eight-member court apparently felt they could relieve themselves of a good many instances of overruling the lower courts by giving the NLRB full authority in this particular phase of the issue.

The 6-2 decision ordered the United States circuit court of appeals in New Orleans to reconsider its ruling which overturned board orders directing three firms to reinstate with back pay workers fired in labor disputes.

Involved were Walton Manufacturing Company and Loganville Pants company, jointly-owned garment firms in Loganville, Ga., and the Florida Citrus Canners Cooperative in Lake Wales, Fla.

The NLRB, backed by Robert Kennedy's department of justice, complained that the New Orleans court had frequently applied improper principles in substituting its own judgment for that of the board.

The opinion read by Justice Warren seemed, without flatly saying so, to tell the lower court to get rid of its old yardstick for gauging the credibility of witnesses in reinstatement cases.

This view was supported by an NLRB expert. He said the high court apparently means board reinstatement cannot be overturned merely because there is no direct disproof of an employer's claim that union activity was not the reason for the firings.

What the high court's ruling really does is to take away the necessity on the part of the employe to prove that he was fired for union activities and to assume that he was fired for that reason if no other reason is proved. In other words, this means the employer is presumed to be guilty unless he can prove his innocence. This is contrary to a provision of the bill of rights, which says a man is presumed to be innocent until he is proved guilty.

Satellite Ownership

Who will own the communication satellite system when it is established by the United States? That is a question before congress and it is one that deserves serious consideration.

Not many years ago congressional discussion of the ownership of communication facilities located out in space, away from the world, would have been considered fantastic. Now the issue is one that must be decided within the near future.

Objecting to ownership of the system by a combine of communication common carriers, Senator Russell B. Long, D., La., charged that two bills, S. 2650 and S. 2814, creating a special exemption from the anti-trust laws, would overturn long-standing congressional policies. Urging competition in the traditional free - enterprise style, Senator Long said:

"If, as under S. 2814, the communications carriers own 50 per cent of a satellite communications corporation, we can reasonably assume that the manufacturing divisions or subsidiaries of the carriers will be providing most of the equipment.

Final Income Tax Returns

Individual Levies Range From 20 Per Cent In Lowest Bracket To 91 Per Cent In Highest

An estimated sixty million Americans are now struggling with their final income tax returns for 1961. All must be completed by Monday, an extra day because April 15th comes on Sunday. So some millions of your fellow citizens will sweat over their returns this week-end.

Individual taxes range from 20 per cent in the taxable income in the lowest bracket to 91 per cent in the highest bracket. Each year it is a pastime of the taxpayer to estimate how much time he worked for himself and how much for the government.

The average man in the lowest bracket must work about 2½ months each year for the Government, leaving him 9½ months to work for himself and family. The man in the top bracket, (if his income is from salary) works 11 months each year for the Government, with only one month left to work for himself and his family.

On the in-between brackets each tax-payer can figure out for himself how much of his time is for the Government and how much for himself and his family.

From all sources the Federal Government's take for taxes will come close to $90,000,000,000 this year. It would be nice to be able to tell the tax payer that with this enormous sum the Government can pay its running expenses and modestly reduce the huge public debt piled up by decades of deficit financing.

The unhappy fact is that your Government is winding up the year broke and borrowing money just as it has in 25 out of the last 31 years — piling more billions onto the national debt.

The deficit for this fiscal year which ends June 30, will be around $7,000,000,000 according to the estimate, but at the last figures, which were in February, it was running at $9,506,000,000 which will be curtailed by the April 15 tax payments. In the fiscal year beginning July 1 there will be another deficit running to perhaps $5,000,000,000.

On the cover sheet of your income tax instructions this year is a quotation from the late Associate Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States Supreme Court, that he liked to pay taxes: "Taxes are what we pay for civilized society."

Justice Holmes lived from 1841 to 1935. He was a man of modest means and in the low rates of the 21 years of his lifetime in which there was an income tax he probably never paid in any year as much as the average man now having income of $9,000 per year pays.

Never in any peace year in Justice Holmes lifetime or for five years thereafter did the cost of running the entire government approach the $9,300,000,000 a year it now pays for interest. Every time the minute hand of the clock moves one notch throughout the 24-hour day, $17,690 is being spent for national debt interest alone.

Every good citizen, whether he likes it or not, will pay all the Federal taxes he owes. That is just ordinary morality. It is also smart, for he can be sure that he has a better chance to get away with murder or other heinous crime than he can cheating on his income tax.

It is a shameful thing that in a period of great prosperity, and when the Federal Government has searched high and low for every tax dollar it can lay its hands on, deficits are piled up year after year.

And don't let any one tell you that its all because of the cold war. In the last eight years national defense spending has gone up from $41,000,000,000 to $53,000,000,000 or 30 per cent. Non-defense spending on the other hand, has gone up from $24,000,000,000 to $40,000,000,000 or 68 per cent.

The citizen who wants to live within his income has priorities in his spending. He puts some expenditures off. There are no priorities in spending in Washington in 1962. Everything is demanded and promised immediately.

But there is one thing about the income tax return you have to make this year. It is relatively uncomplicated. Be thankful for that. Wait until next year when the withholding of interest and dividends begins under the Administration tax bill soon to become law!

How Do You Stand, Sir?

By BARRY GOLDWATER

U. S. Senator From Arizona

President Kennedy recently made some observations on the world situation which I believe were remarkable for their unjustified optimism and their apparent disdain for the realities of the present East-West crisis.

Mr. Kennedy, in his March 23 speech at the University of California, warned the American people against becoming too much impressed with the clamor of daily events, because, as he put it, "it is the profound tendencies of history and not passing excitements that will shape our future."

He added: "The short view gives us the impression as a nation of being shoved and harried, everywhere on the defense. But this impression is surely an optical illusion. From the perspective of Moscow, the world today may seem more troublesome, more intractable, more frustrating than it does to us. The leaders of the Communist world are confronted not only by acute internal problems in each Communist country — the failure of agriculture, the rising discontent of the youth and the intellectuals, the demands of technical and managerial groups for status and security. Now all that is left for them to do is to "create" a few more, and their logic tells them that if anyone disagrees with them, then they must certainly be a "Red dupe".

The American citizen who serves his country by assisting the F.B.I. and other government agencies in exposing Communists and other enemies of our nation deserves our praise; but the American citizen who, in the name of anti - communism, points the finger of suspicion and embarks on a name-calling campaign against his neighbor and American leaders whose proof of integrity is beyond any doubt, deserves our scorn. This nation was not built on distrust and suspicion, and it will be weakened if we are to be divided by such.

Mr. Robert Welch, John Birch leader, is a master at name-calling and finger - pointing, yet when the justice department asked him to produce any evidence supporting his charges he did not respond. This is the policy of the extreme right. Play on fears and doubts. Sow the seeds of distrust and suspicion, but if asked to put up the proof or shut up, ignore the request; then attempt to hide the ugliness by waving the American flag.

I repeat. Just as there must be some answer to the two awesome alternatives, surrender or war; so must there be some way to avoid the perils of one extreme without embracing the dangers of the other.

In a book entitled "Mein Kampf" one can also find things that are the "direct opposite" of what may be found in the official Communist Newspaper, "The Daily Worker." I deplore both publications.

THOMAS O. MOSES

P. S. Mr. Editor: There is a statement at the top of the first page of your newspaper that reads, Without Freedom of the Press There is no Democracy". Beware! Mr. Welch has said that the "World War I slogan, Make the World Safe for Democracy, was apparently Communist inspired."

Appreciates Feature

West Monroe, La.

To the Editor:

May I express my appreciation for the feature in your Sunday paper on the physical fitness program here at Kiroli School. In view of the numerous favorable comments and telephone calls from school administrative personnel and from the people in this area, we feel the article was most informative, and we appreciate the opportunity to show the public this particular activity in our school.

We recognize the necessity for teaching the "whole" child in our program and attempt to enrich his experiences in each vital area of growth. We have been justifiably pleased this year. A local radio station promoted a parish-wide spelling bee recently, and our school was successful in winning three trophies. In the poetry contest sponsored annually by a local book club, Kiroli students earned five of the eight coveted awards. We have always engaged in intramural sports to encourage fair play, sportsmanship, and physical development. Without over-emphasizing any one area, we are attempting a comprehensive, balanced program which we feel will meet the needs of our children and our community.

Thank you for your help in publicizing our efforts in helping to build stronger Americans for a stronger America.

Howard Barker,
Principal.

WASHINGTON SHORTS

MEDICAL CARE SWITCH — Kennedy administration, which once planned to get a vote on medical care for the aged under social security at this session of Congress even if it required attaching it as a rider to another bill, no longer talks of that strategy. It is now convinced that the only chance for success is to win approval of House Ways and Means Committee and its chairman, Representative Wilbur D. Mills, Arkansas. Mills thinks that the two-year Mills-Kerr old age care law, of which he is one of the authors and which is based on the principle of federal - state cooperation, has not had a fair trial. Mills also feels that implementation of Mills - Kerr law is being carried out with remarkable speed. Twenty-three states already have Mills-Kerr law in effect, three or four others soon will have.

IN WEST GERMANY

Boom Is On, But Spiral Feared

By HANNS NEUERBOURG

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) —In a Duesseldorf night club, they serve champagne in a golden replica of the czarist crown . . . .

Company directors fly to the Behamas to hold their annual meetings. . . .

Advertisements invite Germans to invest in Florida housing. . . .

Jobs are plentiful, wages rising. . . .

All these symptoms seem to indicate that West Germans never had it so good. In fact, most Germans felt that way until a few days ago when they learned they were on the "path toward economic self-destruction." That warning came from Ludwig Erhard, economics minister. He helped make the miracle he now hopes to control.

Erhard called on Germans to stop asking for a better life with more and more material gain. He asked moderation.

He is worried that a wage-price spiral, with threats of inflation, will hurt this nation, now No. 2 in the volume of world trade.

WAKE UP

Suddenly, West Germany's "normalverbraucher" — normal consumer—woke up to the fact that the economic miracle shows signs of slowing.

Erhard admits he intended frightening people. Less than a year ago he revalued the German mark upward. This was intended to dampen the boom by bringing in cheaper imports and reducing West Germany's skyrocketing trade surplus.

In this his aims were achieved: The boom is leveling off and trade surpluses have shrunken. Business reports mention sales leveling off and even dropping. Certain expansion projects have been canceled. The stock market has weakened.

Some economists feel Erhard's measures have hurt more than was needed.

But Erhard himself is not satisfied.

He feels that the average German must use more restraint in his demands.

While export business was slackening off during the last year, the cost of living index gained three per cent. In previous years, it had been two per cent.

Trade unions, more militant than any time since the war, took this as an argument to press for pay raises up to 10 per cent.

West German wages, the highest of the six member countries of the European Common Market, have been hiked 26 per cent in three years.

But prices have gone up and the housewives say their money buys less. So the unions had firm support for demands for new raises.

Management has had to meet them halfway. Manpower remains scarce although 500,000 workers have been brought in from Italy, Spain, Ireland and other countries.

On the heels of Erhard's appeal, the West German automobile industry announced increases in domestic prices. This amounted almost to a slap in the face for Erhard. Labor now is asking why it should be moderate if industry isn't.

Commented Heinz Nordhoff, chairman of the Volkswagen automobile plant: "Erhard should have made his appeal two or three years earlier. Now it is a little late to talk panic. The government should take action to get things in hand after the general free-for-all. Otherwise, there will be a dire end. You can't put all wages, but government spending must be kept within reasonable bounds."

Income Taxes Dying Out In Soviet Union

By PRESTON GROVER

MOSCOW (AP)— Income taxes are dying out in the Soviet Union, but the American struggling today with form 1040A should not conclude that the U.S.S.R. is a taxpayer's paradise.

Taxpayers are inescapable in the Soviet Union as elsewhere. The abolition of the income tax, proclaimed by Premier Khrushchev, is an adjustment in methods.

The income tax has never been an important source of Soviet revenue, bringing in only 7 per cent of collections. By 1965 it will be virtually ended except for a limited number of people. Artisans, such as the few cobblers, and lawyers and doctors with private practices, will continue to pay a tax of 18-43 per cent on earnings even after 1965.

On wages and salaries, income tax is going down year by year. Lower brackets—persons earning the equivalent of $40 - 60 monthly already are exempt; there are a large number in the U.S.S.R. in that category.

Other taxes lie hidden in the prices of everything people buy. Taxes are especially heavy on consumer goods. Some examples:

A Soviet-made Moskvich automobile, about the size of a Volkswagen, is sold overseas for the equivalent of $1,400. In the U.S.S.R. the price is double that.

A pint of Soviet vodka can be bought in Denmark for the equivalent of 81 cents, including tax. But when Ivan Ivanovich wants a nip, the same bottle in the U.S.S.R. costs him the equivalent of $3.50. Tax is the answer. It is particularly heavy on alcoholic beverages because the Communits party is trying to discourage drunkenness.

A tax on farmers works this way: Every year state buyers go to farms to buy up the saleable portions of the crops. The state pays far below the market price. Government buyers took about two-fifths of the wheat crop of one farm this correspondent visited. The state buyer paid the equivalent of 90 cents a bushel, about half the market price. That amounts to a heavy tax on farmers whose living standard is the lowest in the Soviet Union.

The government owns everything so practically everybody works for the state. Probably that is why income tax is being abolished. The state fixes salaries, so it makes little sense to stipulate a salary and then take back a stated amount of it in tax.

In the process of abolishing the income tax, the Soviet government is increasing salaries in the lowest brackets and cutting those in the highest.

MEXICAN DEBATE

Growing Labor Force Problem

By MORRIS W. ROSENBERG

MEXICO CITY (AP)—A harried Mexican economist pointed to a pile of reports on his desk.

"It all boils down to this," he said. "Every year we have over a million new mouths to feed. Every year we have to create 350,000 new jobs for a growing labor force. How are we going to do it?"

That question is the basis of national debate in Mexico today. On its answer depends the nation's political and economic future.

The official Bank of Mexico says Mexico's gross national product in 1961 increased by 3.5 per cent, about equal to the population growth. Result: an economic standstill.

Lack of normal investment by private enterprise is blamed for a drop in the economic index from 5.7 per cent in 1960 to 3.5 per cent last year.

Businessmen in turn blame fear of Castro-communism and uncertainty over government policies. Worried capitalists sent many million dollars out of the country last year.

The fears of Castro-communism have proved unjustified so far. There have been no signs that the government or the great majority of Mexicans are moving toward communism. In fact, there have been moves to the contrary.

Uncertainty over economic policies persists.

Businessmen cite confusion over official statements about the program of Mexicanization of foreign investments; essentially, this means 51 per cent Mexican control. They also point to government intervention in enterprises formerly in private hands, and to bureaucratic red tape.

Businessmen also are upset over a proposed constitutional amendment which would let a commission allot to workers a percentage of company profits.

The government, concerned by the economic slowdown, has announced several fiscal measures aimed at encouraging private enterprise. Finance minister Antonio Ortiz Mena has announced a program aimed at guaranteeing a development pace averaging at least five per cent over the next five years.

President Adolfo Lopez Mateos says there is plenty of room for both private and public investment to carry out industrialization.

There certainly is room. Most families lived in dwelling units of one or two rooms in 1960. Construction of low-cost housing has not kept up with demand and the housing gap is growing. Nearly half the 36 million people lack any water supply system, the Inter-American Development Bank says.

Illiteracy is nearly 40 per cent, with 1,400,000 children unable to attend school because of lack of facilities and teachers.

A little over half the population lives off agriculture, many in miserable conditions.

Average earnings for farmers are as low as 40 cents per day. Ninety-four per cent of the land is arid or semiarid. Only 11 per cent of the land was under cultivation in 1960.

This demands large scale irrigation projects. The government has undertaken them, but the need is overwhelming.

It also calls for industrialization, to create new jobs for poverty-ridden farm families. In 1947 manufactured goods accounted for 18.5 per cent of the gross national product. This figure rose to 25.6 per cent in 1961. Agriculture rose from 17.5 to 20.4 per cent.

Next to agriculture, Mexico's biggest dollar provider is the U.S. tourist. About 812,000 left $707 million last year. About 55,000 U.S. citizens live in Mexico and practically never encounter any evidence of anti-Yankeeism. True, many Mexicans harbor a resentment born of history.

U.S. armed forces twice invaded Mexico and in other periods the United States interfered in Mexican affairs.

But now, as a Mexican editor put it: "We have the strength of the weak: we can pardon the past misdeeds of the powerful."

Mexicans are grateful for U.S. assistance in times of natural disasters. Many have learned to like, and in some instances adopt, the ways of their northern neighbor.

One acute problem is the salt content of the Colorado River waters received by Mexico. Washing of U.S. lands has abruptly jumped the salinity of these waters. This threatens the Mexicali Valley area which Mexican farmers laboriously developed.

Communist are quick to exploit such incidents.

Although Communist forces are small they appear active in the country's educationaly system — in the universities and in some teachers' unions.

Castroism has lost strength partly because of attacks on the church and increasing Cuban ties to Moscow and Peiping. A pro-Castro movement inspired by leftest ex-President Lazaro Cardenas is countered by a right-of-center movement with ex-Presidents Miguel Aleman and Abelardo Rodriguez among the leaders.

The apparent aim of both movements is to influence the actions of the Partido Revolucionario Institucional which has dominated political life for 32 years. It has sought to be broad and flexible enough to encompass wide ranges of the political spectrum. Thus far it has succeeded. Its leaders say they see no threat on the political horizon, but the fact remains that it faces a crucial period.

U. S. FIGHTING

Tonton Macoute In Small Haiti

By WATSON SIMS

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, (AP) — Here in Haiti, just 50 miles from Cuba, Uncle Sam is fighting the specter of hunger, and shadow-boxing with Tonton Macoute.

Tonton is Creole for old man; Macoute means bag. In Haitian mythology, Tonton Macoute was a terrifying bogeyman who put disobedient children into his bag and carried them off to slavery.

Today Tonton Macoute is the term often applied to President Francois Duvalier's secret militia. For want of a workable alternative, U.S. dollars help keep Duvalier and his apparatus in power. By tying economic aid to hoped-for political reforms, however, the United States is trying to bring a relaxation of Haiti's police state. For six months, it cut off economic aid funds altogether. They may be permanently stopped unless Duvalier changes his ways, in line with the reform aims of the Alliance for Progress.

In the last year Duvalier, while demanding more aid, has tightened controls and arbitrarily extended his term in office.

This former tourist paradise on Cuba's back doorstep is now perhaps the harshest police state outside the Iron Curtain.

No meeting of any kind—social, cultural or otherwise — may be held without written government permission. Entrances to all meetings are watched.

Political opponents of Duvalier have fled the country, been killed or jailed. Prominent citizens by the dozen have disappeared without trace. The press is controlled. The head of the Roman Catholic Church, to which most Haitians belong, is in exile.

The regime's enforcers are the Tonton Macoutes—militiamen who may or may not wear uniforms. They collect "voluntary contributions" to Duvalier's projects and appear to have a free hand in dealing with people. Port au Prince businessmen pay them for protection.

This militia gives Duvalier a hedge against the 5,000-man U.S.-trained army, which has often held the balance of power in Haiti. Created by Duvalier in 1958, the militia is now twice as large as the army.

U.S. aid since 1957 has totaled some $60 million, including $9 million in outright cash gifts. Much money has been switched to Duvalier's own projects, including maintenance of the militia.

Aware of criticism, the Kennedy administration has cut off cash grants and demanded a strict accounting of funds used to support projects directly aimed at the Haitian people. Last September aid dollars stopped coming altogether. They were resumed last week with a $7.25-million allocation for projects ranging from river valley development to training technicians.

Some critics of Duvalier were disappointed. Rumors had circulated here that aid would not be resumed unless Duvalier released political prisoners, disbanded the bogeymen and called new elections.

Supporters of U.S. aid disagreed. They contended that the Haitian people were the chief losers while aid was suspended. In that period Duvalier imposed new taxes and ordered deductions of about five per cent from all government and private salaries to support government projects.

"Our aid programs are getting through to the Haitian people," one U.S. observer insisted. "No people in the world needs help more."

Anti-Soviet Shield Not Too Effective

By CONRAD FINK

TOKYO (AP)—For more than a decade, the United States has been scattering money and men from Japan to Singapore in an attempt to build a non-Communist shield along Red China's eastern border.

Today America still carries the burden of containing the giant and the future holds little that non-communist Asian nations will assume much of the load.

These nations have not effectively banded together militarily or economically, though all have a common fear of 600 million Red Chinese.

Even the South Vietnamese, locked in a death struggle with communism, cannot suppress their centuries-old rivalry with neighvoting Cambodia. The United States, not nearby non-Communist nations, is helping South Viet Nam.

To achieve anything resembling a common front, U.S. diplomats must consider obstacles that make the unifying of non-Communist Europe look like a picnic.

A survey by Associated Press correspondents in Asia shows that these obstacles stand out:

Abject poverty and technical backwardness that prevent international trade; unenlightened leadership in some countries and lack of national unity; old quarrels that show no sign of disappearing just because China, a traditional enemy, once again threatens.

American diplomats also buck a strong Asian liking for neutralism and the desire to avoid the Red China problem if possible.

Many Hong Kong residents feel Red China will march some day and they will have to leave. A Hong Kong architect put it this way: "I am here to make a fast buck and then get out of here fast."

Neutralism confounds U.S. hopes that 94 million prosperous Japanese will assume a larger share of the anti-Communist burden. Japan avoids entanglement, even hesitating to assume Asia's economic leadership, which it can have by virtue of its industrial power.

U.S. officials would like to link Japan and South Korea in a regional partnership tying down the northern end of the envisioned non-Communist barrier. Quarrels dating back to Japan's occupation of South Korea have prevented the two nations from even opening normal diplomatic relations.

South Korea's 600,000-man army makes it one of America's strongest military allies, but the country is burdened with internal difficulties.

Nationalist China claims the ability to overthrow mainland China's Communist regime but American officials elsewhere make it clear they feel these claims are exaggerated.

The Philippines, democratic and prospering economically, is a bright spot but the United States had to supply most of the men, ships and aircraft for March maneuvers by the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization in the Philippines.

Thailand, a member of SEATO, has not put much stock in the eight-nation alliance since SEATO failed to enter the Laotian crisis. Thailand felt reassured only when the United States unilaterally pledged assistance in the event of Communist aggression from the neighboring country.

Thailand also is tied up in a centuries-old feud with Cambodia over boundaries. They broke diplomatic relations last year.

Washington has written off Laos as a positive non-Communist force apparently feeling that communism could be defeated in the field only by U.S. troops. The United States now is pushing for a government coalition of rightists, neutrals and leftists.

Prosperous Malaya is leading an attempt to rally several of its non-Communist neighbors. Malaya has proposed a federation of Malaysia, linking itself with Singapore, Brunei, North Borneo and Sarawak as one nation. Malaya also joined Thailand and the Philipines in forming the ambitious social, cultural and economic Association of Southeast Asia.

Singapore, however, is resisting the federation idea and ASA is a long way from being a strong military—or political—union.

Thus from Japan in the north to Singapore in the south, U.S. armed might forms the only effective deterrent to Red China. It is unlikely to stay that way for a long time.

Up, Down, Inside The Capitol Hill

CAPITOL HILL. By Andrew Tully. Simon and Schuster. $4.95.

There is pretty broad coverage of the whole Washington scene in this novel, but the plot is keyed to one ambitious man who wants desperately to be secretary of Defense.

His name is John Thurston, and he already is deputy secretary, practically running the department because his boss is ill. Thurston would be satisfied with the secretaryship, but he is not above speculating that it might lead to the White House.

It happens that he does not love his wife, a patrician type, and has a mistress who is a senator's secretary. But when he learns that his wife has fallen in love with a diplomat, he blocks her request for a divorce on the ground it would hamper his career.

He backs the supposedly leading candidate for the presidency, a Gov. Williams of New York, because he feels this would clinch the cabinet job for him.

But when the showdown comes in the nominating convention, some surprising things happen, and the dramatic interplay of political forces in the convention forms the most realistic part of this narrative.

Tully, a Washington newsman for years, has marshaled a huge cast for his story, including the President of the United States, leading politicians, members of the diplomatic corps and the social characters who inhabit the seat of government. He has mixed in some sex, some racial problems, and has some fun lampooning a few members of the press corps.

There is no doubt that he is equipped for a knowing presentation of these "inside" views of the Washington scene, but sometimes the sideshows are a distraction from the main event. All in all, he has written an interesting book.

Exotic Mundane Potpourri

REINHART IN LOVE. By Thomas Berger. Scribner's. $5.95.

Both the story material and the style are offbeat in this book.

It is about Carlo Reinhart, who upon being discharged from the Army returns to his Ohio town and to a series of adventures with some pretty bizarre characters.

The hero himself is a slob, not too bright and not very couth.

He gets into a mess with a real estate promoter named Claude Humbold, who later leads him into a graft-ridden folly of sewer contracting. He also gets into some nightmarish encounters with a Negro named Splendor Mainwaring, who has taken a mail order course in cheap mysticism. And Reinhart marries an absurd female, Genevieve Raven.

While these happenings are being detailed, there is a bit of by-play about G. I. housing and G. I. education. Toward the end there is a scene in which the drunken Reinhart gets caught up in a crude carnival strip-tease act which can be described only as surrealistic.

The characters in this book are gross caricatures. The dialogue often spouts forth in unexpected gushers. And the author throws in a running fire of seldom-relevant comment.

In short, this is a novel that is likely to suit people who have exotic tastes for the mundane. A dish that few cooks would be able to concoct and that few diners would be able to identify.

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

Total Now Stands At 73,625 Books

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Liberian

On April 1 the book collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library consisted of 73,625 books. New books are added to the library collection at a rate of around 700 books per month. The Standard set by the American Library Association for a library our size is 101,000 books and the library hopes to reach that goal within the next five years. Did you know that the average cost of a book added to the library is $3.30 per book and that the library spent more than 21 per cent of its income last year on the purchase of books. This is more than A.L.A. recommends and the library plans to spend 27 per cent of its funds on the collection after the new tax funds are available next year.

I hope that every property owner who reads this column will go to the polls and vote for the library tax next Tuesday. This tax is absolutely necessary if the library is to continue in operation, for the library has no other source of income. It is a local institution and funds for its maintenance come from the local source. This tax like many other taxes comes under the provision of the homestead exemption law, so in many cases the home owners do not even pay anything. If everyone who has borrowed books, or has received some sort of reference service from the library, would go out and vote, the response would be overwhelming. Please remember it is your library. You use it and should want to keep it in operation. Tuesday is the day of decision. Please remember that the polls open at 7 and close at 6.

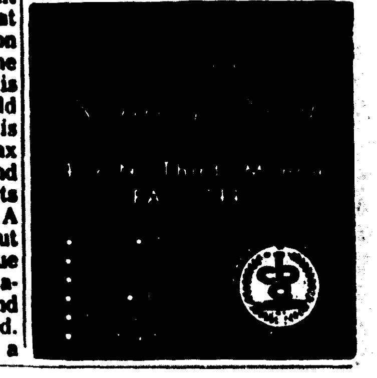
Several exciting new books were added to the collection during the past week. "The Northern Palmyra Affair" is the title of a book by Harrison E. Salisbury. This is a novel with the setting in Russia today. It is the story of remarkable woman and of the men and women surrounding her. The author is well versed about modern Russian life and he has painted a vivid picture. For mystery readers there are two new titles "Without a Trace" by Stephen Ransome and "If Anything Happens to Hester" by Anthony Morton. Both of these books are crime club selections and will have a large following.

Books of non-fiction continue to offer a great variety. "Since You Ask Me" is the title of the new book by Ann Landers. The many readers of her column will want this book, which gives a great deal of down-to-earth information about marriage, family, and the problems of adolescence. Much is being written today in the field of education. The newest title is "Suffer Little Children" by Max L. Rafferty. It is well done and presents some startling facts about our educational system. A most useful book is "All About American Holidays" by Maymue R. Krythe. This type of information is always in demand and the book will fill a definite need. David Belson is the author of a book called "How to Write Social Letters for All Occasions." This book contains suggestions and models of letters for the many problems which come up in the social world. Patrons often ask for this type of material and the library is happy to have this book.

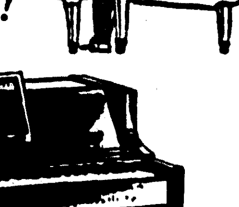
An unusual little book is a technical vocabulary in English and Spanish. This book would be most useful to the technician or engineer who is going to work in a Spanish speaking country. A perfectly beautiful new book is "The Book of Sea Shells" by Michael H. Bevans. It will be useful to the collector of sea shells and to students. Copies of this book were placed in each branch of the library and it should be widely used.

In selecting books for the library, we check all sorts of periodicals, but sometimes we miss a title for which there is a great request. This happened in the case of "Strange People" by Frank Edwards. This is a book about people who do all sorts of peculiar things. We had a number of requests for this book, before we were able to locate reviews of the book. After that we ordered copies which are now available. One of the most interesting figures of English history is Richard II, Harold F. Hutchison has written a most interesting biography of him, which he calls "The Hollow Crown." It is well done and students of English history will thoroughly enjoy it. Another new book in the field of biography is "The Prodigal Rake" by William Hickey. This book gives a most entertaining picture of eighteenth-century social life. It was written when the author had retired from active business life after the age of sixty and his memory is prodigious. Peter Quennell has done a wonderful job of editing this book. Everyone who has enjoyed the journals of Boswell will want to read "The Prodigal Rake.

Several new additions to the reference collection of the Library make it more valuable. "Who's Who, 1962" contains information about world famous figures of today. Three new volumes were given as memorial gifts to the genealogy collection of the librarey. They are three volumes of the Virginia Colonial abstracts, dealing with Essex County. One includes records from 1703 to 1706 and the other two are books of wills and deeds, one volume includes the period from 1711 to 1714 and the other the period from 1714 to 1717. These books will be most valuable to people whose ancestors came from Virginia. Truly the Public Library opens the door of the mind in may directions. Please go to the polls on Tuesday and vote to keep it open.



Built in the tradition of the magnificent Baldwin Concert Grand!



The Acrosonic by Baldwin

The same craftsmen who design the Baldwin Concert Grand also design the Acrosonic Spinet Piano.

This makes a big difference! It means that rigid standards of excellence which are applied to the Baldwin Concert Grand are also applied to the Acrosonic. The results can be seen . . . in the fine design, in the structural integrity of the Acrosonic instrument. The results can be felt, in the immediate response and patented full-blow action of the Acrosonic touch. But most important, the results can be heard . . . in the full, ringing resonance and the warm, mellow beauty of the Acrosonic Tone.

Erhard admits he intended frightening people. Less than a year ago he revalued the German mark upward. This was intended to dampen the boom by bringing in cheaper imports and reducing West Germany's skyrocketing trade surplus.

In this his aims were achieved: The boom is leveling off and trade surpluses have shrunken. Business reports mention sales leveling off and even dropping. Certain expansion projects have been canceled. The stock market has weakened.

Some economists feel Erhard's measures have hurt more than was needed.

But Erhard himself is not satisfied.

He feels that the average German must use more restraint in his demands.

While export business was slackening off during the last year, the cost of living index gained three per cent. In previous years, it had been two per cent.

Trade unions, more militant than any time since the war, took this as an argument to press for pay raises up to 10 per cent.

West German wages, the highest of the six member countries of the European Common Market, have been hiked 26 per cent in three years.

But prices have gone up and the housewives say their money buys less. So the unions had firm support for demands for new raises.

Management has had to meet them halfway. Manpower remains scarce although 500,000 workers have been brought in from Italy, Spain, Ireland and other countries.

On the heels of Erhard's appeal, the West German automobile industry announced increases in domestic prices. This amounted almost to a slap in the face for Erhard. Labor now is asking why it should be moderate if industry isn't.

Commented Heinz Nordhoff, chairman of the Volkswagen automobile plant: "Erhard should have made his appeal two or three years earlier. Now it is a little late to talk panic. The government should take action to get things in hand after the general free-for-all. Otherwise, there will be a dire end. You can't put all wages, but government spending must be kept within reasonable bounds."

Income Taxes Dying Out In Soviet Union

By PRESTON GROVER

MOSCOW (AP)— Income taxes are dying out in the Soviet Union, but the American struggling today with form 1040A should not conclude that the U.S.S.R. is a taxpayer's paradise.

Taxpayers are inescapable in the Soviet Union as elsewhere. The abolition of the income tax, proclaimed by Premier Khrushchev, is an adjustment in methods.

The income tax has never been an important source of Soviet revenue, bringing in only 7 per cent of collections. By 1965 it will be virtually ended except for a limited number of people. Artisans, such as the few cobblers, and lawyers and doctors with private practices, will continue to pay a tax of 18-43 per cent on earnings even after 1965.

On wages and salaries, income tax is going down year by year. Lower brackets—persons earning the equivalent of $40 - 60 monthly already are exempt; there are a large number in the U.S.S.R. in that category.

Other taxes lie hidden in the prices of everything people buy. Taxes are especially heavy on consumer goods. Some examples:

A Soviet-made Moskvich automobile, about the size of a Volkswagen, is sold overseas for the equivalent of $1,400. In the U.S.S.R. the price is double that.

A pint of Soviet vodka can be bought in Denmark for the equivalent of 81 cents, including tax. But when Ivan Ivanovich wants a nip, the same bottle in the U.S.S.R. costs him the equivalent of $3.50. Tax is the answer. It is particularly heavy on alcoholic beverages because the Communits party is trying to discourage drunkenness.

A tax on farmers works this way: Every year state buyers go to farms to buy up the saleable portions of the crops. The state pays far below the market price. Government buyers took about two-fifths of the wheat crop of one farm this correspondent visited. The state buyer paid the equivalent of 90 cents a bushel, about half the market price. That amounts to a heavy tax on farmers whose living standard is the lowest in the Soviet Union.

The government owns everything so practically everybody works for the state. Probably that is why income tax is being abolished. The state fixes salaries, so it makes little sense to stipulate a salary and then take back a stated amount of it in tax.

In the process of abolishing the income tax, the Soviet government is increasing salaries in the lowest brackets and cutting those in the highest.

MEXICAN DEBATE

Growing Labor Force Problem

By MORRIS W. ROSENBERG

MEXICO CITY (AP)—A harried Mexican economist pointed to a pile of reports on his desk.

"It all boils down to this," he said. "Every year we have over a million new mouths to feed. Every year we have to create 350,000 new jobs for a growing labor force. How are we going to do it?"

That question is the basis of national debate in Mexico today. On its answer depends the nation's political and economic future.

The official Bank of Mexico says Mexico's gross national product in 1961 increased by 3.5 per cent, about equal to the population growth. Result: an economic standstill.

Lack of normal investment by private enterprise is blamed for a drop in the economic index from 5.7 per cent in 1960 to 3.5 per cent last year.

Businessmen in turn blame fear of Castro-communism and uncertainty over government policies. Worried capitalists sent many million dollars out of the country last year.

The fears of Castro-communism have proved unjustified so far. There have been no signs that the government or the great majority of Mexicans are moving toward communism. In fact, there have been moves to the contrary.

Uncertainty over economic policies persists.

Businessmen cite confusion over official statements about the program of Mexicanization of foreign investments; essentially, this means 51 per cent Mexican control. They also point to government intervention in enterprises formerly in private hands, and to bureaucratic red tape.

Businessmen also are upset over a proposed constitutional amendment which would let a commission allot to workers a percentage of company profits.

The government, concerned by the economic slowdown, has announced several fiscal measures aimed at encouraging private enterprise. Finance minister Antonio Ortiz Mena has announced a program aimed at guaranteeing a development pace averaging at least five per cent over the next five years.

President Adolfo Lopez Mateos says there is plenty of room for both private and public investment to carry out industrialization.

There certainly is room. Most families lived in dwelling units of one or two rooms in 1960. Construction of low-cost housing has not kept up with demand and the housing gap is growing. Nearly half the 36 million people lack any water supply system, the Inter-American Development Bank says.

Illiteracy is nearly 40 per cent, with 1,400,000 children unable to attend school because of lack of facilities and teachers.

A little over half the population lives off agriculture, many in miserable conditions.

Average earnings for farmers are as low as 40 cents per day. Ninety-four per cent of the land is arid or semiarid. Only 11 per cent of the land was under cultivation in 1960.

This demands large scale irrigation projects. The government has undertaken them, but the need is overwhelming.

It also calls for industrialization, to create new jobs for poverty-ridden farm families. In 1947 manufactured goods accounted for 18.5 per cent of the gross national product. This figure rose to 25.6 per cent in 1961. Agriculture rose from 17.5 to 20.4 per cent.

Next to agriculture, Mexico's biggest dollar provider is the U.S. tourist. About 812,000 left $707 million last year. About 55,000 U.S. citizens live in Mexico and practically never encounter any evidence of anti-Yankeeism. True, many Mexicans harbor a resentment born of history.

U.S. armed forces twice invaded Mexico and in other periods the United States interfered in Mexican affairs.

But now, as a Mexican editor put it: "We have the strength of the weak: we can pardon the past misdeeds of the powerful."

Mexicans are grateful for U.S. assistance in times of natural disasters. Many have learned to like, and in some instances adopt, the ways of their northern neighbor.

One acute problem is the salt content of the Colorado River waters received by Mexico. Washing of U.S. lands has abruptly jumped the salinity of these waters. This threatens the Mexicali Valley area which Mexican farmers laboriously developed.

Communist are quick to exploit such incidents.

Although Communist forces are small they appear active in the country's educationaly system — in the universities and in some teachers' unions.

Castroism has lost strength partly because of attacks on the church and increasing Cuban ties to Moscow and Peiping. A pro-Castro movement inspired by leftest ex-President Lazaro Cardenas is countered by a right-of-center movement with ex-Presidents Miguel Aleman and Abelardo Rodriguez among the leaders.

The apparent aim of both movements is to influence the actions of the Partido Revolucionario Institucional which has dominated political life for 32 years. It has sought to be broad and flexible enough to encompass wide ranges of the political spectrum. Thus far it has succeeded. Its leaders say they see no threat on the political horizon, but the fact remains that it faces a crucial period.

U. S. FIGHTING

Tonton Macoute In Small Haiti

By WATSON SIMS

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti, (AP) — Here in Haiti, just 50 miles from Cuba, Uncle Sam is fighting the specter of hunger, and shadow-boxing with Tonton Macoute.

Tonton is Creole for old man; Macoute means bag. In Haitian mythology, Tonton Macoute was a terrifying bogeyman who put disobedient children into his bag and carried them off to slavery.

Today Tonton Macoute is the term often applied to President Francois Duvalier's secret militia. For want of a workable alternative, U.S. dollars help keep Duvalier and his apparatus in power. By tying economic aid to hoped-for political reforms, however, the United States is trying to bring a relaxation of Haiti's police state. For six months, it cut off economic aid funds altogether. They may be permanently stopped unless Duvalier changes his ways, in line with the reform aims of the Alliance for Progress.

In the last year Duvalier, while demanding more aid, has tightened controls and arbitrarily extended his term in office.

This former tourist paradise on Cuba's back doorstep is now perhaps the harshest police state outside the Iron Curtain.

No meeting of any kind—social, cultural or otherwise — may be held without written government permission. Entrances to all meetings are watched.

Political opponents of Duvalier have fled the country, been killed or jailed. Prominent citizens by the dozen have disappeared without trace. The press is controlled. The head of the Roman Catholic Church, to which most Haitians belong, is in exile.

The regime's enforcers are the Tonton Macoutes—militiamen who may or may not wear uniforms. They collect "voluntary contributions" to Duvalier's projects and appear to have a free hand in dealing with people. Port au Prince businessmen pay them for protection.

This militia gives Duvalier a hedge against the 5,000-man U.S.-trained army, which has often held the balance of power in Haiti. Created by Duvalier in 1958, the militia is now twice as large as the army.

U.S. aid since 1957 has totaled some $60 million, including $9 million in outright cash gifts. Much money has been switched to Duvalier's own projects, including maintenance of the militia.

Aware of criticism, the Kennedy administration has cut off cash grants and demanded a strict accounting of funds used to support projects directly aimed at the Haitian people. Last September aid dollars stopped coming altogether. They were resumed last week with a $7.25-million allocation for projects ranging from river valley development to training technicians.

Some critics of Duvalier were disappointed. Rumors had circulated here that aid would not be resumed unless Duvalier released political prisoners, disbanded the bogeymen and called new elections.

Supporters of U.S. aid disagreed. They contended that the Haitian people were the chief losers while aid was suspended. In that period Duvalier imposed new taxes and ordered deductions of about five per cent from all government and private salaries to support government projects.

"Our aid programs are getting through to the Haitian people," one U.S. observer insisted. "No people in the world needs help more."

Anti-Soviet Shield Not Too Effective

By CONRAD FINK

TOKYO (AP)—For more than a decade, the United States has been scattering money and men from Japan to Singapore in an attempt to build a non-Communist shield along Red China's eastern border.

Today America still carries the burden of containing the giant and the future holds little that non-communist Asian nations will assume much of the load.

These nations have not effectively banded together militarily or economically, though all have a common fear of 600 million Red Chinese.

Even the South Vietnamese, locked in a death struggle with communism, cannot suppress their centuries-old rivalry with neighvoting Cambodia. The United States, not nearby non-Communist nations, is helping South Viet Nam.

To achieve anything resembling a common front, U.S. diplomats must consider obstacles that make the unifying of non-Communist Europe look like a picnic.

A survey by Associated Press correspondents in Asia shows that these obstacles stand out:

Abject poverty and technical backwardness that prevent international trade; unenlightened leadership in some countries and lack of national unity; old quarrels that show no sign of disappearing just because China, a traditional enemy, once again threatens.

American diplomats also buck a strong Asian liking for neutralism and the desire to avoid the Red China problem if possible.

Many Hong Kong residents feel Red China will march some day and they will have to leave. A Hong Kong architect put it this way: "I am here to make a fast buck and then get out of here fast."

Neutralism confounds U.S. hopes that 94 million prosperous Japanese will assume a larger share of the anti-Communist burden. Japan avoids entanglement, even hesitating to assume Asia's economic leadership, which it can have by virtue of its industrial power.

U.S. officials would like to link Japan and South Korea in a regional partnership tying down the northern end of the envisioned non-Communist barrier. Quarrels dating back to Japan's occupation of South Korea have prevented the two nations from even opening normal diplomatic relations.

South Korea's 600,000-man army makes it one of America's strongest military allies, but the country is burdened with internal difficulties.

Nationalist China claims the ability to overthrow mainland China's Communist regime but American officials elsewhere make it clear they feel these claims are exaggerated.

The Philippines, democratic and prospering economically, is a bright spot but the United States had to supply most of the men, ships and aircraft for March maneuvers by the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization in the Philippines.

Thailand, a member of SEATO, has not put much stock in the eight-nation alliance since SEATO failed to enter the Laotian crisis. Thailand felt reassured only when the United States unilaterally pledged assistance in the event of Communist aggression from the neighboring country.

Thailand also is tied up in a centuries-old feud with Cambodia over boundaries. They broke diplomatic relations last year.

Washington has written off Laos as a positive non-Communist force apparently feeling that communism could be defeated in the field only by U.S. troops. The United States now is pushing for a government coalition of rightists, neutrals and leftists.

Prosperous Malaya is leading an attempt to rally several of its non-Communist neighbors. Malaya has proposed a federation of Malaysia, linking itself with Singapore, Brunei, North Borneo and Sarawak as one nation. Malaya also joined Thailand and the Philippines in forming the ambitious social, cultural and economic Association of Southeast Asia.

Singapore, however, is resisting the federation idea and ASA is a long way from being a strong military—or political—union.

Thus from Japan in the north to Singapore in the south, U.S. armed might forms the only effective deterrent to Red China. It is unlikely to stay that way for a long time.

Up, Down, Inside The Capitol Hill

CAPITOL HILL. By Andrew Tully. Simon and Schuster. $4.95.

There is pretty broad coverage of the whole Washington scene in this novel, but the plot is keyed to one ambitious man who wants desperately to be secretary of Defense.

His name is John Thurston, and he already is deputy secretary, practically running the department because his boss is ill. Thurston would be satisfied with the secretaryship, but he is not above speculating that it might lead to the White House.

It happens that he does not love his wife, a patrician type, and has a mistress who is a senator's secretary. But when he learns that his wife has fallen in love with a diplomat, he blocks her request for a divorce on the ground it would hamper his career.

He backs the supposedly leading candidate for the presidency, a Gov. Williams of New York, because he feels this would clinch the cabinet job for him.

But when the showdown comes in the nominating convention, some surprising things happen, and the dramatic interplay of political forces in the convention forms the most realistic part of this narrative.

Tully, a Washington newsman for years, has marshaled a huge cast for his story, including the President of the United States, leading politicians, members of the diplomatic corps and the social characters who inhabit the seat of government. He has mixed in some sex, some racial problems, and has some fun lampooning a few members of the press corps.

There is no doubt that he is equipped for a knowing presentation of these "inside" views of the Washington scene, but sometimes the sideshows are a distraction from the main event. All in all, he has written an interesting book.

Exotic Mundane Potpourri

REINHART IN LOVE. By Thomas Berger. Scribner's. $5.95.

Both the story material and the style are offbeat in this book.

It is about Carlo Reinhart, who upon being discharged from the Army returns to his Ohio town and to a series of adventures with some pretty bizarre characters.

The hero himself is a slob, not too bright and not very couth.

He gets into a mess with a real estate promoter named Claude Humbold, who later leads him into a graft-ridden folly of sewer contracting. He also gets into some nightmarish encounters with a Negro named Splendor Mainwaring, who has taken a mail order course in cheap mysticism. And Reinhart marries an absurd female, Genevieve Raven.

While these happenings are being detailed, there is a bit of by-play about G. I. housing and G. I. education. Toward the end there is a scene in which the drunken Reinhart gets caught up in a crude carnival strip-tease act which can be described only as surrealistic.

The characters in this book are gross caricatures. The dialogue often spouts forth in unexpected gushers. And the author throws in a running fire of seldom-relevant comment.

In short, this is a novel that is likely to suit people who have exotic tastes for the mundane. A dish that few cooks would be able to concoct and that few diners would be able to identify.

GUIDE TO GOOD READING

Total Now Stands At 73,625 Books

By FRANCES FLANDERS
Ouachita Parish Libarian

On April 1 the book collection of the Ouachita Parish Public Library consisted of 73,625 books. New books are added to the library collection at a rate of around 700 books per month. The Standard set by the American Library Association for a library our size is 101,000 books and the library hopes to reach that goal within the next five years. Did you know that the average cost of a book added to the library is $3.30 per book and that the library spent more than 21 per cent of its income last year on the purchase of books. This is more than A.L.A. recommends and the library plans to spend 27 per cent of its funds on the collection after the new tax funds are available next year.

I hope that every property owner who reads this column will go to the polls and vote for the library tax next Tuesday. This tax is absolutely necessary if the library is to continue in operation, for the library has no other source of income. It is a local institution and funds for its maintenance come from the local source. This tax like many other taxes comes under the provision of the homestead exemption law, so in many cases the home owners do not even pay anything. If everyone who has borrowed books, or has received some sort of reference service from the library, would go out and vote, the response would be overwhelming. Please remember it is your library. You use it and should want to keep it in operation. Tuesday is the day of decision. Please remember that the polls open at 7 and close at 6.

Several exciting new books were added to the collection during the past week. "The Northern Palmyra Affair" is the title of a book by Harrison E. Salisbury. This is a novel with the setting in Russia today. It is the story of remarkable woman and of the men and women surrounding her. The author is well versed about modern Russian life and he has painted a vivid picture. For mystery readers there are two new titles "Without a Trace" by Stephen Ransome and "If Anything Happens to Hester" by Anthony Morton. Both of these books are crime club selections and will have a large following.

Books of non-fiction continue to offer a great variety. "Since You Ask Me" is the title of the new book by Ann Landers. The many readers of her column will want this book, which gives a great deal of down-to-earth information about marriage, family, and the problems of adolescence. Much is being written today in the field of education. The newest title is "Suffer Little Children" by Max L. Rafferty. It is well done and presents some startling facts about our educational system. A most useful book is "All About American Holidays" by Maymue R. Krythe. This type of information is always in demand and the book will fill a definite need. David Belson is the author of a book called "How to Write Social Letters for All Occasions." This book contains suggestions and models of letters for the many problems which come up in the social world. Patrons often ask for this type of material and the library is happy to have this book.

An unusual little book is a technical vocabulary in English and Spanish. This book would be most useful to the technician or engineer who is going to work in a Spanish speaking country. A perfectly beautiful new book is "The Book of Sea Shells" by Michael H. Bevans. It will be useful to the collector of sea shells and to students. Copies of this book were placed in each branch of the library and it should be widely used.

In selecting books for the library, we check all sorts of periodicals, but sometimes we miss a title for which there is a great request. This happened in the case of "Strange People" by Frank Edwards. This is a book about people who do all sorts of peculiar things. We had a number of requests for this book, before we were able to locate reviews of the book. After that we ordered copies which are now available. One of the most interesting figures of English history is Richard II, Harold F. Hutchison has written a most interesting biography of him, which he calls "The Hollow Crown." It is well done and students of English history will thoroughly enjoy it. Another new book in the field of biography is "The Prodigal Rake" by William Hickey. This book gives a most entertaining picture of eighteenth-century social life. It was written when the author had retired from active business life after the age of sixty and his memory is prodigious. Peter Quennell has done a wonderful job of editing this book. Everyone who has enjoyed the journals of Boswell will want to read "The Prodigal Rake.

Several new additions to the reference collection of the Library make it more valuable. "Who's Who, 1962" contains information about world famous figures of today. Three new volumes were given as memorial gifts to the genealogy collection of the librarey. They are three volumes of the Virginia Colonial abstracts, dealing with Essex County. One includes records from 1703 to 1706 and the other two are books of wills and deeds, one volume includes the period from 1711 to 1714 and the other the period from 1714 to 1717. These books will be most valuable to people whose ancestors came from Virginia. Truly the Public Library opens the door of the mind in may directions. Please go to the polls on Tuesday and vote to keep it open.

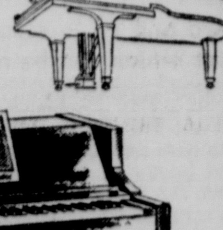
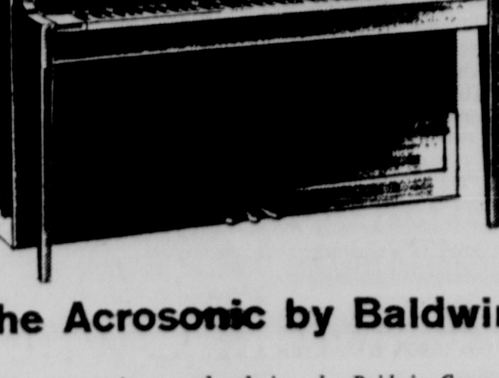
Built in the tradition of the magnificent Baldwin Concert Grand!





The Acrosonic by Baldwin

The same craftsmen who design the Baldwin Concert Grand also design the Acrosonic Spinet Piano.

This makes a big difference! It means that rigid standards of excellence which are applied to the Baldwin Concert Grand are also applied to the Acrosonic. The results can be seen . . . in the fine design, in the structural integrity of the Acrosonic instrument. The results can be felt, in the immediate response and patented full-blow action of the Acrosonic touch. But most important, the results can be heard . . . in the full, ringing resonance and the warm, mellow beauty of the Acrosonic Tone.

Business World Whirls As Steel Prices Change

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The business world whirled dizzily during the week as steel prices shot up and then fell right back down.

U.S. Steel Corp. set off the fireworks with a surprise announcement Tuesday that it was raising steel prices $6 a ton, or 3½ per cent. Other major producers followed immediately.

President Kennedy was infuriated and denounced the raise as "a wholly unjustifiable and irresponsible defiance of the public interest."

The Justice Department launched a grand jury investigation and subpoenaed records of steel companies.

Under a barrage of criticism and retaliatory action from the government, the steel front crumbled Friday.

The first break in the ranks came when Bethlehem, second to U.S. Steel in size, backed down and rescinded its rise.

Bethlehem's action came a few hours after Inland Steel, the eighth-ranked, refused to go along with the increase.

Then U.S. Steel — Big Steel — capitulated.

Its president, Leslie B. Worthington, who had made the original announcement of the price advance, issued this statement: "The price recession was made in the light of the competitive developments today and all other current circumstances including the removal of a serious obstacle to proper relations between government and business."

Both business and the government had been stunned at the price boost, coming as it did within a week after the steel industry and the United Steelworkers Union had signed a new two-year contract.

The contract provided for 10 cents an hour in fringe benefits but no wage increase in the first year. It was hailed as noninflationary.

Kennedy was coldly furious when he assailed the leading producers' action at his news conference Wednesday.

"The American people will find it hard, as I do, to accept a situation in which a tiny handful of steel executives whose pursuit of private power and profits exceeds their sense of public responsibility can show such utter contempt for the interests of 185 million Americans," he said.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara estimated the increase would add $1 billion to the nation's defense bill. And he ordered the government and its contractors to seek to buy steel from companies which had not raised prices.

The Justice Department was considering efforts to break up U.S. Steel. The Federal Trade Commission, the House Judiciary Committee and the Senate Antitrust subcommittee started investigaions.

Only 24 hours before U.S. Steel backed off, its chairman, Roger M. Blough, strongly defended the price hike as overdue and contended that it would have little effect on the economy.

The stock market's first reaction was to bid steel shares higher. Then, as the realization of the government's wrathful attitude and the competitive situation dawned, steel stock prices sank and the market hit its low of the year on Thursday. As the steel industry began rescinding the boost Friday steel shares started recovering.

Steel production fell off during the week as users stopped stockpiling after the labor contract agreement eliminated possibility of a strike-induced shortage. Output totaled 2,361,000 tons, down 2.3 per cent from the previous week.

President Kennedy stepped into another hot issue during the week when he halted the West Coast shipping strike by taking action under the Taft-Hartley law. At his instructions an injunction was obtained to stop a walkout of 6,000 seamen for at least 80 days. Kennedy said the strike imperiled the national health and safety.

Easter shopping neared its peak and merchants were in an optimistic mood. They had new figures from the Commerce Department to show that retail sales in March swelled to a record rate of $19.3 billion. This compared with the previous record of $19.1 billion established last November and the $18.8 billion level of February.

Heavy sales of automobiles were the key to the rise.

Car sales in March exceeded production by 14,000. This indicated that assembly lines probably will be busy for the next three months.

Output during the week was estimated at 142,000 passenger cars, off slightly from the 145,107 turned out the previous week, the best of the year.

The Census Bureau reported that U.S. exports in February climbed to the highest level in nearly five years. Value of exported civilian goods totaled $1,828,200,000 a gain of 10 per cent over January and 5 per cent over February 1961.

The dollar value of heavy construction contracts signed in the first three months was the highest since 1956. The total of $5,459,000,000 was 11 per cent ahead of a year earlier.

MORE THAN 113 million gas appliances now are in daily use in U. S. homes. Finding increased use each year are home - size gas air conditioners which now total about 37,000.

IN GASOLINE

Numerous Factors Led To Price Wars

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — The chairman of the American Petroleum Institute says the rash of gasoline price wars that developed last year result from several factors.

L. F. McCollum, president of Continental Oil Co., lists these contributing factors:

1. A slower growth rate in petroleum demand.

2. Continued expansion of industry facilities.

3. Excess refining and producing capacity.

"These factors, together with disruptive marketing practices, produced widespread retail gasoline price wars during the year," McCollum said in Continental's 1961 annual report to stockholders.

Monroe E. Spaght, president of Shell Oil Co., indicated agreement in his annual report.

"As long as the industry has substantial excess capacities, we can expect chronic oversupply with vigorous competition in the market place," Spaght told Shell's stockholders.

Depressed products prices, particularly for gasoline, drew comment in numerous company reports on 1961 operations.

Many companies reported increased net incomes and sales volumes but said the depressed prices prevented better records.

The annual report of the Ohio Oil Co. summarized the situation this way:

"Continuing weakness in prices restricted the growth in value of our gasoline sales to 1.4 per cent over 1960 in contrast with a 4.3 per cent increase in gallonage."

K. S. Adams, board chairman of Phillips Petroleum Co., said intense industry-wide competition in the U.S., coupled with supplies often far in excess of demands, caused severe produce price weaknesses.

Retail prices for gasoline were hardest hit, but other product prices also felt the impact during part of the year, Adams said.

John E. Swearingen, president of Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), said increased production, cost control, and new investment programs made increased earnings possible despite higher labor costs and the depressed gasoline prices that resulted from intensive competition.

"Prices are always a matter of uncertainty in our competitive industry," he said. "The price of gasoline, our largest volume product, dropped at times the last half of 1961 to the lowest level we have experienced in 10 years. Although there has been a slight improvement since the first of the year, gasoline prices still remain far below those of a year ago."

M. J. Rathbone, president of Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), said 1961 results were gratifying when viewed against a background of rigorous competition prevailing in the world oil industry.

"This competition has called for further improvements in our operational and organizational efficiency," Rathbone said.

McCollum said the economic environment in which the domestic petroleum industry operates has altered materially since 1958.

He said the industry's sales volume in 1959, for the first time in many years, showed less gain in a period of general business improvement than did the total economy.

"This experience was repeated in 1961 and results in part from the fact expenditures for services and government have become increasingly significant elements in the total economy," he said. "Growth in these elements brings about smaller increases in demand for energy than does growth in other sectors."

He said the industry should recognize the new environment.

"The operating policies of oil company managements should become more realistically attuned to market demand," he said. "The long-term outlook is for steady progress by Continental and the domestic petroleum industry generally, with occasional recurrences of short-term depressants of the type which were present during 1961."

Nixon Pays Ike Visit While On Campaign Tour

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP) — Richard M. Nixon combined a gubernatorial campaign swing with an overnight stay at the winter home of former President and Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Both declined to say whether they talked politics.

Nixon lunched with the Eisenhowers Friday in their cottage at the edge of El Dorado Country Club.

Earlier he played what he said was his first full round of golf in four years. Using a borrowed set of clubs and borrowed shoes, he shot a respectable 85. His companions were Dallas oilman Pollard Simons, and Theodore Lyons and K. S. Adams, vice president and president, respectively, of the Phillips Oil Co.

Nixon had spent the night at the Eisenhower cottage. He arrived there from nearby Indio and Palm Springs where he was campaigning for the Republican nomination for governor in California's June 5 primary election. He returned to Los Angeles later Saturday.

Exhibit Of New Grocery Sacks Planned By Olin

A line of grocery sacks specially treated to resist breakthrough caused by moisture from frozen foods will be exhibited for the first time at the Super Market Institute Show, May 13-16, at the McCormick Place Lakefront Exposition Center, Chicago.

The bags are produced by the forest products operations of the Packaging Division of Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation in West Monroe.

Jack R. Peat, product manager-bags, said these special sacks eliminate the need for costly double-bagging at the supermarket check-out counter.

Mississippi Oil Field Set For Extension

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Deep oil logs about one half mile north of the Lazy Creek field of Pike County assures extension of the field for additional drillings.

Victor Smith's et al No. 1 Fielder, sec. 9-4n-8e, with production tests soon beginning, has reported 28 feet of oil sand logged in the Tuscaloosa formation at 10,721 feet.

The Lazy Creek area is about a mile west of the Little Creek field.

Two apparent field finds are awaiting final completion tests in Franklin County.

Southwest Gas Producing Co. is erecting storage tanks after testing its Hale No. 1, sec. 34-7n-2e, at the rate of 99 barrels oil daily from a Tuscaloosa formation at 10,512-14 feet.

The wildcat is located two miles southeast of the small Roxie field.

The second wildcat, Crow-Greyhound Inc. No. 1 Board of Supervisors, sec. 30-6n-2e, is awaiting installation of a pumping unit. The well swabbed oil from perforations at 6,363-64 feet in the Wilcox formation but would not flow. The venture is in the Oldenburg field.

Humble Oil and Refining Co. continues testing of the U.S.A. No. 1, sec. 13-9n-8w, located in the semi-shallow yellow creek field of Wayne County.

The well has been under test for the past several months. It has three strings of tubing cemented to 12,300 feet. The Cotton Valley and Houston zones are reported to have tested high gravity oil with reports that a third zone in the Rodessa sand is flowing considerable amounts of oil.

The current producing level is 5,100 feet in the Eutaw formation.

In the Lake Bourne, La., area, Shell Oil Co. is below 16,000 feet in its wildcat. The offshore operation is less than 900 feet from the Mississippi waters off Hancock county. Oil shows were reported logged below 12,000 feet.

Mississippi to date has no offshore production, and if the well is completed as a producer, drilling in the Mississippi waters would begin.

L. O. McMillan is below 12,290 feet in his Copiah County wildcat, the Southern Package Crrp. No. 1, sec. 27-1n-3w, located six miles northwest of Hazelhurst.

Field drilling during the past week completed two new oilers.

At West Dexter in Walthall County, Gulf Coast Drilling and Exporation Co., Inc., completed its Herring No. 1, sec. 3-1n-12e, flowing 626 barrels of oil daily from 9,635-52 feet.

Calto-Gulmon finaled the Johnson No. 5, sec. 16-4n-1w, pumping 91 barrels of oil per day from a sand at 6,685-91 feet in the Kelly field of Wilkinson County.

Spot Cotton Price Steady During Week

NEW YORK (AP)—Spot cotton prices held steady last week but cotton futures were slightly lower.

At the close of trading Friday active futures contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange showed losses for the week of 20 to 60 cents a bale.

In the previous week they had been up 25 cents to down 15 cents a bale.

The trend reflected a continued absence of new developments, many observers said. Some consideration reportedly was given to a possible tightening of the supply of free cotton and the possibility of some improvemnt in exports.

Offerings were furnished through spot house selling and selling and scattered commission house liquidation.

Planting reports from the western belt showed only a small portion of Oklahoma's intended acreage planted so far. Planting in Texas was running slower than at this time in 1961.

United States exports for the week ended last Tuesday were estimated by the Cotton Exchange Service Bureau at 88,000 bales, compared with 101,000 a week earlier and 102,000 in the comparable week one year earlier.

For the the season through 10 exports totaled 3,628,000 bales, compared with 5,240,000 to the comprable date in 1961, the bureau reported.

No Charges Due In Gun Deaths Of State Pair

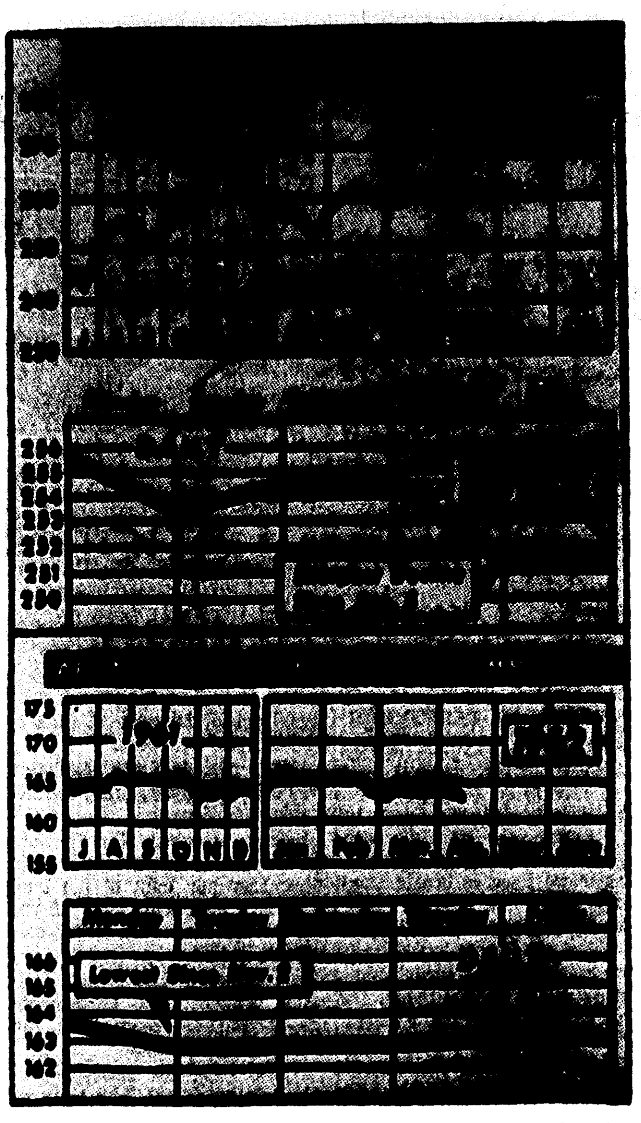
JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The death of a woman and her extranged husband in a city cafe here Thursday apparently happened during a struggle over a revolver.

Chief of Detectives M. B. Pierce said Saturday no charges would be filed in the death of Billy D. Stroope, 34, of Bossier City, La., and his 33-year-old wife, Ruby Lee Leach Stroope of Jackson.

"Witnesses to the shooting told us that they were killed fighting over a revolver," Pierce said.

Pierce said they were fatally shot while scuffling for possession of a 38-revolver. The owner of Hood's Welcome Inn, Jessie A. (Bill) Hood, was also involved but wasn't injured.

Officers said Mrs. Stroope claimed her husband beat her in Louisiana and she was seeking a divorce.



THE ASSOCIATED Press average of 60 stocks declined for the fourth straight week when it closed today at 251.7 from 255.7 a week ago. It was the sharpest weekly break since early January. The Commodity Index, led by industrials, declined for the second straight week, closing today at 163.0 from 163.7 a week earlier. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Three Completions In Monroe District

Activity was well dispersed last week over the 14 parish area of the Monroe Oil and Gas District, with reports here indicating finals on three wells, according to Manager Duncan S. Cook — one each in Catahoula, Concordia and LaSalle Parishes.

Cook's report, released yesterday through the local office of the minerals division of the Louisiana Conservation Commission, further showed staking during the week at a total of 18 new locations. Most were concentrated in Tensas Parish where sites were laid out for seven new wells, all in the Buckhorn Field. Ouachita Parish and the Monroe Field contributed one site to the total.

Ouachita, and again the Monroe Gas Field, also accounted for one of a total of 19 rigs throughout the area reported as actively drilling or testing. LaSalle Parish led the field, however, for the second week by recording nine such sites.

No recompletions were listed over the week.

There were no wells plugged and abandoned and the total on inactive sites steadied at 94. Locations numbered 46 at week's end.

Olin Package Division Has New Facility

The Packaging Division of Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation has established a new research facility at the Olin Research Center, New Haven Conn., which will utilize the research experience and skills of its own operations and of the corporation's other divisions to create new packaging materials.

In making the announcement, Robert H. Evans, corporate vice president and general manager of the division, said the laboratory's activities will complement but will be outside the normal scope of research conducted by the division's film, forest products and paper operations.

The new laboratory will be under the direction of Dr. Milton O. Schur, the division's vice president for research and development.

Initial projects will concentrate on composite structures and coatings.

In composite structures, packaging materials are combined to achieve packaging characteristics not possessed by any of them singly.

Coatings are used to create specific characteristics in packaging materials required by particular groups of products.

At the outset, close attention will be paid to the development of new materials of paper, film, foil, plastics and adhesives, Evans said.

Dr. Schur holds more than 200 patents and has contributed many articles to technical journals. His career in the paper industry started in 1919 when he joined Brown Paper Company, Berlin, N.H., as a research chemical engineer.

Olin's Packaging Division manufactures and sells a wide range of packaging materials including kraft paper and board, shipping containers, multiwall sacks, grocery bags, folding cartons and cellophane. It also produces cigarette paper and cigarette filters, Bible paper, lightweight printing paper, lumber and lumber products.

UP AND BACK DOWN

Business World Whirls As Steel Prices Change

By JACK LEFLER
AP Business News Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The business world whirled dizzily during the week as steel prices shot up and then fell right back down.

U.S. Steel Corp. set off the fireworks with a surprise announcement Tuesday that it was raising steel prices $6 a ton, or 3½ per cent. Other major producers followed immediately.

President Kennedy was infuriated and denounced the raise as "a wholly unjustifiable and irresponsible defiance of the public interest."

The Justice Department launched a grand jury investigation and subpoenaed records of steel companies.

Under a barrage of criticism and retaliatory action from the government, the steel front crumbled Friday.

The first break in the ranks came when Bethlehem, second to U.S. Steel in size, backed down and rescinded its rise.

Bethlehem's action came a few hours after Inland Steel Co., eighth-ranked, refused to go along with the increase.

Then U.S. Steel—"Big Steel"—capitulated.

Its president, Leslie B. Worthington, who had made the orginal announcement of the price advance, issued this statement: "The price recision was made in the light of the competitive developments today, and all other current circumstances including the removal of a serious obstacle to proper relations between government and business."

Both business and the government had been stunned at the price boost, coming, as it did, within a week after the steel industry and the United Steelworkers Union had signed a new two-year contract.

The contract provided for 10 cents an hour in fringe benefits but no wage increase in the first year. It was hailed as noninflationary.

Kennedy was coldly furious when he assailed the leading producers' action at his news conference Wednesday.

"The American people will find it hard, as I do, to accept a situation in which a tiny handful of steel executives whose pursuit of private power and profits exceeds their sense of public responsibility can show such utter contempt for the interests of 185 million Americans," he said.

Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara estimated the increase would add $1 billion to the nation's defense bill. And he ordered the government and its contractors to seek to buy steel from companies which had not raised prices.

The Justice Department was considering efforts to break up U.S. Steel. The Federal Trade Commission, the House Judiciary Committee and the Senate Anti-trust subcommittee started investigaions.

Only 24 hours before U.S. Steel backed off, its chairman, Roger M. Blough, strongly defended the price hike as overdue and contended that it would have little effect on the economy.

The stock market's first reaction was to bid steel shares higher. Then, as the realization of the government's wrathful attitude and the competitive situation dawned, steel stock prices sank and the market hit its low of the year on Thursday. As the steel industry began rescinding the boost Friday steel shares started recovering.

Steel production fell off during the week as users stopped stockpiling after the labor contract agreement eliminated possibility of a strike-induced shortage. Output totaled 2,361,000 tons, down 2.3 per cent from the previous week.

President Kennedy stepped into another hot issue during the week when he halted the West Coast shipping strike by taking action under the Taft-Hartley law. At his instructions an injunction was obtained to stop a walkout of 6,000 seamen for at least 80 days. Kennedy said the strike imperiled the national health and safety.

Easter shopping neared its peak and merchants were in an optimistic mood. They had new figures from the Commerce Department to show that retail sales in March swelled to a record rate of $19.3 billion. This compared with the previous record of $19.1 billion established last November and the $18.8 billion level of February.

Heavy sales of automobiles were the key to the rise.

Car sales in March exceeded production by 14,000. This indicated that assembly lines probably will be busy for the next three months.

Output during the week was estimated at 142,000 passenger cars, off slightly from the 145,107 turned out the previous week, the best of the year.

The Census Bureau reported that U.S. exports in February climbed to the highest level in nearly five years. Value of exported civilian goods totaled $1,828,200,000 a gain of 10 per cent over January and 5 per cent over February 1961.

The dollar value of heavy construction contracts signed in the first three months was the highest since 1956. The total of $5,459,000,000 was 11 per cent ahead of a year earlier.

IN GASOLINE

Numerous Factors Led To Price Wars

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) I The chairman of the American Petroleum Institute says the rash of gasoline price wars that developed last year result from several factors.

L. F. McCollum, president of Continental Oil Co., lists these contributing factors:

1. A slower growth rate in petroleum demand.

2. Continued expansion of industry facilities.

3. Excess refining and producing capacity.

"These factors, together with disruptive marketing practices, produced widespread retail gasoline price wars during the year," McCollum said in Continental's 1961 annual report to stockholders.

Monroe E. Spaght, president of Shell Oil Co., indicated agreement in his annual report.

"As long as the industry has substantial excess capacities, we can expect chronic oversupply with vigorous competition in the market place," Spaght told Shell's stockholders.

Depressed products prices, particularly for gasoline, drew comment in numerous company reports on 1961 operations.

Many companies reported increased net incomes and sales volumes but said the depressed prices prevented better records.

The annual report of the Ohio Oil Co. summarized the situation this way:

"Continuing weakness in prices restricted the growth in value of our gasoline sales to 1.4 per cent over 1960 in contrast with a 4.3 per cent increase in gallonage."

K. S. Adams, board chairman of Phillips Petroleum Co., said intense industry-wide competition in the U.S., coupled with supplies often far in excess of demands, caused severe produce price weaknesses.

Retail prices for gasoline were hardest hit, but other product prices also felt the impact during part of the year, Adams said.

John E. Swearingen, president of Standard Oil Co. (Indiana), said increased production, cost control, and new investment programs made increased earnings possible despite higher labor costs and the depressed gasoline prices that resulted from intensive competition.

"Prices are always a matter of uncertainty in our competitive industry," he said. "The price of gasoline, our largest volume product, dropped at times the last half of 1961 to the lowest level we have experienced in 10 years. Although there has been a slight improvement since the first of the year, gasoline prices still remain far below those of a year ago."

M. J. Rathbone, president of Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), said 1961 results were gratifying when viewed against a background of rigorous competition prevailing in the world oil industry.

"This competition has called for further improvements in our operational and organizational efficiency," Rathbone said.

McCollum said the economic environment in which the domestic petroleum industry operates has altered materially since 1958.

He said the industry's sales volume in 1959, for the first time in many years, showed less gain in a period of general business improvement than did the total economy.

"This experience was repeated in 1961 and results in part from the fact expenditures for services and government have become increasingly significant elements in the total economy," he said. "Growth in these elements brings about smaller increases in demand for energy than does growth in other sectors."

He said the industry should recognize the new environment.

"The operating policies of oil company managements should become more realistically attuned to market demand," he said. "The long-term outlook is for steady progress by Continental and the domestic petroleum industry generally, with occasional recurrences of short-term depressants of the type which were present during 1961."

Nixon Pays Ike Visit While On Campaign Tour

PALM DESERT, Calif. (AP)—Richard M. Nixon combined a gubernatorial campaign swing with an overnight stay at the winter home of former President and Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Both declined to say whether they talked politics.

Nixon lunched with the Eisenhowers Friday in their cottage at the edge of El Dorado Country Club.

Earlier he played what he said was his first full round of golf in four years. Using a borrowed set of clubs and borrowed shoes, he shot a respectable 85. His companions were Dallas oilman Pollard Simons, and Theodore Lyons and K. S. Adams, vice president and president, respectively, of the Phillips Oil Co.

Nixon had spent the night at the Eisenhower cottage. He arrived there from nearby Indio and Palm Springs where he was campaigning for the Republican nomination for governor in California's June 5 primary election. He returned to Los Angeles later Saturday.

Exhibit Of New Grocery Sacks Planned By Olin

A line of grocery sacks specially treated to resist breakthrough caused by moisture from frozen foods will be exhibited for the first time at the Super Market Institute Show, May 13-16, at the McCormick Place Lakefront Exposition Center, Chicago.

The bags are produced by the forest products operations of the Packaging Division of Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation in West Monroe.

Jack R. Peat, product manager-bags, said these special sacks eliminate the need for costly double-bagging at the supermarket check-out counter.

Mississippi Oil Field Set For Extension

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Deep oil logs about one half mile north of the Lazy Creek field of Pike County assures extension of the field for additional drillings.

Victor Smith's et al No. 1 Fielder, sec. 9-4n-8e, with production tests soon beginning, has reported 28 feet of oil sand logged in the Tuscaloosa formation at 10,721 feet.

The Lazy Creek area is about a mile west of the Little Creek field.

Two apparent field finds are awaiting final completion tests in Franklin County.

Southwest Gas Producing Co. is erecting storage tanks after testing its Hale No. 1, sec. 34-7n-2e, at the rate of 99 barrels oil daily from a Tuscaloosa formation at 10,512-14 feet.

The wildcat is located two miles southeast of the small Roxie field.

The second wildcat, Crow-Greyhound Inc. No. 1 Board of Supervisors, sec. 30-6n-2e, is awaiting installation of a pumping unit. The well swabbed oil from perforations at 6,363-64 feet in the Wilcox formation but would not flow. The venture is in the Oldenburg field.

Humble Oil and Refining Co. continues testing of the U.S.A. No. 1, sec. 13-9n-8w, located in the semi-shallow yellow creek field of Wayne County.

The well has been under test for the past several months. It has three strings of tubing cemented to 12,300 feet. The Cotton Valley and Houston zones are reported to have tested high gravity oil with reports that a third zone in the Rodessa sand is flowing considerable amounts of oil

The current producing level is 5,100 feet in the Eutaw formation.

In the Lake Bourne, La., area, Shell Oil Co. is below 16,000 feet in its wildcat. The offshore operation is less than 900 feet from the Mississippi waters off Hancock county. Oil shows were reported logged below 12,000 feet.

Mississippi to date has no offshore production, and if the well is completed as a producer, drilling in the Mississippi waters would begin.

L. O. McMillan is below 12,290 feet in his Copiah County wildcat, the Southern Package Crrp. No. 1, sec. 27-1n-3w, located six miles northwest of Hazelhurst.

Field drilling during the past week completed two new oilers.

At West Dexter in Walthall County, Gulf Coast Drilling and Exporation Co., Inc., completed its Herring No. 1, sec. 3-1n-12e, flowing 626 barrels of oil daily from 9,635-52 feet.

Calto-Gulmon finaled the Johnson No. 5, sec. 16-4n-1w, pumping 91 barrels of oil per day from a sand at 6,685-91 feet in the Kelly field of Wilkinson County.

Spot Cotton Price Steady During Week

NEW YORK (AP)—Spot cotton prices held steady last week but cotton futures were slightly lower.

At the close of trading Friday active futures contracts on the New York Cotton Exchange showed losses for the week of 20 to 60 cents a bale.

In the previous week they had been up 25 cents to down 15 cents a bale.

The trend reflected a continued absence of new developments, many observers said. Some consideration reportedly was given to a possible tightening of the supply of free cotton and the possibility of some improvemnt in exports.

Offerings were furnished through spot house selling and selling and scattered commission house liquidation.

Planting reports from the western belt showed only a small portion of Oklahoma's intended acreage planted so far. Planting in Texas was running slower than at this time in 1961.

United States exports for the week ended last Tuesday were estimated by the Cotton Exchange Service Bureau at 88,000 bales, compared with 101,000 a week earlier and 102,000 in the comparable week one year earlier.

For the the season through 10 exports totaled 3,628,000 bales, compared with 5,240,000 to the comprable date in 1961, the bureau reported.

No Charges Due In Gun Deaths Of State Pair

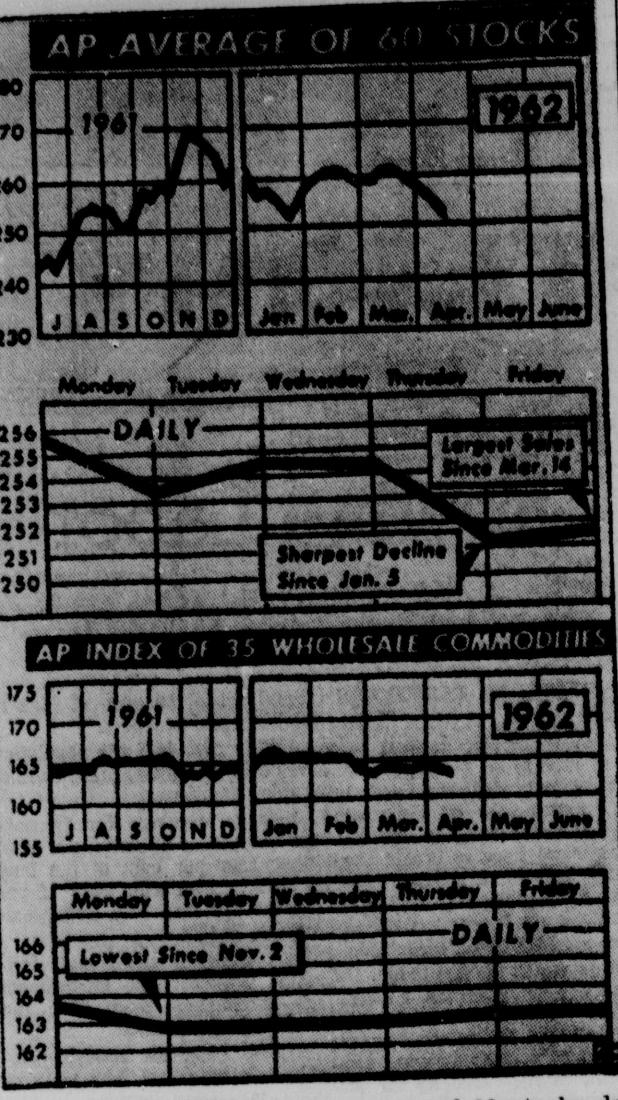
JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The death of a woman and her ex-tranged husband in a city cafe here Thursday apparently happened during a struggle over a revolver.

Chief of Detectives M. B. Pierce said Saturday no charges would be filed in the death of Billy D. Stroope, 34, of Bossier City, La., and his 33-year-old wife, Ruby Lee Leach Stroope of Jackson.

"Witnesses to the shooting told us that they were killed fighting over a revolver," Pierce said.

Pierce said they were fatally shot while scuffling for possession of a 38-revolver. The owner of Hood's Welcome Inn, Jessie A. (Bill) Hood, was also involved but wasn't injured.

Officers said Mrs. Stroope claimed her husband beat her in Louisiana and she was seeking a divorce.



THE ASSOCIATED Press average of 60 stocks declined for the fourth straight week when it closed today at 251.7 from 255.7 a week ago. It was the sharpest weekly break since early January. The Commodity Index, led by industrials, declined for the second straight week, closing today at 163.0 from 163.7 a week earlier. (AP Wirephoto Chart)

Three Completions In Monroe District

Activity was well dispersed last week over the 14 parish area of the Monroe Oil and Gas District, with reports here indicating finals on three wells, according to Manager Duncan S. Cook — one each in Catahoula, Concordia and La-Salle Parishes.

Cook's report, released yesterday through the local office of the minerals division of the Louisiana Conservation Commission, further showed staking during the week at a total of 18 new locations. Most were concentrated in Tensas Parish where sites were laid out for seven new wells, all in the Buckhorn Field. Ouachita Parish and the Monroe Field contributed one site to the total.

Ouachita, and again the Monroe Gas Field, also accounted for one of a total of 19 rigs throughout the area reported as actively drilling or testing. LaSalle Parish led the field, however, for the second week by recording nine such sites.

No recompletions were listed over the week.

There were no wells plugged and abandoned and the total on inactive sites steadied at 94. Locations numbered 46 at week's end.

Olin Package Division Has New Facility

The Packaging Division of Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation has established a new research facility at the Olin Research Center, New Haven Conn., which will utilize the research experience and skills of its own operations and of the corporation's other divisions to create new packaging materials.

In making the announcement, Robert H. Evans, corporate vice president and general manager of the division, said the laboratory's activities will complement but will be outside the normal scope of research conducted by the division's film, forest products and paper operations.

The new laboratory will be under the direction of Dr. Milton O. Schur, the division's vice president for research and development.

Initial projects will concentrate on composite structures and coatings.

In composite structures, packaging materials are combined to achieve packaging characteristics not possessed by any of them singly.

Coatings are used to create specific characteristics in packaging materials required by particular groups of products.

At the outset, close attention will be paid to the development of new materials of paper, film, foil, plastics and adhesives, Evans said.

Dr. Schur holds more than 200 patents and has contributed many articles to technical journals. His career in the paper industry started in 1919 when he joined Brown Paper Company, Berlin, N.H., as a research chemical engineer.

Olin's Packaging Division manufactures and sells a wide range of packaging materials including kraft paper and board, shipping containers, multiwall sacks, grocery bags, folding cartons and cellophane. It also produces cigarette paper and cigarette filters, Bible paper, lightweight printing paper, lumber and lumber products.

NATCHEZ, Miss. (Special) — Oil drilling operations in Duncan Park, the city operated and owned municipal park, can now be authorized and the city officials have been notified that they can lease the park property for oil development.

Post-mortem thoughts after a photo gathering are in order now that New York City's 1962 International Photo Fair has become history.

Though it was rated successful, with an attendance of 60,000 people for the nine-day affair, many camera fans missed some of the most interesting or instructive events simply because they failed to study the detailed listed program. I stopped to chat with some persons wandering around the exhibits and discovered how few had taken the time to glance over the program which they got at the entrance. In many cases, a topic of specific interest could be going on while the attendee was drifting casually around.

It makes sense, therefore, for any camera fan attending any photo convention, regional meeting, seminar or exhibition to scrutinize the program first for items of personal interest. These should be circled and the time noted so as not to be overlooked or crowded out of the day's activities.

Knowing the time schedule in advance is helpful also in getting good seats at these events. By arriving some minutes early, there is usually a choice location for better visibility or audibility.

A photo gathering generally brings together a varied group of experts to talk about their specialties. Perhaps not enough camera fans think of bringing their pet problems or questions about lenses, slide mounting, home movies, color printing, etc., to these authorities while they're handy. It would be a good idea for a fan to jot down the things that puzzle him and to confront the qualified specialist. They are usually most generous with their time in an effort to help a fellow photographer.

Photo fans, like their cameras and equipment, come in different shapes, sizes, ability and points of origin. Among the unforgettable characters encountered at the photo fair were:

The gadget hound. He haunted the exhibit booths studying the new gadgets. He never took pictures or even looked at a camera but any accessory that was faster, sharper, automated or eliminated something else excited his attention.

The collector. He started with a give-away shopping bag and methodically picked up from each counter one sample of each available piece of free literature. Was he an inventor looking for ideas? An advertising salesman compiling a mailing list? Or just a voracious reader when he gets home? We'll never know — I didn't ask.

The 'cheesecake' snapper. He took pictures only when the models wore bathing suits and kept shooting just as fast as he could change flashbulbs even when the pose hadn't changed. A talented Japanese dancer in colorful Oriental costume seen earlier evoked no picture-taking impulse, however.

The 'head hunter.' This gentleman, on opening day, asked my daughter to pose. He came to the fair every day, studied people, asked many for permission to take their picture and was seldom refused. Just before the fair's end, I ran into him again and we chatted. Turned out that he specialized only in shooting three-dimensional, extreme close-ups of women and children exclusively. He carried a hand-viewer with him and we looked at some of the pictures he had taken that week. They were of excellent quality which he attributed to the combination of Kodachrome film and gas-filled SF flashbulbs. But instead of a series of portraits, the pictures looked like an anthropological study of the female species!

It all comes under the heading of photography!

'SWEET BIRD OF YOUTH,' starring Geraldine Page and Paul Newman, opens Wednesday at the Jim Theatre. The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production is based on the Tennessee Williams play and also stars Shirley Knight, Ed Begley and Rip Torn.

FAVORABLE

We have heard so many favorable comments and compliments about the set. After seeing it you will agree we know that it is just beautiful. It was built by Richard Clark and George Patterson, and largely of corrugated board. Although very inexpensive, it is one of our best sets to date.

There was a joint trustees and board meeting this past week. The trustees present were I. T. Landy, Carl Slakter, Louis D. Smith, Mac Ward, Frances Flanders, Beryl Franklin, Roz Haas, John Pierpont and Jackie Woods. Richard Clark, executive director of the Monroe Little Theatre, gave a splendid talk about the current Broadway plays. Of all the plays he believes that the best of the year is "A Man for All Seasons." The Board members and trustees then adjourned to the Strauss Playhouse where they viewed the sound equipment.

REWORKED

This equipment has been completely reworked by Howard and Arthur Griffith, and is now more than adequate. We are certainly grateful to the Griffiths for their contribution to this phase of our theatre. Mrs. Ethel Boardman, hospitality chairman, then served refreshments to the entire group in the lobby of the theatre.

Bernard and Betty Biedenharn (Betty is secretary of the Little Theatre) are traveling around these days. Their schedule included San Antonio, Las Vegas and the Worlds Fair at Seattle. Also, patron members, Harold and Jackie Woods have just departed on a trip to the far East. Among the cities they will be visiting are Tokyo, Hong Kong and Bangkok.

Camera Notes

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Post-mortem thoughts after a photo gathering are in order now that New York City's 1962 International Photo Fair has become history.

Though it was rated successful, with an attendance of 60,000 people for the nine-day affair, many camera fans missed some of the most interesting or instructive events simply because they failed to study the detailed listed program. I stopped to chat with some persons wandering around the exhibits and discovered how few had taken the time to glance over the program which they got at the entrance. In many cases, a topic of specific interest could be going on while the attendee was drifting casually around.

It makes sense, therefore, for any camera fan attending any photo convention, regional meeting, seminar or exhibition to scrutinize the program first for items of personal interest. These should be circled and the time noted so as not to be overlooked or crowded out of the day's activities.

Knowing the time schedule in advance is helpful also in getting good seats at these events. By arriving some minutes early, there is usually a choice location for better visibility or audibility.

A photo gathering generally brings together a varied group of experts to talk about their specialties. Perhaps not enough camera fans think of bringing their pet problems or questions about lenses, slide mounting, home movies, color printing, etc., to these authorities while they're handy. It would be a good idea for a fan to jot down the things that puzzle him and to confront the qualified specialist. They are usually most generous with their time in an effort to help a fellow photographer.

Photo fans, like their cameras and equipment, come in different shapes, sizes, ability and points of origin. Among the unforgettable characters encountered at the photo fair were:

Eigin Baylor Scores 61 To Carry LA Over Bostsn, 126-121

JOHN UELSES, of Miami, Fla., goes over the bar at 15 feet, five inches to win the pole vault event at the Southwestern relays in Lafayette yesterday afternoon. George Davis, of Arizona State, also cleared the same height, but Uelses was awarded the victory because he missed fewer times. Both Uelses and Davis failed in their attempts to vault 15 feet, 10 inches. (AP Wirephoto)

Lions Vault Int o First; Down Northea st Twice

HAMMOND (Special) — Southeastern's Lions vaulted back into first place in the GSC baseball race here yesterday by shuting out Northeast State twice, 5-0, 4-0.

The conference victories upped Southeastern's mark to 5-1 in league play and 16-2 overall.

Coach George Luffey's Indians now stand 4-3 in GSC action and 7-5 for the full campaign. The Tribe will be in Lafayette Monday for a twinbill with the Southwestern Bulldogs.

In yesterday's games, Southeastern's pitching proved to be too strong for the Indians.

Roalnd Oubre fired a six-hitter at Northeast in the opening contest and Bob Hardy followed this performance with a strong four-hit hob to give the Lions both ends of the doubleheader.

After three scoreless innings in the first game, Southeastern came up with four big runs in the fourth on four straight hits, including a three run homer by Monty Crook.

Ernie Robertson began the bombardment with a single, Earl Herman followed with another, and Tony Alello promptly cracked the third in succession to plate Robertson. Crook then walloped his four- bagger to left center for the other three runs of the inning.

The Lions got their other rally in the fifth on a walk to Jerome Mahfouz and a double by Jim Ruddick.

Northeast's most serious threat came in the seventh inning.

With one out, Charley Dykes got a single, his second of the day, and Bo Dick Smith followed with another hit. On the hit Dykes attempted to advance to third, but was thrown out on a fine throw by Centerfiled Billy Lander.

Donnie Brunson then walked, and freshman Dave MCarty came off the bench and collected a pinch hit single to center to keep the rally going. Oubre finally put a halt to the uprising by getting Eddie McGowen on a grounder to first.

In its second victory of the day, Southeastern scored one run in the third inning on two hits and a throwing error by Northeast.

The Lions plated three more runs in the fifth on two singles, two walks, and a two run double to right field by Hardy.

The Indians' biggest threat came in the third when they loaded the bases with one man out on a base hit by McCarty, an error and a single by John Pace.

McCarty was then forced at home when Phil Petras grounded to third, and Smith grounded out to end the inning.

Bulldogs Clobber Demon Nine In 2

RUSTON (Special) Louisiana Tech climbed back into contention in the Gulf States Conference race here Saturday afternoon by sweeping a twinbill from Northwestern State 7-1 and 10-0.

Charley Fuller, the GSC's outstanding performer a year ago, burled a three-hitter in the opener and hit a two-run homer to aid his own cause.

Sophomore standout George Woodson three a brilliant one-hitter at the Demons in the second contest and was supported by outfielder Jim Opel's two three-run homers and seven runs batted in.

Woodson walked one and struck out five in facing two over the minimum number of batters in the nightcap.

The only hit off Woodson was a line single by Julian Vienne in the first.

After Fuller's two-run homer gave Tech a 3-0 in the second inning of the opener, the Bulldogs got four more in the fourth on an error, singles by Richard Bell and Max Lewis and doubles by John Cordaro and Sonny Parker.

Opel provided most of the fireworks in the second game. He hit consecutive homers in the third and fourth and drove in another marker with a bases-loaded pass.

Ronald Roy and Don Scribber were the losers for the Demons, both being routed in the early innings.

Tech travels to Lake Charles Monday for a doubleheader with McNeese.

Texas Southern Topples Relay In Pelican Run

BATON ROUGE (AP) —Texas Southern's crack relay team shattered the meet record for the 440 in preliminaries of the Pelican State Relays Saturday.

The relay squad from the all-Negro school from Houston aimed for another perfect sweep of all relays in Saturday night's finals.

The Texas Southern team ran the 440 in :41.3, shaving 2-10ths of a second off the record it set in 1960 here and tied last year.

Indian Splurge In First Tops Senators, 6-4

CLEVELAND (AP)—A six-run Cleveland outburst in the first inning enabled right-hander Gary Bell to beat the Washington Senators 6-4 Saturday.

Bell, bidding for a starting assignment after a poor showing in spring training, was blasted for a dozen hits but managed to protect the early lead. He gave up a three-run homer to the Senators' Dale Long in the seventh inning and a ninth-inning home run to Dan O'Connell.

Lakers Now Lead 3-2 In Title Series

By BOB HOOBINO

BOSTON (AP) — Battling Los Angeles moved to the threshold of unseating Boston from the National Basketball Association title 126-121 Saturday night behind the record - shattering 61-point effort by incredible Elgin Baylor and last - minute help from Jerry West.

The Lakers lead in the best-of-7 playoff series final, 3-2.

Baylor tore up the NBA championship final record book with his relentless scoring. The Army private on leave got six fast points 54 seconds from the end to move the Lakers from a 116-114 deficit to a 120-117 lead.

While Sam Jones kept the Celtics alive with two field goals, Laker Jim Krebs hit a long jumper from the corner for only his second field goal of the night, maintaining the edge for the winners.

Los Angeles took time out with 16 seconds left, leading 122-121, and on an out-of-bounds play West was fouled driving for the basket. He connected on both free throws. Just at the buzzer, he hit a jump shot for the final count, bringing his point total to 24.

For much of the game, it appeared Boston's noted teamwork would overcome Baylor's individual brilliance. But every time the Celtics were on the verge of putting the game away, their younger goes stormed from behind again.

Tom Heinsohn scored 30 points while Sam Jones and Bill Russell added 26 apiece for the losers.

Baylor's hottest period was the first when he got 18 of the Lakers' 31 points. His 61 total far exceeded the previous title series record of 50 points by Bob Pettit of St. Louis in 1958 against Boston.

Baylor had 33 points in the first half, smashing the old mark of 29, set by Joe Fulks of Philadelphia in 1947 and tied by Pettit four years ago.

In the final analysis, the vital game which may have tolled the death knell for the Celtics—who have won three straight titles and four in five years—appeared to be settled on a combination of talent plus youth.

The Celtics on numerous occasions staged hot-handed sprees but their foes continually came back.

For much of three periods Baylor put on an incredible exhibition, often looking so tired that he appeared to be arm weary as he launched his patterned jump and running hook shots.

Boston ran 12 straight points on the winners late in the third period for a 94-84 bulge and was still ahead by 10 early in the last quarter. But an eight-point spree by Baylor and West tied the score at 112-all. There were two more ties before Baylor, Krebs and West nailed it down.

Los Angeles needs only a victory on its hoome court Monday night to wrap up the first championship for a Lakers team since 1954 and its first in Los Angeles.

Giants Defeat Redlegs, 13-6; Still Unbeaten

By DICK BARNES

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Defending National League champion Cincinnati fell apart in an amazing display of fielding ineptitude against slugging San Francisco Saturday, losing 13-6.

The Reds made six errors in the first three innings and threw in two balks as the unbeaten league-leading Giants swept to their fifth straight win. Cincinnati has lost five of six.

Orlando Cepeda and Felipe Alou each homered twice in the 13-hit San Francisco attack.

Souchak, Casper Lead Into Finals

By KEN ALYTA

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Defending champion Mike Souchak and Billy Casper, playing in the final threesome, moved into the 54-hole lead of the Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament Saturday with 207 totals.

They head into Sunday's final round of the $35,000 tournament with a two-stroke edge over aging but ever-dangerous Sam Snead and Jerry Steelsmith, a young redhead seeking his first victory on tour.

Souchak shot a one-under 70 and Casper a 68 for their 6-under-par totals for the three-quarter mark.

Snead, who has won here s nvtimes, including the inau in 1938, moved up with the day's best round, 67. Steelsmith, who played with the co-leaders, shot 70. Two weeks ago he lost a one-hole playoff to Dave Marr for top money in the Azalea Open at Wilmington, N.C.

Alone in fifth place at 210, three shots off the top, was Billy Maxwell, who shared the 36-hole lead with Souchak.

Another shot away, still with an outside chance, were Julius Boros, Bruce Crampton and Jim Ferrier.

The field of 91 players came up with 11 sub par rounds over the par 71 Sedgefield Country Club course, a 7,000-yarder.

Masters Champion Arnold Palmer rose from a tie for 40th place to a tie for 14 with a pair of 34s for a 215 total, eight behind the leaders.

It took a score of 224 to qualify for Sunday's final round, 64 pros and four amateurs surviving.

Phillies Ease Past Houston For 3-0 Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies cashed in on some scratch hits and a break Saturday for a 3-0 victory, their second in a row over the Houston Colt 45s.

The Phils got the only run they needed for Art Mahaffey's second victory of the year in the sixth on a pop fly single by Ruben Amaro and a pop fly double by John Callison.

They added to Houston pitcher Ken Johnson's frustration in the seventh with two more tainted runs. With the bases loaded on a walk and two singles, one a hunt by Don Demeter, Clay Dalrymple hit into what looked like a sure double play.

Styrons Lead Tribe To 6th Track Win

MCNASPY STADIUM, LAFAYETTE, La. (Special) — Northeast swept to its sixth straight meet championship of the season as nine records fell and another was tied in the 34th running of the Southwestern Relays here Saturday afternoon.

For winning Northeast, it was a familiar recipe — two Styrons, spread liberally through the relay events.

Amazing Dave and Don Styron won an individual event apiece and ran on three winning relay teams.

Don, who was named the meet's outstanding track man at the conclusion of the meet, edging brother Dave on the strength of a new record in the high hurdles.

Ed Red of Rice, who set a new javelin record, was named the outstanding field man.

Don ran the highs in 13.8, breaking the record of 13.9 he set here in 1960.

Northeast scored 66 points to win the unofficial team title, adding the championship to others already received in the Southwestern Recreation Meet, the Shreveport, Florida and Memphis Relays and a triangular meet at home.

Kansas State, as expected, was second with 47½ points, LSU scored 42, Mississippi State 35½, Houston 26, Rice 25½, Louisiana Tech 23½, Northwestern 14½, USL 14, Ole Miss 8, Southeastern 7½, and Stephen F. Austin 6. Tulane and McNeese did not score in the college and university events.

Pole vault king John Uelses failed to clear 16 feet in the most heralded event of the afternoon but did manage to win the event with a vault of 15 feet five inches.

Both Uelses and George Davies of Arizona State, who holds the official world mark of 15-10¼, cleared 15-5, but Davies took more tries than did Uelses, only man to ever vault 16 feet.

Other records fell in the college and university javelin, pole vault and mile relay, the high school 440 relay and the freshman and junior college sprint medley, 440 relay and high jump.

Northeast tied the record of 41.3 in winning the 440 relay. Three teams held the record, one of them the 1960 Northeast foursome.

The Indian mile relay team won its event in 3:13.2, shaving two-tenths of a second off the record set by the Northeast team of 1960.

Northeast won four of the six relays run in the college and University division. Besides the mile and 440 relays, Indian teams took the sprint medley in 3:26.1 and the 880 relay in 1:25.9.

Don took the high hurdles and Dave rounded out the Indian first by taking the century in 9.5, his best time of the year.

Other Northeast points came in the discus, where Tiffen Stone finished second, in the pole vault where Tommy Edmonson tied for third, in the distance medley where the Indians finished third and in the high hurdles and 100 where Tribe speedsters picked up fourths.

Northeast did not enter a team in the other relay event, the two-mile.

Uelses and Davies, as expected, supplied the fireworks in the special pole vault. Henry Wadsworth, ex-Florida star, went out early and Warren Brattlof, a Rice freshman, ended up third with 14-6. Joe Harris of LSU and Fred Hansen of Rice were tied for fourth with 14-6, ending up behind Brattlof because of more misses.

Harris and Hansen had earlier set a new record of 14-10¾ in the college pole vault.

Northeast opened the day with a second in the discus on Tiffen Stone's toss of 156-4½, his best this season. The winner was Stepen F. Austin's weight specialist, James Nixon, who had 161-1¾.

Northeast had no entries in the hop, step & jump but Tech's Max Howard finished third and another Techmen, Robert Daulton, was fifth.

A former Lafayette high star, Ed Red of Rice, set a new javelin record with a toss of 230-2, bettering the old mark of 222-6 set by USL's Bob Hartquist in 1958. Gene Harbert of Northeast did not compete in the javelin because of a sore elbow. Pat Arceneaux of USL was second to Red with 225-0, his high for the season.

Houston swept to victory in the two-mile with 7:42.7, Mississippi State coming in second.

Don Styron's 13.8 to win the 120 yard high hurdles put the Indians ahead in the unofficial team point totals and the Indians never trailed thereafter.

Don's 13.8 was his second this season. He ran the event in the same time in the Florida Relays to set a new Northeast record for the highs.

Eugene Franklin picked up two more points for Northeast in the highs with a fourth - place finish. Sam Simonton, former Ruston High star of LSU was second to Styron.

Dave Styron won the 100 in 59.5, finishing about a yard in front of Dale Alexander of Kansas State. The time was Dave's best of the year, his previous tops being 9.6.

Jay Goldsmith came in fourth to pick up two more points for the Tribe.

In the sprint medley, Randall Walker, running in an outside lane, was fourth at the end of the 440, but John Baker moved the Indians up, Owen Owen gave Buddy Eiland a slight lead on the 880 and final leg and the Indain distance star breezed home by 10 yards over Tech's Earl Wright to give Northeast its first relay triumph.

Northeast was never behind after the first 30 yards of the 440 relay with Dave Styron running a blistering opening leg.

Charles McDonald and Jay Goldsmith maintained the lead and Don Styron jacklegged home in front by 15 yards.

The 440 relay time of 41.2 tied a record first set by Houston in 1955. Baylor matched the mark again in 1956 and the Indian relay of 1960 tied it a third time.

Mississippi State was second to Northeast while LSU was third.

Houston never gave Northeast a chance in the distance medley. Earl Harlan gave the Cougars the lead on the first leg, the 440, with Indian Claude Mercer third. Jack Williams was second for awhile in the second leg, the 880, but Tech's Earl Wright and Kansas State passed him up. George Abbott was fourth on the three - quarter mile. Houston, meanwhile, was moving farther and farther out in front.

Eigin Baylor Scores 61 To Carry LA Over Bostsn, 126-121

JOHN UELSES, of Miami, Fla., goes over the bar at 15 feet, five inches to win the pole vault event at the Southwestern relays in Lafayette yesterday afternoon. George Davis, of Arizona State, also cleared the same height, but Uelses was awarded the victory because he missed fewer times. Both Uelses and Davis failed in their attempts to vault 15 feet, 10 inches. (AP Wirephoto)

Lions Vault Int o First; Down Northea st Twice

HAMMOND (Special) — Southeastern's Lions vaulted back into first place in the GSC baseball race here yesterday by shuting out Northeast State twice, 5-0, 4-0.

The conference victories upped Southeastern's mark to 5-1 in league play and 16-2 overall.

Coach George Luffey's Indians now stand 4-3 in GSC action and 7-5 for the full campaign. The Tribe will be in Lafayette Monday for a twinbill with the Southwestern Bulldogs.

In yesterday's games, Southeastern's pitching proved to be too strong for the Indians.

Roalnd Oubre fired a six-hitter at Northeast in the opening contest and Bob Hardy followed this performance with a strong four-hit hob to give the Lions both ends of the doubleheader.

After three scoreless innings in the first game, Southeastern came up with four big runs in the fourth on four straight hits, including a three run homer by Monty Crook.

Ernie Robertson began the bombardment with a single, Earl Herman followed with another, and Tony Alello promptly crack- the third in succession to plate Robertson. Crook then walloped his four- bagger to left center for the other three runs of the inning.

The Lions got their other rally in the fifth on a walk to Jerome Mahfouz and a double by Jim Ruddick.

Northeast's most serious threat came in the seventh inning.

With one out, Charley Dykes got a single, his second of the day, and Bo Dick Smith followed with another hit. On the hit Dykes attempted to advance to third, but was thrown out on a fine throw by Centerfiled Billy Lander.

Donnie Brunson then walked, and freshman Dave MCarty came off the bench and collected a pinch hit single to center to keep the rally going. Oubre finally put a halt to the uprising by getting Eddie McGowen on a grounder to first.

In its second victory of the day, Southeastern scored one run in the third inning on two hits and a throwing error by Northeast.

The Lions plated three more runs in the fifth on two singles, two walks, and a two run double to right field by Hardy.

The Indians' biggest threat came in the third when they loaded the bases with one man out on a base hit by McCarty, an error and a single by John Pace.

McCarty was then forced at home when Phil Petras grounded to third, and Smith grounded out to end the inning.

HURL 1 & 3 HITTERS

Bulldogs Clobber Demon Nine In 2

RUSTON (Special) Louisiana Tech climbed back into contention in the Gulf States Conference race here Saturday afternoon by sweeping a twinbill from Northwestern State 7-1 and 10-0.

Charley Fuller, the GSC's outstanding performer a year ago, hurled a three-hitter in the opener and hit a two-run homer to aid his own cause.

Sophomore standout George Woodson three a brilliant one-hitter at the Demons in the second contest and was supported by outfielder Jim Opel's two three-run homers and seven runs batted in.

Woodson walked one and struck out five in facing two over the minimum number of batters in the nightcap.

The only hit off Woodson was a line single by Julian Vienne in the first.

After Fuller's two-run homer gave Tech a 3-0 in the second inning of the opener, the Bulldogs got four more in the fourth on an error, singles by Richard Bell and Max Lewis and doubles by John Cordaro and Sonny Parker.

Opel provided most of the fireworks in the second game. He hit consecutive homers in the third and fourth and drove in another marker with a bases-loaded pass.

Ronald Roy and Don Scribber were the losers for the Demons, both being routed in the early innings.

Tech travels to Lake Charles Monday for a doubleheader with McNeese.

CLEVELAND (AP)—A six-run Cleveland outburst in the first inning enabled right-hander Gary Bell to beat the Washington Senators 6-4 Saturday.

Bell, bidding for a starting assignment after a poor showing in spring training, was blasted for a dozen hits but managed to protect the early lead. He gave up a three-run homer to the Senators' Dale Long in the seventh inning and a ninth-inning home run to Dan O'Connell.

Texas Southern Topples Relay In Pelican Run

BATON ROUGE (AP) —Texas Southern's crack relay team shattered the meet record for the 440 in preliminaries of the Pelican State Relays Saturday.

The relay squad from the all-Negro school from Houston aimed for another perfect sweep of all relays in Saturday night's finals.

The Texas Southern team ran the 440 in :41.3, shaving 2-10ths of a second off the record it set in 1960 here and tied last year.

Lakers Now Lead 3-2 In Title Series

By BOB HOOBING

BOSTON (AP) — Battling Los Angeles moved to the threshold of unseating Boston from the National Basketball Association title 126-121 Saturday night behind the record - shattering 61-point effort by incredible Elgin Baylor and last - minute help from Jerry West.

The Lakers lead in the best-of-7 playoff series final, 3-2.

Baylor tore up the NBA championship final record book with his relentless scoring. The Army private on leave got six fast points 54 seconds from the end to move the Lakers from a 116-114 deficit to a 120-117 lead.

While Sam Jones kept the Celtics alive with two field goals, Laker Jim Krebs hit a long jumper from the corner for only his second field goal of the night, maintaining the edge for the winners.

Los Angeles took time out with 16 seconds left, leading 122-121, and on an out-of-bounds play West was fouled driving for the basket. He connected on both free throws. Just at the buzzer, he hit a jump shot for the final count, bringing his point total to 24.

For much of the game, it appeared Boston's noted teamwork would overcome Baylor's individual brilliance. But every time the Celtics were on the verge of putting the game away, their younger goes stormed from behind again.

Tom Heinsohn scored 30 points while Sam Jones and Bill Russell added 26 apiece for the losers.

Baylor's hottest period was the first when he got 18 of the Lakers' 31 points. His 61 total far exceeded the previous title series record of 50 points by Bob Pettit of St. Louis in 1958 against Boston.

Baylor had 33 points in the first half, smashing the old mark of 29, set by Joe Fulks of Philadelphia in 1947 and tied by Pettit four years ago.

In the final analysis, the vital game which may have tolled the death knell for the Celtics—who have won three straight titles and four in five years—appeared to be settled on a combination of talent plus youth.

The Celtics on numerous occasions staged hot-handed sprees but their foes continually came back.

For much of three periods Baylor put on an incredible exhibition, often looking so tired that he appeared to be arm weary as he launched his patterned jump and running hook shots.

Boston ran 12 straight points on the winners late in the third period for a 94-84 bulge and was still ahead by 10 early in the last quarter. But an eight-point spree by Baylor and West tied the score at 112-all. There were two more ties before Baylor, Krebs and West nailed it down.

Los Angeles needs only a victory on its hoome court Monday night to wrap up the first championship for a Lakers team since 1954 and its first in Los Angeles.

Giants Defeat Redlegs, 13-6; Still Unbeaten

By DICK BARNES

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Defending National League champion Cincinnati fell apart in an amazing display of fielding ineptitude against slugging San Francisco Saturday, losing 13-6.

The Reds made six errors in the first three innings and threw in two balks as the unbeaten league-leading Giants swept to their fifth straight win. Cincinnati has lost five of six.

Orlando Cepeda and Felipe Alou each homered twice in the 13-hit San Francisco attack.

Souchak, Casper Lead Into Finals

By KEN ALYTA

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Defending champion Mike Souchak and Billy Casper, playing in the final threesome, moved into the 54-hole lead of the Greater Greensboro Open Golf Tournament Saturday with 207 totals.

They head into Sunday's final round of the $35,000 tournament with a two-stroke edge over aging but ever-dangerous Sam Snead and Jerry Steelsmith, a young redhead seeking his first victory on tour.

Souchak shot a one-under 70 and Casper a 68 for their 6-under-par totals for the three-quarter mark.

Snead, who has won here s nvtimes, including the inau in 1938, moved up with the day's best round, 67. Steelsmith, who played with the co-leaders, shot 70. Two weeks ago he lost a one-hole playoff to Dave Marr for top money in the Azalea Open at Wilmington, N.C.

Alone in fifth place at 210, three shots off the top, was Billy Maxwell, who shared the 36-hole lead with Souchak.

Another shot away, still with an outside chance, were Julius Boros, Bruce Crampton and Jim Ferrier.

The field of 91 players came up with 11 sub par rounds over the par 71 Sedgefield Country Club course, a 7,000-yarder.

Masters Champion Arnold Palmer rose from a tie for 40th place to a tie for 14 with a pair of 34s for a 215 total, eight behind the leaders.

It took a score of 224 to qualify for Sunday's final round, 64 pros and four amateurs surviving.

Phillies Ease Past Houston For 3-0 Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies cashed in on some scratch hits and a break Saturday for a 3-0 victory, their second in a row over the Houston Colt 45s.

The Phils got the only run they needed for Art Mahaffey's second victory of the year in the sixth on a pop fly single by Ruben Amaro and a pop fly double by John Callison.

They added to Houston pitcher Ken Johnson's frustration in the seventh with two more tainted runs. With the bases loaded on a walk and two singles, one a hunt by Don Demeter, Clay Dalrymple hit into what looked like a sure double play.

Styrons Lead Tribe To 6th Track Win

MCNASPY STADIUM, LAFAYETTE, La. (Special) — Northeast swept to its sixth straight meet championship of the season as nine records fell and another was tied in the 34th running of the Southwestern Relays here Saturday afternoon.

For winning Northeast, it was a familiar recipe — two Styrons, spread liberally through the relay events.

Amazing Dave and Don Styron won an individual event apiece and ran on three winning relay teams.

Don, who was named the meet's outstanding track man at the conclusion of the meet, edging brother Dave on the strength of a new record in the high hurdles.

Ed Red of Rice, who set a new javelin record, was named the outstanding field man.

Don ran the highs in 13.8, breaking the record of 13.9 he set here in 1960.

Northeast scored 66 points to win the unofficial team title, adding the championship to others already received in the Southwestern Recreation Meet, the Shreveport, Florida and Memphis Relays and a triangular meet at home.

Kansas State, as expected, was second with 47½ points, LSU scored 42, Mississippi State 35½, Houston 26, Rice 25½, Louisiana Tech 23½, Northwestern 14½, USL 14, Ole Miss 8, Southeastern 7½, and Stephen F. Austin 6. Tulane and McNeese did not score in the college and university events.

Pole vault king John Uelses failed to clear 16 feet in the most heralded event of the afternoon but did manage to win the event with a vault of 15 feet five inches.

Both Uelses and George Davies of Arizona State, who holds the official world mark of 15-10¼, cleared 15-5, but Davies took more tries than did Uelses, only man to ever vault 16 feet.

Other records fell in the college and university javelin, pole vault and mile relay, the high school 440 relay and the freshman and junior college sprint medley, 440 relay and high jump.

Northeast tied the record of 41.3 in winning the 440 relay. Three teams held the record, one of them the 1960 Northeast foursome.

The Indian mile relay team won its event in 3:13.2, shaving two-tenths of a second off the record set by the Northeast team of 1960.

Northeast won four of the six relays run in the college and University division. Besides the mile and 440 relays, Indian teams took the sprint medley in 3:26.1 and the 880 relay in 1:25.9.

Don took the high hurdles and Dave rounded out the Indian first by taking the century in 9.5, his best time of the year.

Other Northeast points came in the discus, where Tiffen Stone finished second, in the pole vault where Tommy Edmonson tied for third, in the distance medley where the Indians finished third and in the high hurdles and 100 where Tribe speedsters picked up fourths.

Northeast did not enter a team in the other relay event, the two-mile.

Uelses and Davies, as expected, supplied the fireworks in the special pole vault. Henry Wadsworth, ex-Florida star, went out early and Warren Brattlof, a Rice freshman, ended up third with 14-6. Joe Harris of LSU and Fred Hansen of Rice were tied for fourth with 14-6, ending up behind Brattlof because of more misses.

Harris and Hansen had earlier set a new record of 14-10¾ in the college pole vault.

Northeast opened the day with a second in the discus on Tiffen Stone's toss of 156-4½, his best this season. The winner was Stepen F. Austin's weight specialist, James Nixon, who had 161-1¾.

Northeast had no entries in the hop, step & jump but Tech's Max Howard finished third and another Techmen, Robert Daulton, was fifth.

A former Lafayette high star, Ed Red of Rice, set a new javelin record with a toss of 230-2, bettering the old mark of 222-6 set by USL's Bob Hartquist in 1958. Gene Harbert of Northeast did not compete in the javelin because of a sore elbow. Pat Arceneaux of USL was second to Red with 225-0, his high for the season.

Houston swept to victory in the two-mile with 7:42.7, Mississippi State coming in second.

Don Styron's 13.8 to win the 120 yard high hurdles put the Indians ahead in the unofficial team point totals and the Indians never trailed thereafter.

Don's 13.8 was his second this season. He ran the event in the same time in the Florida Relays to set a new Northeast record for the highs.

Eugene Franklin picked up two more points for Northeast in the highs with a fourth - place finish. Sam Simonton, former Ruston High star of LSU was second to Styron.

Dave Styron won the 100 in 59.5, finishing about a yard in front of Dale Alexander of Kansas State. The time was Dave's best of the year, his previous tops being 9.6.

Jay Goldsmith came in fourth to pick up two more points for the Tribe.

In the sprint medley, Randall Walker, running in an outside lane, was fourth at the end of the 440, but John Baker moved the Indians up, Owen Owen gave Buddy Eiland a slight lead on the 880 and final leg and the Indain distance star breezed home by 10 yards over Tech's Earl Wright to give Northeast its first relay triumph.

Northeast was never behind after the first 30 yards of the 440 relay with Dave Styron running a blistering opening leg.

Charles McDonald and Jay Goldsmith maintained the lead and Don Styron jacklegged home in front by 15 yards.

The 440 relay time of 41.2 tied a record first set by Houston in 1955. Baylor matched the mark again in 1956 and the Indian relay of 1960 tied it a third time.

Mississippi State was second to Northeast while LSU was third.

Houston never gave Northeast a chance in the distance medley. Earl Harlan gave the Cougars the lead on the first leg, the 440, with Indian Claude Mercer third. Jack Williams was second for awhile in the second leg, the 880, but Tech's Earl Wright and Kansas State passed him up. George Abbott was fourth on the three - quarter mile. Houston, meanwhile, was moving farther and farther out in front.

A LOOK of anguish (upper picture) comes over the face of St. Louis right fielder Doug Clemens as he collides with Chicago catcher Moe Thacker in the second inning of yesterday's game in Chicago. Umpire John Pryon (bottom picture) starts to change the out signal to a call for assistance as Thacker writhes on the ground and Clemens lies face down in the dirt. Both players were knocked out after the crash which was the tail end of a double play, starting when Julian Javier grounded to Ernie Banks at first. Neither man required hospitalization, but both had to leave the game. (AP Wirephoto)

Cardinals Beat Cubs; Chicago Still Winless

CHICAGO (AP)—Veteran Stan Musial's two-run homer in the first launched the St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-4 victory Saturday over the winless Chicago Cubs, now anchored with five successive defeats.

Curt Simmons, who also banged three hits, hurled his first victory of the season, scattering seven hits and outlasting five Cub pitchers. Simmons further proved the southpaw weakness of the Cubs as he struck out 11 while walking only two. Ten of Curt's victims were left-handed batters.

A collision at the plate in the second inning demobilized Doug Clemens and Cub catcher Moe Thacker as the Card outfielder was nailed to complete a double play. Both were knocked out momentarily and Thacker had to be helped from the field.

Another Cub casualty was shortstop Andre Rodgers, who had to leave the game, in the seventh, when his right knee was gashed while making a double play

Veteran Don Cardwell, a 15-game winner last season, was chased early in suffering his second defeat of the new season, thanks mainly to the 41-year-old Musial.

Musial's 445th homer of his illustrious Cardinal career after Bill White singled in the first gave St. Louis a 2-0 lead. Cardwell's wild pitch in the second following Carl Sawatski's double and two walks gave the Cards another run in the second.

In the third, the still-frisky Musial walked, stole second, romped to third on a throwing error and scored on Ken Boyer's triple which finished Cardwell and brought in Cal Koonce.

The Cubs broke the ice in the fourth on Ron Santo's none-on homer to trail 4-1.

Simmons wavered a bit in the sixth as the Cubs scored three, to trail 7-4. A single by pinch-hitter Elder White and Ken Hubb's double, plus an error, Santo's sacrifice fly and an outfield out produced the three - run cluster.

Mississippi State Downs LSU, 5-3, Increases Lead

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Mississippi State tightened its grip on first place in the western division of the Southeastern Conference with a 5-3 victory over Louisiana State Saturday.

The victory gave the Maroons a 7-1 record in SEC play while LSU, the second place team in the division, is 6-4.

The combination of Maroon power hitting and the pitching of Frank Montgomery proved too much for LSU. Mississippi State hit three home runs off Tiger pitcher Lynn Amedee. Montgomery held the Tigers in check until the 9th inning when they scored three runs, only one of which was earned, a home run by Jim Poche.

Montgomery pitched 8 2-3 inning and gave up eight hits, only two walks and struck out eight, leaving five LSU runners stranded. Amedee gave up eight hits, but three of them were out of the ball park. The home runs were by Ronnie Norton, with none on in the second inning; John Dudley, with none on in the fifth, and H. K. Ethridge, who hit a two-run homer in the 8th.

AS 'DEFENSIVE SHOES'

Oriole Baseballers Use Football Cleats

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles used an unusual two-platoon system in their home opener against the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

While at bat, the Oriole outfielders used regular spiked baseball shoes. But before taking the field with Boston at bat, Boog Powell, Jack Brandt and Earl Robinson switched to their "defensive shoes."

Manager Billy Hitchcock ordered low-cut shoes with football cleats Thursday after surveying Memorial Stadium's new sod, which had been soaked by several days of rain.

Left fielder Powell, a 230-pound former high school football star, called the shoes terrific after a workout. Although he found them a little heavier than spikes, Powell said he was more sure of himself running on the slippery turf.

"I need something out there to help me," Powell joked. He had some difficulty in spring training adjusting himself to a relatively new position after playing most of his career at first base.

Brandt, the nonchalant outfielder who makes plays look easy, even in the mire, shrugged approval of the cleats.

"It's better than having mud up to here," he said, pointing to a mark halfway up on his spiked shoes. The solid cleats raised the shoes several inches off the ground and keep most of the mud off the tops of the shoes.

Robinson described the cleats as quite beneficial for maintaining balance but feared they may slow him up a bit.

"I won't slip," he said, "but I may have trouble getting to the ball."

RUIN HOME OPENER

Angels Cool Twins With 12-5 Triumph

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Catcher Bob Rodgers' hot bat chilled Minnesota as much as the freezing weather as the Los Angeles Angels spoiled the Twins' home opener 12-5 Saturday.

Rodgers drove in five runs with a single and a triple. His bases-loaded three bagger in the sixth broke it open.

The game was played in numbing cold, and the bundled crowd of 8,363 was half frozen out by the time the 3-hour 26-minute marathon wound up.

The temperature was 33 degrees at game time and dipped to 32 before it was over, probably one of the most frigid days on which a major league game ever was played.

Yanks' Power Overcomes Tigers For 11-5 Triumph

By JERRY GREEN

DETROIT (AP)—Johnny Blanchard drove in four runs with a homer and a single Saturday as the New York Yankees' power overcame their pitching wildness and beat the Detroit Tigers 11-5 in a frigid marathon battle.

Blanchard drilled a three-run homer in the third inning, breaking a 1-1 tie and starting the Yanks off to a 7-1 lead. It was a margin the New York pitchers nearly lost on this snowy, 43-degree day.

Norm Cash blasted two line-drive home runs into the upper right field stands for the Tigers.

Detroit threatened to close the gap in the seventh, but Mickey Mantle erased the danger with a shoestring catch of Chico Fernandez' liner.

The Tigers, behind 8-5, loaded the bases on walks for the second straight inning before Mantle's catch. He caught Fernandez drive into center just above the grass and started an inning - ending double play.

The Yankees scored three more times in the ninth, with Clete Boyer supplying two runs with his first homer. He and Elston Howard paced the 15-hit Yankee attack off five pitchers with three hits each.

Starter Ralph Terry was the winning pitcher. He yielded both of Cash's homers and weakened in the sixth, when he loaded the bases on consecutive walks. Jim Coates took over, but had to be lifted when he, too, walked the bases full in the seventh. Luis Arroyo came in and got the Tigers out.

Phil Regan was the loser. He lasted less than four innings.

Blanchard chased in the first run in the opening inning with a single and the next three New York tallies with his home run.

Regan allowed three more runs in the fourth on singles by Boyer, Bobby Richardson and Mantle and a walk to Tom Tresh.

Arroyo pitched hitless ball the last 2 2-3 innings and ended the 3-hour, 27-minute game by getting Cash on a doubleplay grounder.

Only 12,558 attended the game.

Pirates Beat Mets, 6-2, For 3rd Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Outfielder Roberto Clemente, last year's National League batting champion, had a perfect day at the plate Saturday with three hits and two walks as the unbeaten Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the New York Mets 6-2 for their third straight victory.

Wilmer (Vinegar Bend) Mizell, with the help of relief ace Elroy Face, posted his first victory. Casey Stengel's crew of shopworn veterans dropped their third game without a victory.

Bill Mazerosci and Dick Stuart shared the batting laurels with Clemente, who smashed two doubles and a single to give him a .500 batting average for the infant season. Mzaeroski walloped his first home run of the campaign in the second inning and Stuart drove in two runs with a triple in the fourth.

A LOOK of anguish (upper picture) comes over the face of St. Louis right fielder Doug Clemens as he collides with Chicago catcher Moe Thacker in the second inning of yesterday's game in Chicago. Cardinals Beat Cubs; Chicago Still Winless

CHICAGO (AP)—Veteran Stan Musial's two-run homer in the first launched the St. Louis Cardinals to a 7-4 victory Saturday over the winless Chicago Cubs, now anchored with five successive defeats.

Curt Simmons, who also banged three hits, hurled his first victory of the season, scattering seven hits and outlasting five Cub pitchers. Simmons further proved the southpaw weakness of the Cubs as he struck out 11 while walking only two. Ten of Curt's victims were left-handed batters.

A collision at the plate in the second inning demobilized Doug Clemens and Cub catcher Moe Thacker as the Card outfielder was nailed to complete a double play. Both were knocked out momentarily and Thacker had to be helped from the field.

Another Cub casualty was shortstop Andre Rodgers, who had to leave the game, in the seventh, when his right knee was gashed while making a double play.

Veteran Don Cardwell, a 15-game winner last season, was chased early in suffering his second defeat of the new season, thanks mainly to the 41-year-old Musial.

Musial's 445th homer of his illustrious Cardinal career after Bill White singled in the first gave St. Louis a 2-0 lead. Cardwell's wild pitch in the second following Carl Sawatski's double and two walks gave the Cards another run in the second.

In the third, the still-frisky Musial walked, stole second, romped to third on a throwing error and scored on Ken Boyer's triple which finished Cardwell and brought in Cal Koonce.

The Cubs broke the ice in the fourth on Ron Santo's none-on homer to trail 4-1.

Simmons wavered a bit in the sixth as the Cubs scored three, to trail 7-4. A single by pinch-hitter Elder White and Ken Hubb's double, plus an error, Santo's sacrifice fly and an outfield out produced the three - run cluster.

AS 'DEFENSIVE SHOES'

Oriole Baseballers Use Football Cleats

BALTIMORE (AP) — The Baltimore Orioles used an unusual two-platoon system in their home opener against the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

While at bat, the Oriole outfielders used regular spiked baseball shoes. But before taking the field with Boston at bat, Boog Powell, Jack Brandt and Earl Robinson switched to their "defensive shoes."

Manager Billy Hitchcock ordered low-cut shoes with football cleats Thursday after surveying Memorial Stadium's new sod, which had been soaked by several days of rain.

Left fielder Powell, a 230-pound former high school football star, called the shoes terrific after a workout. Although he found them a little heavier than spikes, Powell said he was more sure of himself running on the slippery turf.

"I need something out there to help me," Powell joked. He had some difficulty in spring training adjusting himself to a relatively new position after playing most of his career at first base.

Brandt, the nonchalant outfielder who makes plays look easy, even in the mire, shrugged approval of the cleats.

"It's better than having mud up to here," he said, pointing to a mark halfway up on his spiked shoes. The solid cleats raised the shoes several inches off the ground and keep most of the mud off the tops of the shoes.

Robinson described the cleats as quite beneficial for maintaining balance but feared they may slow him up a bit.

"I won't slip," he said, "but I may have trouble getting to the ball."

Angels Cool Twins With 12-5 Triumph

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Catcher Bob Rodgers' hot bat chilled Minnesota as much as the freezing weather as the Los Angeles Angels spoiled the Twins' home opener 12-5 Saturday.

Rodgers drove in five runs with a single and a triple. His bases-loaded three bagger in the sixth broke it open.

The game was played in numbing cold, and the bundled crowd of 8,363 was half frozen out by the time the 3-hour 26-minute marathon wound up.

The temperature was 33 degrees at game time and dipped to 32 before it was over, probably one of the most frigid days on which a major league game ever was played.

Mississippi State Downs LSU, 5-3, Increases Lead

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Mississippi State tightened its grip on first place in the western division of the Southeastern Conference with a 5-3 victory over Louisiana State Saturday.

The victory gave the Maroons a 7-1 record in SEC play while LSU, the second place team in the division, is 6-4.

The combination of Maroon power hitting and the pitching of Frank Montgomery proved too much for LSU. Mississippi State hit three home runs off Tiger pitcher Lynn Amedee. Montgomery held the Tigers in check until the 9th inning when they scored three runs, only one of which was earned, a home run by Jim Poche.

Montgomery pitched 8 2-3 inning and gave up eight hits, only two walks and struck out eight, leaving five LSU runners stranded. Amedee gave up eight hits, but three of them were out of the ball park. The home runs were by Ronnie Norton, with none on in the second inning; John Dudley, with none on in the fifth, and H. K. Ethridge, who hit a two-run homer in the 8th.

Yanks' Power Overcomes Tigers For 11-5 Triumph

By JERRY GREEN

DETROIT (AP)—Johnny Blanchard drove in four runs with a homer and a single Saturday as the New York Yankees' power overcame their pitching wildness and beat the Detroit Tigers 11-5 in a frigid marathon battle.

Blanchard drilled a three-run homer in the third inning, breaking a 1-1 tie and starting the Yanks off to a 7-1 lead. It was a margin the New York pitchers nearly lost on this snowy, 43-degree day.

Norm Cash blasted two line-drive home runs into the upper right field stands for the Tigers.

Detroit threatened to close the gap in the seventh, but Mickey Mantle erased the danger with a shoestring catch of Chico Fernandez' liner.

The Tigers, behind 8-5, loaded the bases on walks for the second straight inning before Mantle's catch. He caught Fernandez drive into center just above the grass and started an inning - ending double play.

The Yankees scored three more times in the ninth, with Clete Boyer supplying two runs with his first homer. He and Elston Howard paced the 15-hit Yankee attack off five pitchers with three hits each.

Starter Ralph Terry was the winning pitcher. He yielded both of Cash's homers and weakened in the sixth, when he loaded the bases on consecutive walks. Jim Coates took over, but had to be lifted when he, too, walked the bases full in the seventh. Luis Arroyo came in and got the Tigers out.

Phil Regan was the loser. He lasted less than four innings.

Blanchard chased in the first run in the opening inning with a single and the next three New York tallies with his home run.

Regan allowed three more runs in the fourth on singles by Boyer, Bobby Richardson and Mantle and a walk to Tom Tresh.

Arroyo pitched hitless ball the last 2 2-3 innings and ended the 3-hour, 27-minute game by getting Cash on a doubleplay grounder.

Only 12,558 attended the game.

Pirates Beat Mets, 6-2, For 3rd Win

NEW YORK (AP) — Outfielder Roberto Clemente, last year's National League batting champion, had a perfect day at the plate Saturday with three hits and two walks as the unbeaten Pittsburgh Pirates defeated the New York Mets 6-2 for their third straight victory.

Wilmer (Vinegar Bend) Mizell, with the help of relief ace Elroy Face, posted his first victory. Casey Stengel's crew of shopworn veterans dropped their third game without a victory.

Bill Mazerosci and Dick Stuart shared the batting laurels with Clemente, who smashed two doubles and a single to give him a .500 batting average for the infant season. Mzaeroski walloped his first home run of the campaign in the second inning and Stuart drove in two runs with a triple in the fourth.

WHAT SUNSHINE?

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP)—They call this the Sunshine City but you don't dare tell that to 500 fans who came out on a cloudy day to see the New York Mets meet the Pittsburgh Pirates. The fans were marooned in the ball park for one hour and a half when it poured three inches of rain. Some fans took off their shoes and socks to waddle across the street to the parking lot.

He's No. 1

Ask any hunter who has tried to intercede in the mating habits of the wild turkey since the season opened nine days ago and he'll tell you that the No. 1 game bird in the sense department is Mr. Tom himself.

But this year the gobbler has had more opportunities to turn on his brainwave, because there have been more people out to get him.

The season closes today after nine days and from all reports the turn-out of hunters has been greater than any of the past seasons in modern times.

Biologists inform us that Madison Parish again is leading this area in the number of gobbles that have been reported while a newcomer, Union Parish, surprised a lot of observers.

As of Thursday night, biologist Dewey Wills and his men had checked out 15 birds in Madison, 11 in Tensas and eight in Franklin — a total of 34 for the Delta.

Of those, 21 were killed on the Chicago Mills Game Management Area, which has attracted the gratest influx of hunters.

Morehouse, at noon Friday, had reported only five bagged gobblers, according to biologist Cliff Williams. This total is bound to increase, in that Morehouse has a good population of turkey and attracts a lot of hunters.

But Union has been the big surprise. Nine gobblers had been killed by Friday afternoon, most of them in the wooded area around Haile.

Union wasn't opened last year.

While the woods have been full of hunters, Mr Tom has had everything on his side.

The fact that a lot of hunters are out trying to kill a turkey is in the gobbler's favor. Hunters stirring around in the wood spook the gobblers. Then everybody runs to the gobbler when he sounds off, which of course reduces the chances of anybody killing him.

This, we think, is an ever bigger factor than the weather, a subject that brings about much disagreement among hunters. Some hunters say the gobblers remain quiet on those dark, cloudy days. Others say that don't.

Be that as it may, hunters had some bad days. The opening day was cloudy while the storm of this past Wednesday night certainly didn't help matters.

But by the time all the reports are in, it's a good chance the kill will equal that of last year, which ran in the neighborhood of 100 for Northeast Louisiana.

In view of the number of hunters who were in the woods, Mr. Tom is getting smarter.

New Wildlife Club

A new wildlife club has been organized in Tensas Parish — where a club has been needed for a long time. We say this because Tensas is one of the leading wildlife parishes in Louisiana while the Louisiana Wildlife Federation certainly needs to be represented.

Officers for the club include the president, Albert Lowery, the vice-president, I. V. Black, and the secretary-treasurer, Whitfield Jones.

They were elected at an organizational meeting where Hollis Ervine and Charles Marshall, representing the Madison Wildlife Unit, were present to assist.

Hollis Ervine is the Fifth District vice-president for the state organization.

Clubs can accomplish many good things, but it takes work, usually done by a handfull of men.

We hope the Tensas club will gain the support of the people of that area and that the sportsmen will join, then go to work to meet the club's objectives.

The Boat Laws

Owners of pleasure boats—from the fishing size on up—should check their craft to see if they measure up to regulations that are being enforced by the Wild Life & Fisheries Commission.

Remember, boats with motors that are at least 10 horses must be registered. There is a $3 registration fee for the first three years.

But this is only the beginning.

Laws have been passed governing the equipment that must be aboard when the boat goes afloat. These regulations are meant to be observed and they are being enforced.

If you want to avoid any misunderstanding with the law regarding your boat, we suggest you check with your Sheriff's Department for a form that must be submitted to the commission for a permit.

Since the outdoor season is upon us, don't be one to receive a ticket on a Sunday afternoon cruise.

Little Man's Corner

The little men, out in the rain and wind, had a hard time hearing the gobblers, but they managed to make news afield.

Best turkey story we heard came from Bastrop where Mrs. Troy Holland of Bastrop did it again. Last year she and her husband opened the season together. She bagged one and he didn't.

This year the Hollands opened the season together. She bagged one and he didn't.

Mrs Holland's turkey weighed 20 pounds and had a 68-inch wingspread. She's getting better. The bird weighed 17 pounds last year.

And on the Tensas River, where most of the hunters have been, a visiting game warden from the country where there aren't any gobblers was sent in to keep tabs on things.

From his boat in the river one afternoon he watched while a "flock of turkeys" went to roost.

One, he said, was a big ole gobbler. "That son-of-a-buck," he said, "had a beard as long as my arm."

"Yea, he sure did," said agent Harvey Spruill. "He was sitting on that lower limb."

While Spruill told everybody else, he failed to tell the visiting agent from the country there aren't any gobblers that his "flock of turkeys" were really buzzards.

Biggest bird we've heard of was killed by Charles Alexander of Oak Grove. He killed one that weighed 23½-pounds dressed. The gobbler had a 55-inch wingspread and a 10½-inch beard.

L. A. Burns of Wavery killed a big one too — 21 pounds, 55-inch wingspread and a 10-inch beard. He killed the man in Madison.

And the Pace boys had a field day in Union. The list of hunters killing turkeys in Union included four Paces — Percy of Monroe, Ernest Pace Jr. of Linville, Robert of Haile and Norman of Haile.

Others bagging gobblers in Union included Wells Spillers, Linville, Walter White, Farmerville, Chuck Herrington, Marion, and Tommy Vining, Marion.

From Mer Rouge, Preston McKoin got his gobbler again. He does every year.

Other hunters killing birds in Morehouse included Mrs. Holland, and Jerry Anderson and Ray Cook, both of Bastrop.

From Monroe, Jim Baur, nephew of the infamous Chili, missed his bird, according to the infamous Chili.

And oh was the opening day a bad one for Dave Chase, the famous turkey hunter from Gilbert. Dave couldn't hunt because it was election day at Gilbert and he was running for mayor.

He lost the race.

While Bobby Emfinger of Gilbert repeated in missing his on opening day, those who bagged a gobbler in the Chicago Mills area down around the pipeline included Wendell Powell, Ferriday, Aubrey Eshew, Gilbert, W. T. Ulmer, Winnsboro, Lonnie Grum, Gilbert, L. A. Scott, Winnsboro, and J. B. Messenger, Monroe.

Powell killed the largest — 20-pounds, 60½-inch wingspread and a beard that was just slightly over 10 inches.

From Wisner, Clovis Bingel, hunting in Tensas Swamp, killed a 20-pound gobbler that sported a 10-inch beard and 59-inch wingspread.

Dow Guimbellot of Winnsboro dropped a small one — 13-pounds, 52-inch wingspread, near Cooter's Point on the Tensas River.

Madison Parish sports who were successful included C. E. Forrest, 17-lb., 52 inch wing, 8½-inch beard; Herman Eubanks of Pioneer, 19-lb., 57½-inch wing, 9½-inch beard; Luther Bishop, 20-pound, 55-inch wing, 9½-inch beard; Mrs. C. E. Sanderford, and Merle Gustafson, 18½-lb., 60-inch wingspread.

And while the turkey hunters were having fun, the fishermen continued. Fishing, in general, was fair.

On Black Bayou at Monroe, Sam Ladart turned from the bass to the bream and really hauled them in. Doyle Reynolds and Harvey Walker have had good luck spec fishing.

Bass fishing in Lake Providence is not bad, according to reports from those who have landed them, including John Hankins, Jim Henry Gilfoil, James Harold Crews and W. A. Harris.

Burford Adams and Mike Miller caught white perch at Gassaway while Paul Boney was landing the catfish in the lake.

George Williams of Vivian got the limit of bass at Saline.

Joe Moeller, 18, may be a prize plum for the Los Angeles Dodgers. The righthander won 12 and lost 3 with Reno last season. He struck out 162 batters in 119 innings, allowing only 80 hits.

MR. AND MRS. Troy Holland of Bastrop display a 20 - pound turkey killed at the opening of the season in Morehouse by Mrs. Holland. This is a repeat performance for Mrs. Holland who killed a 19 - pound gobbler in 1961. This year's "bronze-back" had a beard which measured nine and one - half inches in length and a wingspread of slightly more than five feet.

TALLULAH HUNTER E. W. Edmonson bagged this 19¼-pound gobbler on the Chicago Mills Game Management Area. The turkey had a 58 - inch wingspread and a 9½ - inch beard. Louisiana's 9 - day turkey season closes today.

Baltimore Tops Punchless Sox In 3-0 Blanking

BALTIMORE (AP) — Chuck Estrada and Dick Hall blanked the punchless Boston Red Sox on two hits Saturday as the Baltimore Orioles opened their home season with a 3-0 victory.

Estrada allowed both hits, in the second inning, and struck out five in the seven innings he worked. The 24-year-old righthander was removed from the game after developing a blister on his index finger.

Hall completed the whitewash and preserved Estrada's first victory by retiring all six men he faced in the final two innings.

The Red Sox have scored four runs in 30 innings of play since the season opened, all on a bases loaded home run by Carroll Hardy in the 12th inning of Wednesday's game against Cleveland.

Brooks Robinson and Gus Triandos hit back-to-back solo homers off Boston starter Gene Conley to put the Orioles in front in the second inning.

Both drives, hit into the teeth of a stiff wind blowing from left to right field, barely cleared the left field fence. Robinson's homer went about 320 feet over a 14-foot wall near the line, while the 365-foot blast by Triandos went over the wire fence which has been brought in 12 feet since last season.

The Orioles completed the scoring in the fourth on a sacrifice fly by Jerry Adair after a hit batter, a double by Brooks Robinson and an intentional walk loaded the bases.

IN HALL OF FAME

Roush Says Rules Should Be Changed

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Maybe Edd Roush talks like an oldtimer because he is an oldtimer. At 68, he finally made the Hall of Fame by vote of the veterans' committee. Roush is a trifle bitter about the system of voting that left him--and many others—sitting in the wings for 30 years.

"I think they ought to change the rules," said Roush. "I finally made it but it isn't fair to some of the others. The way it is now the baseball writers vote on players who have been out at least five years and all the way up to 30 years. After that the veterans take over. A lot of younger writers never saw fellows who haven't played ball for 20 years. The way it is now, if you don't make it in 10 or 15 years you might as well give up.

"Maybe, if they let the veterans put in a group of men who ought to be in there and clean up the list of oldtimers who aren't well known to some of the present day writers, that would do it. Men like Eppa Rixey, Earle Combs, Heinie Manush, Sam Rice, Lloyd Waner, just to name a few. They ought to be in there without waiting 30 years. What good is it after a man is dead?"

Everybody must know the story about Roush's famous season-long holdout in 1930 when he never did report to the New York Giants. Edd didn't like spring training in those days. He claimed all he needed was a shave and a haircut and he was ready. Now you can't keep him away. He hustles down from his old home town of Oakland City, Ind., with the first frost.

Roush is a daily visitor at the Milwaukee Braves' camp during training. He is spry and alert, weighing only a few pounds over his old playing weight. He used to bring his old glove to camp and shag fly balls in the outfield. The modern players never ceased to marvel at his tiny glove that is dwarfed by the big fish nets used today. Edd didn't have the glove this spring. It is on the way to Cooperstown, N. Y., along with his 48-ounce bat. Roush will follow them in late July when he will be inducted formally in to the Hall of Fame with oldtimer Bill McKechnie, a Bradenton neighbor, and Bobby F5.o2 shr Jackie Robinson of more recent vintage.

Like most oldtimers, Roush has little in common with the home run explosion of recent years.

"I think they are overdoing it," said Roush, who played most of his career in the dead ball era. "Of course, that is what the owners want so that is what they are going to get. You can't blame the players. That's what they pay off on so everybody swings for the fence.

"They don't care if they hit .250 or not as long as they hit 25 or 30 home runs. The trouble with that is that sometimes five home runs mean only five runs. It takes all the inside part of baseball. A man gets a base hit and waits until somebody else hits one into the stands.

Houston Has Struggle, But Finally Makes It

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Houston ran into backdowns, turndowns and suits as it sought a place in major league baseball.

It was quite a struggle but about $12,000,000 later the Colts played the first big league game in Texas history. Never did any team or anybody make such an auspicious start. It seemed the Colts were being rewarded for their trials and tribulations.

Houston won three games in a row in its first home stand. You can ask nothing better than that.

Houston played that first game last Tuesday. To the surprise of almost everybody they beat the Chicago Cubs 11-2. Then Wednesday night the Colts beat the Cubs 2-0. This was just too good to be true.

But Thursday they won over the Cubs again and again it was 2-0. The famed Texas bluster showed up. "When are we going to play a major team?" cracked Morris Frank, the newspaper columnist who is always the master of ceremonies for any great occasion.

Frank told the 25,271 fans who turned out for the opening game, "The National League has come of age and we have admitted it to the Lone Star State." It was just a Texan whistling to keep up his courage. But three nights later Frank was saying it with a positiveness.

So what are the chances of Houston to make good in major league baseball?

Financially, the Colts are doing all right. They sold $1,100,000 in advance tickets. They got a television and radio contract calling for $1,250,000. So the Colts had $2,350,000 in the bank before they even started the season.

They built a stadium at a cost of about a million dollars. They spent $300,000 for the franchise, $1,850,000 for players in the National League pool, $900,000 for bonus players, $900,000 for other players and scouts, $683,750 for farm club franchises, $167,000 for American Association indemnity for the Houston territory and $575,000 for operations and administration—before they were even ready to start playing.

But only the $400,000 player payroll and the cost of operation for the season, which will be better than a million dollars, can be charged against the $2,350,000 they got from ticket sales and radio and television.

So, the Colts are expected to at least break even for the season.

George Kirksey, the executive vice-president who was the man who started Houston on its way to a place in the big leagues, estimates that if Houston can average 13,000 in attendance it will break even on the first year's operation.

The first three home games drew 53,445 paid admissions—an average of 17,815.

Everybody agrees, however, that such an average can't be maintained unless the club wins a fair share of ball games. The concensus put Houston in the cellar—tenth in the National League. Such a finish certainly wouldn't call for a high average in attendance. But backers of the ball club think the Colts are capable of doing better than that. They're already talking about a seventh-place finish, maybe sixth.

The fans will know more about it when the Colts wind up their first road trip that started at Philadelphia Friday. Maybe the boys were playing over their heads to make a good impression before the home folks in those first three games.

Greenies Take Conference Win From Alabama

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tulane snapped a seven-game losing streak Saturday with a 1-0 shutout of Alabama in a Southeastern Conference baseball game.

Bobby Neider singled to drive in catcher Bob Cornett in the first inning for the game's only run.

Tulane starter Dick Roninger, a sophomore, hurled hitless ball until two were out in the sixth. Bama's Jerry Ellis and Bill Rix touched him for singles but he forced Tommy Hill to pop to center to end the threat.

Plauche Villere relieved Roninger in the 8th after the starter loaded the bases and the reliefer pitched hitless ball the rest of the game to keep the victory on ice.

He's No. 1

Ask any hunter who has tried to intercede in the mating habits of the wild turkey since the season opened nine days ago and he'll tell you that the No. 1 game bird in the sense department is Mr. Tom himself.

But this year the gobbler has had more opportunities to turn on his brainwave, because there have been more people out to get him.

The season closes today after nine days and from all reports the turn-out of hunters has been greater than any of the past seasons in modern times.

Biologists inform us that Madison Parish again is leading this area in the number of gobbles that have been reported while a newcomer, Union Parish, surprised a lot of observers.

As of Thursday night, biologist Dewey Wills and his men had checked out 15 birds in Madison, 11 in Tensas and eight in Franklin — a total of 34 for the Delta.

Of those, 21 were killed on the Chicago Mills Game Management Area, which has attracted the gratest influx of hunters.

Morehouse, at noon Friday, had reported only five bagged gobblers, according to biologist Cliff Williams. This total is bound to increase, in that Morehouse has a good population of turkey and attracts a lot of hunters.

But Union has been the big surprise. Nine gobblers had been killed by Friday afternoon, most of them in the wooded area around Haile.

Union wasn't opened last year.

While the woods have been full of hunters, Mr. Tom has had everything on his side.

The fact that a lot of hunters are out trying to kill a turkey is in the gobbler's favor. Hunters stirring around in the wood spook the gobblers. Then everybody runs to the gobbler when he sounds off, which of course reduces the chances of anybody killing him.

This, we think, is an ever bigger factor than the weather, a subject that brings about much disagreement among hunters. Some hunters say the gobblers remain quiet on those dark, cloudy days. Others say that don't.

Be that as it may, hunters had some bad days. The opening day was cloudy while the storm of this past Wednesday night certainly didn't help matters.

But by the time all the reports are in, it's a good chance the kill will equal that of last year, which ran in the neighborhood of 100 for Northeast Louisiana.

In view of the number of hunters who were in the woods, Mr. Tom is getting smarter.

New Wildlife Club

A new wildlife club has been organized in Tensas Parish — where a club has been needed for a long time. We say this because Tensas is one of the leading wildlife parishes in Louisiana while the Louisiana Wildlife Federation certainly needs to be represented.

Officers for the club include the president, Albert Lowery, the vice-president, I. V. Black, and the secretary-treasurer, Whitfield Jones.

They were elected at an organizational meeting where Hollis Ervine and Charles Marshall, representing the Madison Wildlife Unit, were present to assist.

Hollis Ervine is the Fifth District vice-president for the state organization.

Clubs can accomplish many good things, but it takes work, usually done by a handfull of men.

We hope the Tensas club will gain the support of the people of that area and that the sportsmen will join, then go to work to meet the club's objectives.

The Boat Laws

Owners of pleasure boats—from the fishing size on up—should check their craft to see if they measure up to regulations that are being enforced by the Wild Life & Fisheries Commission.

Remember, boats with motors that are at least 10 horses must be registered. There is a $3 registration fee for the first three years.

But this is only the beginning.

Laws have been passed governing the equipment that must be aboard when the boat goes afloat. These regulations are meant to be observed and they are being enforced.

If you want to avoid any misunderstanding with the law regarding your boat, we suggest you check with your Sheriff's Department for a form that must be submitted to the commission for a permit.

Since the outdoor season is upon us, don't be one to receive a ticket on a Sunday afternoon cruise.

Little Man's Corner

The little men, out in the rain and wind, had a hard time hearing the gobblers, but they managed to make news afield.

Best turkey story we heard came from Bastrop where Mrs. Troy Holland of Bastrop did it again. Last year she and her husband opened the season together. She bagged one and he didn't.

This year the Hollands opened the season together. She bagged one and he didn't.

Mrs Holland's turkey weighed 20 pounds and had a 68-inch wingspread. She's getting better. The bird weighed 17 pounds last year.

And on the Tensas River, where most of the hunters have been, a visiting game warden from the country where there aren't any gobblers was sent in to keep tabs on things.

From his boat in the river one afternoon he watched while a "flock of turkeys" went to roost.

One, he said, was a big ole gobbler. "That son-of-a-buck," he said, "had a beard as long as my arm."

"Yea, he sure did," said agent Harvey Spruill. "He was sitting on that lower limb."

While Spruill told everybody else, he failed to tell the visiting agent from the country there aren't any gobblers that his "flock of turkeys" were really buzzards.

Biggest bird we've heard of was killed by Charles Alexander of Oak Grove. He killed one that weighed 23½-pounds dressed. The gobbler had a 55-inch wingspread and a 10½-inch beard.

L. A. Burns of Wavery killed a big one too — 21 pounds, 55-inch wingspread and a 10-inch beard. He killed the man in Madison.

And the Pace boys had a field day in Union. The list of hunters killing turkeys in Union included four Paces — Percy of Monroe, Ernest Pace Jr. of Linville, Robert of Haile and Norman of Haile.

Others bagging gobblers in Union included Wells Spillers, Linville, Walter White, Farmerville, Chuck Herrington, Marion, and Tommy Vining, Marion.

From Mer Rouge, Preston McKoin got his gobbler again. He does every year.

Other hunters killing birds in Morehouse included Mrs. Holland, and Jerry Anderson and Ray Cook, both of Bastrop.

From Monroe, Jim Baur, nephew of the infamous Chili, missed his bird, according to the infamous Chili.

And oh was the opening day a bad one for Dave Chase, the famous turkey hunter from Gilbert. Dave couldn't hunt because it was election day at Gilbert and he was running for mayor.

He lost the race.

While Bobby Emfinger of Gilbert repeated in missing his on opening day, those who bagged a gobbler in the Chicago Mills area down around the pipeline included Wendell Powell, Ferriday, Aubrey Eshew, Gilbert, W. T. Ulmer, Winnsboro, Lonnie Grum, Gilbert, L. A. Scott, Winnsboro, and J. B. Messenger, Monroe.

Powell killed the largest — 20-pounds, 60½-inch wingspread and a beard that was just slightly over 10 inches.

From Wisner, Clovis Bingel, hunting in Tensas Swamp, killed a 20-pound gobbler that sported a 10-inch beard and 59-inch wingspread.

Dow Guimbellot of Winnsboro dropped a small one — 13-pounds, 52-inch wingspread, near Cooter's Point on the Tensas River.

Madison Parish sports who were successful included C. E. Forrest, 17-lb., 52 inch wing, 8½-inch beard; Herman Eubanks of Pioneer, 19-lb., 57½-inch wing, 9½-inch beard; Luther Bishop, 20-pound, 55-inch wing, 9½-inch beard; Mrs. C. E. Sanderford, and Merle Gustafson, 18½-lb., 60-inch wingspread.

And while the turkey hunters were having fun, the fishermen continued. Fishing, in general, was fair.

On Black Bayou at Monroe, Sam Ladart turned from the bass to the bream and really hauled them in. Doyle Reynolds and Harvey Walker have had good luck spec fishing.

Bass fishing in Lake Providence is not bad, according to reports from those who have landed them, including John Hankins, Jim Henry Gilfoil, James Harold Crews and W. A. Harris.

Burford Adams and Mike Miller caught white perch at Gassaway while Paul Boney was landing the catfish in the lake.

George Williams of Vivian got the limit of bass at Saline.

Joe Moeller, 18, may be a prize plum for the Los Angeles Dodgers. The righthander won 12 and lost 3 with Reno last season. He struck out 162 batters in 119 innings, allowing only 80 hits.

MR. AND MRS. Troy Holland of Bastrop display a 20 - pound turkey killed at the opening of the season in Morehouse by Mrs. Holland. This is a repeat performance for Mrs. Holland who killed a 19 - pound gobbler in 1961. This year's "bronze-back" had a beard which measured nine and one - half inches in length and a wingspread of slightly more than five feet.

TALLULAH HUNTER E. W. Edmonson bagged this 19¼-pound gobbler on the Chicago Mills Game Management Area. The turkey had a 58 - inch wingspread and a 9½ - inch beard. Louisiana's 9 - day turkey season closes today.

Baltimore Tops Punchless Sox In 3-0 Blanking

BALTIMORE (AP) — Chuck Estrada and Dick Hall blanked the punchless Boston Red Sox on two hits Saturday as the Baltimore Orioles opened their home season with a 3-0 victory.

Estrada allowed both hits, in the second inning, and struck out five in the seven innings he worked. The 24-year-old righthander was removed from the game after developing a blister on his index finger.

Hall completed the whitewash and preserved Estrada's first victory by retiring all six men he faced in the final two innings.

The Red Sox have scored four runs in 30 innings of play since the season opened, all on a bases loaded home run by Carroll Hardy in the 12th inning of Wednesday's game against Cleveland.

Brooks Robinson and Gus Triandos hit back-to-back solo homers off Boston starter Gene Conley to put the Orioles in front in the second inning.

Both drives, hit into the teeth of a stiff wind blowing from left to right field, barely cleared the left field fence. Robinson's homer went about 320 feet over a 14-foot wall near the line, while the 365-foot blast by Triandos went over the wire fence which has been brought in 12 feet since last season.

The Orioles completed the scoring in the fourth on a sacrifice fly by Jerry Adair after a hit batter, a double by Brooks Robinson and an intentional walk loaded the bases.

Greenies Take Conference Win From Alabama

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tulane snapped a seven-game losing streak Saturday with a 1-0 shutout of Alabama in a Southeastern Conference baseball game.

Bobby Neider singled to drive in catcher Bob Cornett in the first inning for the game's only run.

Tulane starter Dick Roninger, a sophomore, hurled hitless ball until two were out in the sixth. Bama's Jerry Ellis and Bill Rix touched him for singles but he forced Tommy Hill to pop to center to end the threat.

Plauche Villere relieved Roninger in the 8th after the starter loaded the bases and the reliefer pitched hitless ball the rest of the game to keep the victory on ice.

IN QUANTICO RELAYS

Gubner Sends Shot 62 Feet, 6 Inches

By ED CORRIGAN

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — Gary Gubner, the 1-year-old hercules from New York University, made his first outdoor start of the season Saturday in the Quantico Relays and got off a mighty heave of 62 feet, 6 inches in the shotput.

Gubner, who has been concentrating on weight lifting to the distress of his coach, Joe Healey, since he last tossed the iron ball in London a month ago, thus joined five other of the world's muscle men in the exclusive 62-plus club.

A crowd of 5,50—including astronaut Col. John Glenn and his family—sat under a bright sun for the second day of the East's first big outdoor track event.

Col. Glenn, in civilian clothes, sat unnoticed for 20 minutes before he was recognized. The word spread and five minutes later Gen. E. W. Snedeker, commandant of Quantico, summoned the Glenn family to his box to watch the rest of the meet.

"My son, David, is a half-miler," said Col. Glenn. "I don't know how fast he can go, but he's on the junior varsity team."

Morgan State won two of the four relays, while Fordham and Maryland State captured one each. That enabled Morgan State to split the top honors with Fordham. The Rams won one Friday.

Morgan State whipped to victories in the mile relay in 3:13.7 and the 440 relay in 42.2. John Bethea, Robert Bagley, Hubert Brown and Lawson Smart ran in the mile, while Bethea, Wilton Jackson, Oliver Dobbins and Brown handled the stick in the 440.

Fordham, running with Bill Slator, Doug Tynan, Tom Kenney and Frank Tomeo, won the 2-mile in 7;40.8, and Maryland State took the half-mile relay in 1:27.2. Dick Davis Charlie Mays, Jim Phipps and Russ Rogers ran for the winners.

Villanova, one of the top favorites for the NCAA and AAU championships later in the season, went home empty-handed. Jim Elliott's Wildcats had a good chance to win the half until Frank Budd missed taking the baton from Paul Drayton.

As for Gubner, he joins Bill Neider, Dallas Long, Parry O'Brien, Dave Davis and Arthur Rowe as a member of the 62-foot plus club.

Big Gary, a 225-pound sophomore, is gunning for the retired Nieder's 65-10 world record. He already has beaten all four active 62-footers this year.

Davis was Gubner's main competition and finished with a 60-3¼ toss. Davis is a Marine Corps pivate stationed at Camp Pendleton, Calif. He was out of action last year and is trying for a comeback.

Gubner's shotput, of course, smashed the meet record of 57-4 set by O'Brien in 1956.

Two other meet records were set—in the steeplechase and the pole vault. Deacon Jones of Washington, a veteran of the international track wars, won the 3,000 meter steeplechase in 9:15.8, breaking his own 2-year record of 9:18.3.

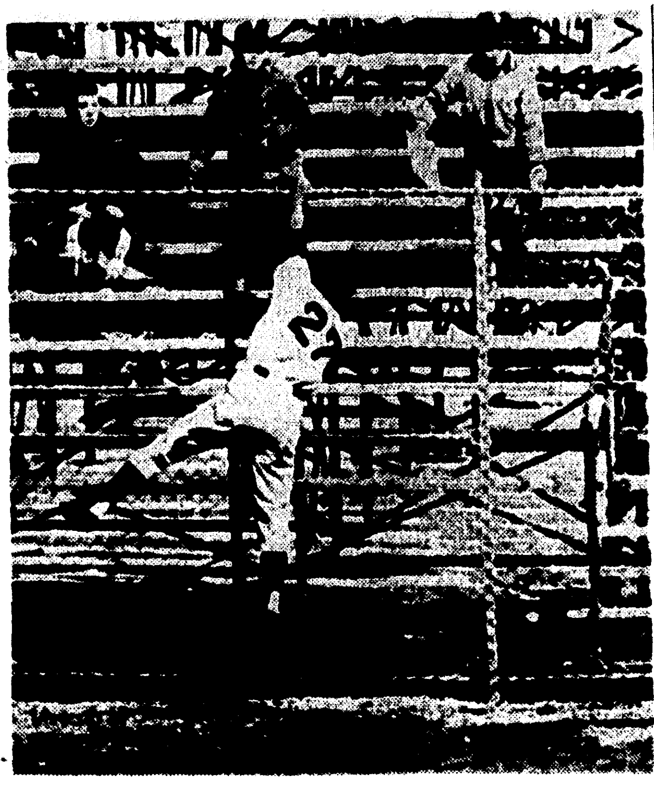
Dave Tork of Camp Pendleton broke the pole vault record by clearing 15-7¾. The mark was 15 even and set by Bob Gutowski in 1960. John Belitza of Maryland and Mel Schwarz of Camp Lejeune each got over 15-1. Belitza was given second on fewer misses.

Grambling Tops Arkansas AM&N

GRAMBLING (Special) — Grambling routed Arkansas AM&N 17-8 and 7-2 for the Tigers the season and a commanding lead in the Southwestern Conference baseball race.

Grambling had downed the Lions 7-2 Friday.

Frank Garnet, John Galloway, Carl Galmon and Robert Williams homered in the Tigers' 20-hit barrage against seven pitchers.



LEON WAGNER, Los Angeles Angels left fielder, leaps up against the fence, and hooks his arm over it, in attempt to catch a fourth inning home-run blast of Minnesota Twins' Don Rollins in their game yesterday. Several youngsters chase the ball. In the foreground, water and snow are shown near the fence. The last remnants of a six inch snowfall, which washed out Friday's opener, was cleaned from the field yesterday in 33-degree weather. (AP Wirephoto)

COLLEGE NEXT?

3-Point Goal Will Stay; May Spread

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

CHICAGO (AP) — The three-point goal, an innovation by Commissioner Abe Saperstein for the American Basketball League this season, is here to stay and maybe then some.

It could spread to the college ranks eventually.

The so-called "home run basket" is a field goal scored from 25 or more feet out from the basket. A line, in the form of an arc, on the floor designates the distance and a red light flashes on either end of the court when an official signals one as valid.

Chants of "hit a home run, hit a home run," or "go, go, go for the long one," were common among fans at ABL games.

The players scored 1,303 out of 4,349 attempts—30 per cent—for the regular season.

The Chicago Majors topped team production with 283 homers in 870 tries. Tony Jackson of the Majors was the individual leader, making 141 of 383 attempts. He swished in a record 12 in one game and got seven on three other occasions.

Others with a hot three-point hand were Bucky Bolyard and Phil Rollins of the Pittsburgh Rens with 108 and 89, respectively, Herb Lee, Hawaii Chiefs, 98, Nick Mantis, Kansas City, 89 and Roger Kaiser, New York Tapers, 72.

"The ABL will continue to exploit the three-point shot," said Saperstein. "Some high schools and colleges and conferences have indicated interest in it."

The three-pointer has determined the outcome of many ABL games during the season. In the recent five-game championship playoff, the Cleveland Pipers made 22 and the Kansas City Steers 12. The Pipers won the crown.

Bill Sharman, 10-year veteran of the Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association and now coach of the Pipers, said: "It's a powerful weapon. I don't encourage my players to use it because I have only two men—Johnny Cox and Johnny Barnhill—who can hit from out there. But there are times in a game when, psychologically, it's a big weapon, especially when you're behind. And the spectators love it."

Doug Mills, Illinois athletic director and member of the U.S. Olympic Basketball Committee, says he is intrigued with the three-point goal.

Baylor Bears Get Nod As Tourney Favorite

Baylor University has been installed as the early favorite in the third annual Easter Baseball Tournament here, which begins Thursday morning.

Four teams are entered in the three-day tournament — Baylor and Arkansas of the Southwest Conference and Northwestern and host Northeast of the Gulf States Conference.

Baylor, as of last Thursday, had an 8-2 record for the season and was tied with Texas University for the lead in the Southwest Conference baseball race with a 4-1 mark.

The Bears from Waco, Texas, are coached by E. G. "Dutch" Schroeder, the former freshman coach who succeeded Loyd Russell this season. Russell coached Baylor in a previous tournament, the 1960 affair.

Although they faded on the last day of the meet and finished behind co-champions Mississippi State and LSU in 1960, the Bears made an impressive showing in their previous appeaance. Baylor was slated to appear in the 1961 tournament, which was rained out.

The only other team in this year's tournament with a record comparable to Baylor's is Coach George Luffey's host team. Northeast's Indians went into a Saturday twin bill against Southeastern atop the Gulf Sttaes circuit with a 4-1 record and a 7-3 slate overall.

Northeast shared the title in the first Easter Tournament in 1959 with Mississippi State.

Arkansas, although a member of the Southwest Conference, does not compete for the baseball championship. The Razorback baseballers have been plagued by bad weather most of the spring and have played only seven games, winning three. Arkansas was scheduled to play Emporia, Kansas, State Friday and Saturday.

Northwestern, the only team besides Northeast to play in both previous tournaments, was sheduled to play Louisiana Tech in two games Saturday.

Cracker Brown's Demons, prior to the Tech games, were 5-6 for the season and 2-4 in the GSC.

Northeast and Northwestern are the only tournamnet teams who have played each other this season. The GSC rivals met in two games April 2 with Northwestern taking the first, 4-3, and Northeast winning the second, 6-0.

Four games will be played each day Thursday and Friday, with the tournament to wind up Saturday with two games.

In contrast to past tournaments, in which the champion was decided by recrd, the championship will be settled in a playoff contest Saturday at 3:30. The two teams with the best records in the first two days of play willl meet for the title. The other two clubs will meet in a consolation final at 1:30 Saturday.

Arkansas and Baylor meet in the tourney's first game at 9:00 Thursday morning with Northeast and Northwestern to tangle at 11, Arkansas and Northeast at 2 and Baylor and Northwestern at 4.

Northwestern and Arkansas play at 9 Friday, Baylor and Northeast at 11, Arkansas and Northeast at 2 and Baylor and Northwestern at 4.

All games are scheduled for seven innings and all will be played on the Ouachita Parish High School diamond in Monroe.

Admission for each two-game session with $1.00 for adults and 50 cents for students. Student ID cards will serve as tickets for Northeast students.

SLICK-FIELDING Northwestern shortstop Herbie Smith is one of many college baseball stars who will perform in Northeast's annual Easter Baseball Tournament here this week. Smith is from Shreveport. The tournament will run Thursday through Saturday at the Ouachita High diamond. Baylor, Arkansas and host Northeast are other teams entered.

Ray Berry Signs 1962 Contract

BALTIMORE (AP) — Raymond Berry, star end of the Baltimore Colts, signed his contract to play again in 1962, the National Football League team announced Saturday.

Berry missed the first two games of last season because of knee trouble. He still caught 75 passes to rank second in the circuit.

COLLEGE NEXT?

3-Point Goal Will Stay; May Spread

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

CHICAGO (AP) — The three-point goal, an innovation by Commissioner Abe Saperstein for the American Basketball League this season, is here to stay and maybe then some.

It could spread to the college ranks eventually.

The so-called "home run basket" is a field goal scored from 25 or more feet out from the basket. A line, in the form of an arc, on the floor designates the distance and a red light flashes on either end of the court when an official signals one as valid.

Chants of "hit a home run, hit a home run," or "go, go, go for the long one," were common among fans at ABL games.

The players scored 1,303 out of 4,349 attempts—30 per cent—for the regular season.

The Chicago Majors topped team production with 283 homers in 870 tries. Tony Jackson of the Majors was the individual leader, making 141 of 383 attempts. He swished in a record 12 in one game and got seven on three other occasions.

Others with a hot three-point hand were Bucky Bolyard and Phil Rollins of the Pittsburgh Rens with 104 and 89, respectively, Herb Lee, Hawaii Chiefs, 93, Nick Mantis, Kansas City, 89 and Roger Kaiser, New York Tapers, 72.

"The ABL will continue to exploit the three-point shot," said Saperstein. "Some high schools and colleges and conferences have indicated interest in it."

The three-pointer has determined the outcome of many ABL games during the season. In the recent five-game championship playoff, the Cleveland Pipers made 22 and the Kansas City Steers 12. The Pipers won the crown.

Bill Sharman, 10-year veteran of the Boston Celtics of the National Basketball Association and now coach of the Pipers, said: "It's a powerful weapon. I don't encourage my players to use it because I have only two men—Johnny Cox and Johnny Barnhill—who can hit from out there. But there are times in a game when, psychologically, it's a big weapon, especially when you're behind. And the spectators love it."

Doug Mills, Illinois athletic director and member of the U.S. Olympic Basketball Committee, says he is intrigued with the three-point goal.

AT NLSC EASTER MEET

Baylor Bears Get Nod As Tourney Favorite

Baylor University has been installed as the early favorite in the third annual Easter Baseball Tournament here, which begins Thursday morning.

Four teams are entered in the three-day tournament — Baylor and Arkansas of the Southwest Conference and Northwestern and host Northeast of the Gulf States Conference.

Baylor, as of last Thursday, had an 8-2 record for the season and was tied with Texas University for the lead in the Southwest Conference baseball race with a 4-1 mark.

The Bears from Waco, Texas, are coached by E. G. "Dutch" Schroeder, the former freshman coach who succeeded Loyd Russell this season. Russell coached Baylor in a previous tournament, the 1960 affair.

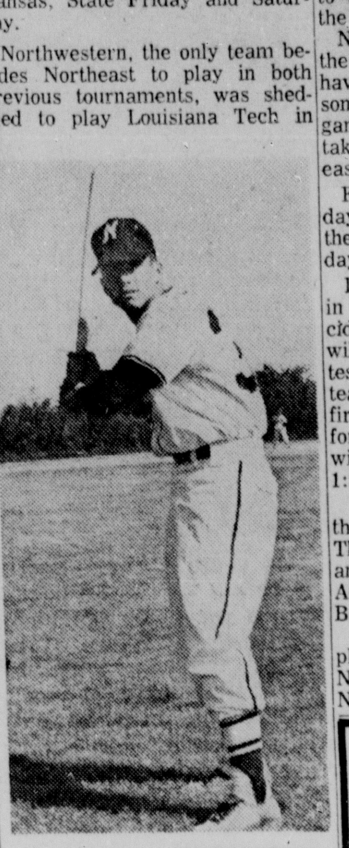
Although they faded on the last day of the meet and finished behind co-champions Mississippi State and LSU in 1960, the Bears made an impressive showing in their previous appeaance. Baylor was slated to appear in the 1961 tournament, which was rained out.

The only other team in this year's tournament with a record comparable to Baylor's is Coach George Luffey's host team. Northeast's Indians went into a Saturday twin bill against Southeastern atop the Gulf Sttaes circuit with a 4-1 record and a 7-3 slate overall.

Northeast shared the title in the first Easter Tournament in 1959 with Mississippi State.

Arkansas, although a member of the Southwest Conference, does not compete for the baseball championship. The Razorback baseballers have been plagued by bad weather most of the spring and have played only seven games, winning three. Arkansas was scheduled to play Emporia, Kansas, State Friday and Saturday.

Northwestern, the only team besides Northeast to play in both previous tournaments, was scheduled to play Louisiana Tech in two games Saturday.



SLICK-FIELDING Northwestern shortstop Herbie Smith is one of many college baseball stars who will perform in Northeast's annual Easter Baseball Tournament here this week. Smith is from Shreveport. The tournament will run Thursday through Saturday at the Ouachita High diamond. Baylor, Arkansas and host Northeast are other teams entered.

Cracker Brown's Demons, prior to the Tech games, were 5-6 for the season and 2-4 in the GSC.

Northeast and Northwestern are the only tournamnet teams who have played each other this season. The GSC rivals met in two games April 2 with Northwestern taking the first, 4-3, and Northeast winning the second, 6-0.

Four games will be played each day Thursday and Friday, with the tournament to wind up Saturday with two games.

In contrast to past tournaments, in which the champion was decided by recrd, the championship will be settled in a playoff contest Saturday at 3:30. The two teams with the best records in the first two days of play willl meet for the title. The other two clubs will meet in a consolation final at 1:30 Saturday.

Arkansas and Baylor meet in the tourney's first game at 9:00 Thursday morning with Northeast and Northwestern to tangle at 11, Arkansas and Northeast at 2 and Baylor and Northwestern at 4.

Northwestern and Arkansas play at 9 Friday, Baylor and Northeast at 11, Arkansas and Northeast at 2 and Baylor and Northwestern at 4.

All games are scheduled for seven innings and all will be played on the Ouachita Parish High School diamond in Monroe.

Admission for each two-game session with $1.00 for adults and 50 cents for students. Student ID cards will serve as tickets for Northeast students.

Ray Berry Signs 1962 Contract

BALTIMORE (AP) — Raymond Berry, star end of the Baltimore Colts, signed his contract to play again in 1962, the National Football League team announced Saturday.

Berry missed the first two games of last season because of knee trouble. He still caught 75 passes to rank second in the circuit.

IN QUANTICO RELAYS

Gubner Sends Shot 62 Feet, 6 Inches

By ED CORRIGAN

QUANTICO, Va. (AP) — Gary Gubner, the 1-year-old hercules from New York University, made his first outdoor start of the season Saturday in the Quantico Relays and got off a mighty heave of 62 feet, 6 inches in the shotput.

Gubner, who has been concentrating on weight lifting to the distress of his coach, Joe Healey, since he last tossed the iron ball in London a month ago, thus joined five other of the world's muscle men in the exclusive 62-plus club.

A crowd of 5,50—including astronaut Col. John Glenn and his family—sat under a bright sun for the second day of the East's first big outdoor track event.

Col. Glenn, in civilian clothes, sat unnoticed for 20 minutes before he was recognized. The word spread and five minutes later Gen. E. W. Snedeker, commandant of Quantico, summoned the Glenn family to his box to watch the rest of the meet.

"My son, David, is a half-miler," said Col. Glenn. "I don't know how fast he can go, but he's on the junior varsity team."

Morgan State won two of the four relays, while Fordham and Maryland State captured one each. That enabled Morgan State to split the top honors with Fordham. The Rams won one Friday.

Morgan State whipped to victories in the mile relay in 3:13.7 and the 440 relay in 42.2. John Bethea, Robert Bagley, Hubert Brown and Lawson Smart ran in the mile, while Bethea, Wilton Jackson, Oliver Dobbins and Brown handled the stick in the 440.

Fordham, running with Bill Slator, Doug Tynan, Tom Kenney and Frank Tomeo, won the 2-mile in 7:40.8, and Maryland State took the half-mile relay in 1:27.2. Dick Davis Charlie Mays, Jim Phipps and Russ Rogers ran for the winners.

Villanova, one of the top favorites for the NCAA and AAU championships later in the season, went home empty-handed. Jim Elliott's Wildcats had a good chance to win the half until Frank Budd missed taking the baton from Paul Drayton.

As for Gubner, he joins Bill Neider, Dallas Long, Parry O'Brien, Dave Davis and Arthur Rowe as a member of the 62-foot plus club.

Big Gary, a 225-pound sophomore, is gunning for the retired Nieder's 65-10 world record. He already has beaten all four active 62-footers this year.

Davis was Gubner's main competition and finished with a 60-3¼ toss. Davis is a Marine Corps pivate stationed at Camp Pendleton, Calif. He was out of action last year and is trying for a comeback.

Gubner's shotput, of course, smashed the meet record of 57-4 set by O'Brien in 1956.

Two other meet records were set—in the steeplechase and the pole vault. Deacon Jones of Washington, a veteran of the international track wars, won the 3,000 meter steeplechase in 9:15.8, breaking his own 2-year record of 9:18.3.

Dave Tork of Camp Pendleton broke the pole vault record by clearing 15-7¾. The mark was 15 even and set by Bob Gutowski in 1960. John Belitza of Maryland and Mel Schwarz of Camp LeJeune each got over 15-1. Belitza was given second on fewer misses.

Grambling Tops Arkansas AM&N

GRAMBLING (Special) — Grambling routed Arkansas AM&N 17-8 and 7-2 for the Tigers the season and a commanding lead in the Southwestern Conference baseball race.

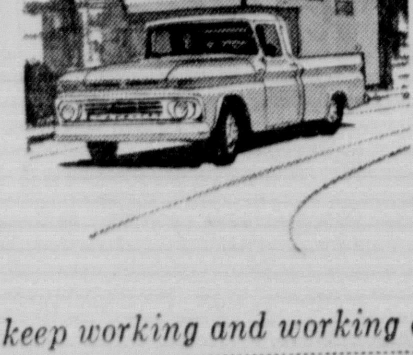
Grambling had downed the Lions 7-2 Friday.

Frank Garnet, John Galloway, Carl Galmon and Robert Williams homered in the Tigers' 20-hit barrage against seven pitchers.

Corvair 95—only pickup with side-loading ramp.
Fleetside pickup—most popular Chevrolet truck.

Depend on it to give you an honest day's work for a long, long time and not cost much to run or keep up. It's a Chevrolet.

Trucks aren't all alike. This Chevrolet has double-wall roof, doors and side panels. It has suspension that helps it last longer by reducing road shock. It has a non-skid wood body floor. It has as tough a tailgate as you'll find. It has an all-welded frame made of high-quality steel. Most important, it has a name everybody respects because they know it stands for quality. When you make up your mind to buy, get this one. We know you'll be happy with it.



Have you looked into camper bodies? This is a fine way to enjoy the outdoors comfortably and at low cost. You can drive and park them nearly anywhere. There are lots of other advantages too! Many Chevrolet dealers are showing camper units now. Drop by and investigate this great way to make a truck do double duty. A strong Chevrolet is your best bet for work or play.

See your Chevrolet dealer for trucks that keep working and working and working and working!

Alaskans May Seize Japanese Fishing Boats

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP)—Alaska officials may be preparing to seize Japanese fishing boats in the Shelikof Straits, claimed by the state as territorial waters, the Anchorage Times reported Saturday.

At the state Capitol in Juneau, Gov. William A. Egan said he "certainly would not deny" the report.

Egan brushed off further questioning.

Anchorage Times reporter Jerry Bowkett telephoned from Kodiak that Asst. Atty. Gen. Jim Bradley; Clarence Weberg, game department official; and Capt. E. L. Mayfield of the state police were believed to be heading a party of officials scheduled to board the Japanese vessels.

A Japanese fishing fleet, consisting of a mother ship, the Banshu Maru, and five catcher boats, has been reported in the Shelikof Straits for nearly two weeks. Friday, Egan said they were taking herring, for roe.

The Shelikof Straits, 20 miles wide at the narrowest point, lie between Kodiak Island and the Alaska Peninsula. The waters are claimed by the state under a state attorney general's opinion.

Bowkett said the seizure plan apparently calls for boarding two of the catcher boats and bringing them to Kodiak.

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—Editors of the nation's newspapers gather in New Orleans next week with Vice President Lyndon Johnson, astronaut Virgil Grissom and comedian Bob Hope competing for the spotlight.

The American Society of Newspaper Editors (ASNE) opens its annual convention — an affair rarely held outside the nation's Capital — on Tuesday with a banquet bringing it to a close Friday night.

About 350 editors are expected for the meeting of the society formed in 1922.

Vice President Johnson will address a luncheon meeting Thursday while a discussion of the U.S. space program is on tap the same day.

Speakers at the space session will include astronaut Virgil Grissom, Gen. Bernard A. Schriever who commands the Air Force System s Command, and Dr. Joseph Shea who directs the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Office of Manned Space Flight.

Comedian Bob Hope will be the guest speaker at the banquet concluding the convention Friday night.

ASNE president Felix McKnight, who is executive editor of the Dallas (Tex.) Times-Herald, said Byron (Whizzer) White, former asst. U.S. atty. Gen. whom President Kennedy named as associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court, will not attend the convention. He had been scheduled to speak on behalf of the U.S. Department of Justice.

Spring was everywhere in evidence at the coffee party given Wednesday morning in the JOHN KELSO home which was decorated with particularly lovely seasonal arrangements. Hostesses for the affair were VERA KELSO, JUDY WORTHEN, and JANE SARTOR.

As they greeted guests in the living room, Vera was wearing a beige silk sheath; Judy a white silk pleated from shoulder to hem; and Jane, a slim white linen dress. Flowers in this room included a large nosegay of specimen pansies on the coffee table and a mass arrangement of daisies at one side. On the mantel a stuffed rabbit and gaily colored eggs were used with daisies. Noted on the porch was a mass bowl of varicolored anemones and ranunculas, with a nest holding a rabbit and eggs nearby.

In the dining room, the refreshment table was centered with Bisque cupid holding yellow snapdragons, pink and yellow carnations, and blue Dutch iris. RUTH KELSO and JOY MARSHALL alternated at the coffee service. Others assisting were JERRY OAKLEY, BARBARA ANN WILLIAMS, GAIL FORTENBERRY, TEEDEE DIXON, and ROSEMARY HOLMES.

Refreshments were also served in the den from a table decorated with a crescent arrangement of Talisman roses in a copper chafing dish. The goodies included cucumber sandwiches, tiny sponge cakes with lemon filling, cheese puffs, and whole strawberries in bite-size pastries. TOMMY SUE SARTOR and BETTY B. JACKSON presided at the coffee service in this room. Others assisting were ELAINE MILLSAPS, PEGGY CLAY, CINDY WAKEFIELD, ANNE BERNHARDT, and JOAN SAGER.

Over one hundred ladies called between the hours of ten and twelve. Out of town guests here for the party were MRS. T. M. SAYRE and MRS. L. N. PIPES of Rayville.

For a home luncheon on Monday, JESSIE LEE WOODS carried out an Easter theme in appointments. Bouquets of spring flowers decorated the living room. On the dining table, a yellow rabbit with Easter eggs was flanked by compotes filled with pastel mints. Placecards for twelve guests were tiny Easter chickens. The menu included shrimp cocktail, frozen fruit salad, beans, and hot rolls, with individual peach pies for dessert.

The MARCUS MAPPS had a migratory weekend last week. On Friday night they were in Greenville, Miss., for a four-piano concert. Elise's cousin, MRS. RAY TALLEY, was one of the pianists. Daughter MALISE joined the Mapps in Greenville as she was en route from MSCW to Monroe for the weekend. The elder Mapps proceeded to Memphis Saturday, returning home Sunday.

Other members of the college set in town last weekend included NANCY SNELLINGS, JAN ADCOCK, and her guest, MAGGIE GERLICHER of Baton Rouge. The GEORGE SNELLINGS entertained at dinner Saturday night for these three and PORGY NORWOOD of Franklin. Marie Louise decorated her table with violets and candles. The menu included Chinese egg roll, seafood gumbo, ham with eggs Florentine and marinated mixed vegetables. For dessert, coeur de creme was served with highly spiced cake.

Six couples were invited for dinner and bridge with the BARNEY PATES last Friday evening. An Easter egg tree was used to center the buffet, where the menu included a shrimp casserole, congealed fruit salad, hot rolls, and deep dish apple pie with ice cream for dessert. Card games followed dinner, with prizes awarded to BILL DENT, high for the men; VIRGINIA HARGROVE, lady's high; and HANK HARGROVE, low.

A surprise luncheon was the treat for JENNIFER JACKSON on her twelfth birthday Saturday when she was invited for a shopping - and - lunch outing with her grandmother. When they reached Bayou DeSiard country club, she found eleven little friends and her mother making up the party. A white basket filled with spirea, jonquils and azaleas decorated the table. Following the lunch, complete with birthday cake, the group came home to play in the yard. Headbands were favors for the young guests.

On Thursday last, TAYLOR SPRADLING entertained with a bridge - luncheon at home. Arrangements of azalea blossoms were placed in living room and dining room. Included on the menu served to eight guests were chicken tetrazzini, congealed salad, rolls, fudge and caramel squares. Prizes, silver demi-tasse spoons, were awarded for bridge to MARGARET LAND, high; EVA CLAIRE GINN, second; and BETTY GEISLER, floating prize.

For her eighth birthday, ANN SHELTON invited about twenty second grade girls for an old fashioned party-in-the-park. Rain held off long enough for an afternoon of jump rope and hop-scotch. Favors were individual jump ropes. Pink lemonade, ice cream, and pink birthday cake were served.

Weather also favored ADELE DIXON for her sixth birthday party Tuesday afternoon, when forty little friends gathered on the lawn at Bayou DeSiard country club. The birthday girl was dressed as a pink rabbit, while mother Teedee was a chicken. The children in their Easter finery made a charming picture searching for Easter eggs on the bayou bank. LYNN PARKER and CLYDE WESTROM collected the greatest number, while MANDY BETZ found the golden egg. Their prizes were plastic eggs filled with pennies. The rabbit-shaped birthday cake was served with punch and ice cream from a table centered with an Easter egg tree . . . LIVE CHICKENS were given as favors to forty guests.

Oft - quoted lines are often referred to as "hackneyed," but let us remember that the lines containing real truths are the most likely to be quoted. Consider "If" by Rudyard Kipling:

If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you;
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
But make allowance for their doubting, too;
If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
Or, being lied about, don't deal in lies,
Or being hated, don't give way to hating,
And yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise;
If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken
Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools,
Or watch the things you gave your life to, broken,
And stoop and build 'em up with worn - out tools;
If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue
Or walk with kings — nor lose the common touch,
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you,
If all men count with you, but none too much;
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the earth and everything that's in it,
And — which is more — you'll be a Man, my son!

And then there is the sign in the Pentagon which says, "If you can keep your head when all about you are losing theirs, maybe you just don't understand the situation."

MISS MARGARET GERLICHER of Baton Rouge, at left, was a weekend guest of Miss Jan Adcock at the home of her parents, the Jamar Adcocks, 2735 Point Drive. Both are students at Louisiana State University where they are Delta Delta Delta sorority sisters.

Every silhouette of the season .. every wonderful fabric . . . every delectable color! We cordially invite you to see them.

The Order Of Things

Placing the fork on the left of the plate and the spoon and knife on the right is a holdover from the European style of eating, in which the fork is always used in the left hand. Begun for a practical reason, this division of silver frames the china and food, and is pleasing to the eye.

Meat, fish and poultry sales accounted for 24.2 per cent of total supermarket volume in 1960. The companies who advertise meat and fish spent over $0.5 million nationally in daily newspapers to tell consumers about their products.

Modern Living

Sterling silver flatware has long been the traditional gift of the bride's parents. Victorian parents had to provide their daughter with as many as [illegible] pieces, as setting a table in those days was an elaborate affair. With today's more casual living and multi-purpose silver pieces, a usable set of sterling need not be a budget-breaking expense. Parents can begin their daughter's collection with place settings consisting of just four, five, or six essential pieces.

Traditional Carnation Ball Held By Phi Mu

Originality and artistry were combined last Saturday night at the Paragon Supper Club, where Alpha Rho chapter of Phi Mu sorority entertained at the traditional Carnation Ball.

The formal occasion climaxed the school year's social events for the Northeast Louisiana State College chapter.

Couples danced in an Easter setting, characterized by beauty and festivity, directed by Miss Ellen Walker, the sorority's social chairman.

Attracting attention were white trees bearing pink carnations. The central decor was a large tree in bloom with pastel Easter eggs. Suspended from the ceiling were white bird cages festooned with greenery.

Adding to the spring atmosphere were tables holding white baskets filled with pink bunnies and pastel eggs and containers of assorted nuts.

Members, their escorts and guests signed the guest book on a table centered with a large white silk Easter rabbit nestled in pink carnations.

Nearby were a large white tree and garden furniture which served as a background for the refreshment table, which held a silver punch bowl encircled with glistening magnolia leaves dotted with pink carnations.

A highlight of the evening was the parade of Phi Mu members and their dates and the presentation of favors to each active member by Miss Sandra Simpson, sorority president of Monroe. The gifts were thermos jugs in gay Scotch plaids, bearing the Phi Mu coat of arms and the inscription, "Phi Mu Pink Carnation Ball-1962."

Also receiving favors were Northeast President George T. Walker and Mrs. Walker; Dr. Marvin McKneely, chairman of the college committee on fraternities and sororities; Mrs. Henry Hinkle, district president; Mrs. Clifton Flinn, alumnae adviser; Mrs. Clarence Ball, financial adviser; Mrs. Era Davis, social adviser; Mrs. Annie Lee West Stahl, publicity chairman; and Miss Alma Lufcy, counselor to Northeast women students.

An additional feature was Miss Simpson's presentation of a bouquet of pink carnations from the sorority to Miss Gay Demmary, immediate past president of the collegiate chapter.

Clean Shrimp

A toothpick will clean shrimp quickly. Slip the toothpick under the fine black thread along the back of the shrimp and lift it off in one piece. Using a knife often spoils the shape of the shellfish.

Protect Flowers

Keep flower arrangements away from draughts, direct sunshine and hot radiators and from air conditioners in the summer. Resting them in a cool, dark place at night will refresh them and prolong their beauty.

Stroud-Holladay Vows Planned

Announcement is made by Mrs. Otis Clyde Holladay of Bay Minette, Alabama of the engagement of her daughter, Nancy Marie to Ray Burns Stroud of Montgomery, La. The wedding will be an event of May 19 in the chapel of the First Baptist Church of Bay Minette.

Miss Holladay received her degree with major in piano and minor in English from Judson College, Marion, Alabama, and has done work towards master's degree at the University of Alabama. She is presently employed by the Baldwin County Board of Education in Roberts Dale high school.

Mr. Stroud received his B. M. degree from Louisiana College in August and will receive his master's degree in church music from the Baptist Seminary in New Orleans with emphasis on voice. He is presently employed by Highland Baptist Church of New Iberia as director of church choirs.

ACCENT HAIR

Flower colors are suggested for ladies selecting their own corsages and wishing to accent their hair: white and vivid colors for brunettes; yellow, blue and pastels for blonds; blue, bronze (bronze chrysanthemums and cymbidium orchids) and chartreuse (cypripdeium orchids or fugi mums) for redhair and pink, blue and purple for gray hair.

Traditional Carnation Ball Held By Phi Mu

Originality and artistry were combined last Saturday night at the Paragon Supper Club, where Alpha Rho chapter of Phi Mu Sorority entertained at the traditional Carnation Ball.

The formal occasion climaxed the school year's social events for the Northeast Louisiana State College chapter.

Couples danced in an Easter setting, characterized by beauty and festivity, directed by Miss Ellen Walker, the sorority's social chairman.

Attracting attention were white trees bearing pink carnations. The central decor was a large tree in bloom with pastel Easter eggs. Suspended from the ceiling were white bird cages festooned with greenery.

Adding to the spring atmosphere were tables holding white baskets filled with pink bunnies and pastel eggs and containers of assorted nuts.

Members, their escorts and guests signed the guest book on a table centered with a large white silk Easter rabbit nestled in pink carnations.

Nearby were a large white tree and garden furniture which served as a background for the refreshment table, which held a silver punch bowl encircled with glistening magnolia leaves dotted with pink carnations.

A highlight of the evening was the parade of Phi Mu members and their dates and the presentation of favors to each active member by Miss Sandra Simpson, sorority president of Monroe. The gifts were thermos jugs in gay Scotch plaids, bearing the Phi Mu coat of arms and the inscription, "Phi Mu Pink Carnation Ball-1962."

Walker and Mrs. Walker; Dr. Marvin McKneely, chairman of the college committee on fraternities and sororities; Mrs. Henry Hinkle, district president; Mrs. Clifton Flinn, alumnae adviser; Mrs. Clarence Ball, financial adviser; Mrs. Era Davis, social adviser; Mrs. Annie Lee West Stahl, publicity chairman; and Miss Alma Lufcy, counselor to Northeast women students.

MRS. TRUMAN JEFFERY WALTER

Area Couple Wed In Church At El Dorado

A fan shaped arrangement of white gladioli, palm trees and purple candles in seven-branched candelabra formed a setting in Block and Hardy Church of Christ at El Dorado, for the late March wedding of Miss JoAnn Chandler of El Dorado and James Crawley Gazaway, Lowry Air Force Base, Denver, Colorado.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Etta B. Chandler of Lubbock, Texas and Gordon S. Chandler, El Dorado. Mrs. Gazaway is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Gazaway of Perryville.

W. Don Fike performed the double ring ceremony at 2:30 p.m. which was preceded by two vocal selections, "Because," and "I Love You Truly," by J. Harold Goss.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white satin, styled on princess lines. The bodice, embellished with sequins, featured a scalloped neckline and long pointed sleeves and a large bow marked the back waistline. A sequin crown held her waist length veil of white illusion and she carried a bouquet centered with a white orchid. She wore opal earrings, a gift of the bridegroom.

Mrs. John Ed Moore, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. John T. Smith and Miss Cheryl Lowery. They wore identical short frocks of orchid satin with overskirts of matching silk organza, net headdresses and carried cascades of purple carnations.

Miss Judy Ann Gazaway, sister of the bridegroom, served as flower girl. She was dressed identically to the other attendants and carried a nosegay of purple carnations.

Serving as best man was John Ed Moore and groomsmen were John T. Smith and Billy Givens of Perryville.

For the occasion the bride's mother was wearing a beige linen sheath dress with jacket, matching accessories and a purple orchid. Mrs. Gazaway, mother of the bridegroom, wore a dress of blue lace over polished cotton, with matching accessories and a white orchid.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the church annex.

Centerpieces of carnations and daisies, flanked by candelabra holding lighted tapers were used on the serving table, bride's table and guest book table, all of which were covered with nylon lace. Rambling roses encircled the tiered wedding cake. House party for the reception included Miss Gail Ables, Mrs. Bill Riggs, Mrs. Ray Cheek, Miss Rebecca Mathis and Miss Jo Ann Longing.

For a wedding trip through points of Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana, the bride was wearing a three piece suit of linen with matching accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. They will establish a home at Denver, Colorado.

Jacket Changes Sheath Dress

Here's a fashion tip for brightening up that "little nothing" sheath dress for spring:

A short jacket, fashioned from any of the glamour fabrics of the season will dress up that simple sheath into something extra special for evening. If you're handy with the sewing machine, there are many patterns available for Chanel - styles, cape - types, bolero cardigan jackets that are easy to make. Or, your favorite neckwear department or fashion shop may carry just what you are looking for.

Avoid Shrinkage

When washing woolens, have the rinse water the same temperature as the wash water. The change from warm water to cool water causes wool to shrink.

Warm Shades

A fan shaped arrangement of white gladioli, palm trees and purple candles in seven-branched candelabra formed a setting in Block and Hardy Church of Christ at El Dorado, for the late March wedding of Miss JoAnn Chandler of El Dorado and James Crawley Gazaway, Lowry Air Force Base, Denver, Colorado.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Etta B. Chandler of Lubbock, Texas and Gordon S. Chandler, El Dorado. Mrs. Gazaway is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Gazaway of Perryville.

W. Don Fike performed the double ring ceremony at 2:30 p.m. which was preceded by two vocal selections, "Because," and "I Love You Truly," by J. Harold Goss.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white satin, styled on princess lines. The bodice, embellished with sequins, featured a scalloped neckline and long pointed sleeves and a large bow marked the back waistline. A sequin crown held her waist length veil of white illusion and she carried a bouquet centered with a white orchid. She wore opal earrings, a gift of the bridegroom.

Mrs. John Ed Moore, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and bridesmaids were Mrs. John T. Smith and Miss Cheryl Lowery. They wore identical short frocks of orchid satin with overskirts of matching silk organza, net headdresses and carried cascades of purple carnations.

Miss Judy Ann Gazaway, sister of the bridegroom, served as flower girl. She was dressed identically to the other attendants and carried a nosegay of purple carnations.

Serving as best man was John Ed Moore and groomsmen were John T. Smith and Billy Givens of Perryville.

For the occasion the bride's mother was wearing a beige linen sheath dress with jacket, matching accessories and a purple orchid. Mrs. Gazaway, mother of the bridegroom, wore a dress of blue lace over polished cotton, with matching accessories and a white orchid.

A reception was held following the ceremony in the church annex.

Centerpieces of carnations and daisies, flanked by candelabra holding lighted tapers were used on the serving table, bride's table and guest book table, all of which were covered with nylon lace. Rambling roses encircled the tiered wedding cake. House party for the reception included Miss Gail Ables, Mrs. Bill Riggs, Mrs. Ray Cheek, Miss Rebecca Mathis and Miss Jo Ann Longing.

For a wedding trip through points of Mississippi, Arkansas and Louisiana, the bride was wearing a three piece suit of linen with matching accessories and the orchid from her bouquet. They will establish a home at Denver, Colorado.

Mrs. Gazaway was graduated from Lubbock high school. Mr. Gazaway graduated from Ouachita Parish high school in Monroe, and attended Harding College, Searcy, Arkansas and Northeast Louisiana State College in Monroe. He is a member of Tri Sigma Delta fraternity.

Jacket Changes Sheath Dress

Here's a fashion tip for brightening up that "little nothing" sheath dress for spring:

A short jacket, fashioned from any of the glamour fabrics of the season will dress up that simple sheath into something extra special for evening. If you're handy with the sewing machine, there are many patterns available for Chanel - styles, cape - types, bolero cardigan jackets that are easy to make. Or, your favorite neckwear department or fashion shop may carry just what you are looking for.

Avoid Shrinkage

When washing woolens, have the rinse water the same temperature as the wash water. The change from warm water to cool water causes wool to shrink.

Plant Mart, Garden Tog Show Staged By Club

Forsythe Park was the setting for the April meeting of the Monroe Garden Club on Monday with the event highlighted by a combined plant mart and garden tog style show.

Borders of shrubs, flowering trees and blooming plants provided by Roach's and Hester's Nurseries formed a background for the display of bounty from members' gardens.

At noon they gathered at tables erected in front of the bandstand for a box lunch while watching the garden tog style show. The bandstand, across which models paraded, was transformed into a garden, with a white picket fence, hanging baskets of fern and gay spring flowers.

Models were members of Monroe Garden Club and the Junior Garden Club. Accessories were from Lane Wilson, F. W. Woolworth and Ellis's; hats from Sears and clothing was furnished by J. C. Penney Co.

Mrs. DeWitt Milam, who served as narrator, was wearing pedal pushers striped in muted shades of blue and green with a blue blouse. Her matching rough straw hat featured a tall crown.

Mrs. N. R. Spencer was quite chic in a lime green two - piece seersucker dress and white rough straw hat.

Mrs. G. Fred Beckett and Mrs. J. W. Gaines, chairman and co - chairman for the meeting, were ready for clean - up time with their red leaf cart and rake. Mrs. Beckett was wearing black dutch boy pants stitched in white with a white on black printed cropped jacket, her hat a white rough straw trimmed in white brush fringe. Mrs. Gaines was dressed in pin striped blue seersucker pedal pushers with matching sleeveless blouse and red straw hat. Their washable shoes were by Kedette.

Mrs. Henson Coon Jr.'s Green Thumb garden tools blended perfectly with her turquoise cotton knit capri pants and overblouse. Her hat and bag were of burlap.

Mrs. M. H. Kulcke was wearing a dress of faded blue denim with a black straw hat, its fringe of black, pink and green echoing the colors of the flowers in her basket. She carried two types of flower cutting shears.

Mrs. John Collin's seersucker skirt and blouse with matching shorts was worn with a tall crowned hat in shades of pink and blue. Her tree trimmer is adjustable.

The white duck capri pants worn by Mrs. Jesse McDonald were topped by a white over blouse with large flower applique on one side. Her hat of yellow straw with brown raffia trim matched her grass snips.

Equally at home in the garden or town is the two - piece black and white seersucker with its easy pleated skirt worn by Mrs. A. E. Montgomery. She wore a multi - color straw hat and carried both long and short handled pruning shears.

Ready to use her blue sidewalk edger was Mrs. Wesley Shafto, Jr. dressed in gay orange long pants and overblouse in shades of yellow, orange and blue and wearing an orange and yellow hat.

In a rose toned beige and white two piece dress and green hat Mrs. John Theus was properly attired to either work in a a cluttered flower bed with a small three sided hoe she carried or to attend to business.

Mrs. A. B. Myatt, Jr. chose to model a shadow plaid pleated skirt in beige acrylic linen with matching roll up sleeve blouse and a hat of dark green straw which matched perfectly the grass she planned to attack with the garden hoe she carried.

Mrs. Edel Blanks, Jr. was most attractive in chartreuse cotton knit capri pants and white yellow and green blazer type overblouse. Her green hat was of fringed raffia and she completed her ensemble with a matching green hose and spray container.

A full skirted two piece dress in black and white ticking with a self belt was the choice of Mrs. Travis Oliver. A white straw hat, red plastic hose and red and white spray container were perfect complements to her costume.

Mrs. Henry Hinkle, dressed in orange pedal pushers, a gayly flowered overblouse and orange hat, finds watering no problem with her large galvanized watering can.

Mrs. Charles Garretson was attired in the perfect togs for gardening - comfortable, attractive blue jeans and red and white checked skirt. Her white straw hat was covered with fish net and topped with tassels. She carried an easy hoe and Melnor swinging spray.

Modern Motif Encourages Use Of Vivid Colors

By BETTY PEPIS

Q: For our living room we have chosen modern furniture. Sofa will be black and lemon, one chair will be lemon and another beige. Tables are walnut with glass tops. We'd like light beige walls, carpet and draperies. Room faces north. What do you think?

A: Beige is all right but I think a more interesting solution would be pale lemon walls and draperies, a white chair and a rug in lemon and black on white in a modern motif.

Q: We are finishing a large, bright upstairs bedroom for two girls, eight and ten. Carpet will be off-white, desk and built-ins will have white Formica tops. Please suggest type and color for furniture, walls, bedspread, curtains and any upholstered pieces.

A: Tall, slender four-poster beds are delightful for girls. Have these in a wood finish but paint rest of furniture color of walls. These could be off-white or pale pink (also woodwork and ceiling). Have washable white bedspread and dust ruffles, cafe curtains and chair in a crisp pink and white check.

Q: In living room of our new home, we plan Early American furniture. Walls are honey-beige, woodwork is natural. Picture window faces south. Please advise color for slip covers on sofa, also for rug, draperies and two chairs.

A: Have slip covers and draperies in a provincial print with a light beige ground with white and red or white and bright green. Rug could be hooked or braided in beige ground with other colors, particularly picking up whatever is in print. Chairs could be in the red or green.

Day By Day

The modern way to care for sterling silver flatware is to use it and enjoy it every day. Used regularly, it seldom needs polishing, and develops a lovely soft patina. Wash silver promptly after each meal in hot sudsy water, and rinse it in clear water. Sterling may also be washed in an automatic dishwasher.

Creative Art Of Needlework Being Revived

NEW YORK (UPI) — Needlework had its origins in the stone age when women first stitched for necessity. Today, she is a rare female who doesn't do some sort of sewing, either from necessity as did her sister of centuries ago, or for relaxation and satisfaction of the creative talents.

It is of this latter group we wish to speak now — the women who are turning out needlepoint and crewel embroidery which are works of art.

Sources in the needlework field agree there is a whole resurgence in the hand-made. Women who once confined their sewing to putting a button back on hubby's coat now are taking lessons in needlepoint and crewel.

Some of them have become true artists, as exemplified in the first national exhibit this week by the American branch of the Embroiders' Guild, a British-based organization with branches throughout the English - speaking world.

More than 100 members, including some men, showed embroideries ranging from centerpieces to a priest's cloak, from framed "paintings" to handbags, from cushion covers to play shoes to a birth certificate.

The American branch of the guild, founded in 1958, is made up of embroiderers who are artists with the needle. Some have been doing needlework since childhood. Most are amateurs, but a few are professionals who teach privately, at arts and crafts schools, or at colleges and universities, and create designs for others to embroider.

Some of the amateurs do their own designs. Others consult with the professional designers. That centerpiece for a large dining room table was done in varying shades of brown thread on a natural-color linen background.

"How many hours did I spend on it?", said its creator, Mrs. Daryl Parshall of Milbrook, N.Y. "I've no idea. I usually have four or five pieces of embroidery going at once. To ask how many hours one work took is like asking a movie fan to estimate how many hours she spends each year going to the picture show."

Q: For our living room we have chosen modern furniture. Sofa will be black and lemon, one chair will be lemon and another beige. Tables are walnut with glass tops. We'd like light beige walls, carpet and draperies. Room faces north. What do you think?

A: Beige is all right but I think a more interesting solution would be pale lemon walls and draperies, a white chair and a rug in lemon and black on white in a modern motif.

Q: We are finishing a large, bright upstairs bedroom for two girls, eight and ten. Carpet will be off-white, desk and built-ins will have white Formica tops. Please suggest type and color for furniture, walls, bedspread, curtains and any upholstered pieces.

A: Tall, slender four-poster beds are delightful for girls. Have these in a wood finish but paint rest of furniture color of walls. These could be off-white or pale pink (also woodwork and ceiling). Have washable white bedspread and dust ruffles, cafe curtains and chair in a crisp pink and white check.

Q: In living room of our new home, we plan Early American furniture. Walls are honey-beige, woodwork is natural. Picture window faces south. Please advise color for slip covers on sofa, also for rug, draperies and two chairs.

A: Have slip covers and draperies in a provincial print with a light beige ground with white and red or white and bright green. Rug could be hooked or braided in beige ground with other colors, particularly picking up whatever is in print. Chairs could be in the red or green.

The modern way to care for sterling silver flatware is to use it and enjoy it every day. Used regularly, it seldom needs polishing, and develops a lovely soft patina. Wash silver promptly after each meal in hot sudsy water, and rinse it in clear water. Sterling may also be washed in an automatic dishwasher.

Creative Art Of Needlework Being Revived

NEW YORK (UPI) — Needlework had its origins in the stone age when women first stitched for necessity. Today, she is a rare female who doesn't do some sort of sewing, either from necessity as did her sister of centuries ago, or for relaxation and satisfaction of the creative talents.

It is of this latter group we wish to speak now — the women who are turning out needlepoint and crewel embroidery which are works of art.

Sources in the needlework field agree there is a whole resurgence in the hand-made. Women who once confined their sewing to putting a button back on hubby's coat now are taking lessons in needlepoint and crewel.

Some of them have become true artists, as exemplified in the first national exhibit this week by the American branch of the Embroiders' Guild, a British-based organization with branches throughout the English - speaking world.

More than 100 members, including some men, showed embroideries ranging from centerpieces to a priest's cloak, from framed "paintings" to handbags, from cushion covers to play shoes to a birth certificate.

The American branch of the guild, founded in 1958, is made up of embroiderers who are artists with the needle. Some have been doing needlework since childhood. Most are amateurs, but a few are professionals who teach privately, at arts and crafts schools, or at colleges and universities, and create designs for others to embroider.

Some of the amateurs do their own designs. Others consult with the professional designers. That centerpiece for a large dining room table was done in varying shades of brown thread on a natural-color linen background.

"How many hours did I spend on it?", said its creator, Mrs. Daryl Parshall of Milbrook, N.Y. "I've no idea. I usually have four or five pieces of embroidery going at once. To ask how many hours one work took is like asking a movie fan to estimate how many hours she spends each year going to the picture show."

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Confusion Is Seen In Classifications

By DR. JOHN WRIGHT
Guest Writer

One of the oldest practices of man is to classify objects and things round about him. Very often one hears somebody talking about a certain type of flower arrangement. There is much confusion relative to arrangement classifications because people often forget to state the basis on which the classification is being made.

There are many historic and national types of arrangements and they all have their value in the overall study of the art. Perhaps the most beneficial classification for the average arranger in this country is the one given in the Garden Club Handbook for contemporary American arrangements.

SIMILARITY

Similarity in name or description should not cause one to confuse these with other national types of arrangements. All of these are present - day and American.

Classification for the three major types is based on: 1. quantity of plant (or other) material used, 2. the amount of emphasis on the element line, and 3. openness in the arrangement.

Contemporary American flower arrangements are classifed as: 1. Line designs, 2. Massed - line designs, and 3. Massed designs. American line designs are often made with more material than the Oriental would use and with more emphasis on color and focal material. Massed - line design is truly American and might be called a hybrid between the Oriental line arrangement and the European mass arrangement. Contemporary massed designs are simplified as compared to period mass arrangements; colors and kinds are grouped and the number of kinds of material used are often kept to a minimum.

CHARACTERISTICS

Distinguishing characteristics of the contemporary American line design are: 1. Restraint in the quantity (amount) of material used. 2. A limited number of varieties used, usually three or fewer. 3. Openness of Silhouette with emphasis on voids. 4. Very little depth even at the focal point. 5. Strong emphasis on LINE. 6. Emphasis on simplicity, elimination of confusion and competing interests.

Massed - line designs may be characterized in the following manner: 1. A moderate amount of material is used (more than in a line arrangement). 2. The number of varieties of material may be increased to three or four depending on the skill of the arranger. 3. Openness of silhouette is emphasized but with decreasing emphasis on negative areas. 4. Depth at the focal point is increased and often emphasized and a strong center of interest or focal area is developed. 5. Line remains dominant, but light mass is added. 6. The greater amount of material, as compared to line, is handled to maintain simplicity and to eliminate conflicitng interests.

Contemporary massed designs have the following characteristics: 1. Large amounts of material are used, (Most people think of massed arrangements as being made on a large scale.) 2. The number of varieties of plant material may be increased to six or eight more. 3. Silhouette is closed. 4. Depth of the entire arrangement is emphasized. A flocal area is developed with dominant forms or colors. 5. FORM is dominant and line receives very little emphasis. 6. Forms and colors are grouped to create simplicity but a massed arrangement will not be as simple as one of the other two.

One should decide which of the above he is going to make before beginning the structural process. Arranging becomes much easier when we plan what we are going to do. Houses are planned! Automobiles are designed, but arrangements (according to some) are supposed to just happen!

(Dr. Wright showed picture slides from the State Flower Show last week on T. V. for the Garden Center and T. V. Show. This was such a timely program since we could show only five of the arrangements last week on our T. V. show. Hope you saw them. If you did I'm sure you enjoyed this program very much. Thanks to Dr. John Wright for bringing back these pictures and sharing them with us.)

This week — watch for another lovely flower show that will be brought to us from the Winnsboro Garden Club, of which Mrs. Sam Carriere is president.

Annual Type Flowers Are Versatile Lot

Annual flowers are versatile and give quick results. These characteristics combined with the fact that there is a very wide selection of flower colors and types put annuals at the top of the list when you begin to think of beauty about your home.

For the owner of a newly built home there is a double boon in annuals. First, there is the quick action that takes away that bare, raw look. Second, for only $2 or $3 (instead of $200 or $300), you can landscape your grounds with a dozen packets of flower seeds while you recover from that down payment.

SET OUT PLANTS

You can actually have bloom the first day if you set out started plants of such things as petunias, and you can have color in less than 60 days direct from seed with alyssum, candytuft, or other quick-blooming varieties. From then on you will have all kinds of color from midsummer to frost with a steady succession of flowers coming into their full glory.

Small trees and shrubs, freshly set out, have wide spaces between them which will eventually be filled by those plants, but in the interim those awkward spaces should be filled with annual flowers. They won't interfere with the growth of the permament plants, and they will make a house look like a home.

For homes with established plantings the places for annuals are ready-made and reserved for them. They include window boxes and planters, which are almost exclusively devoted to annual flowers, as well as individually potted plants which can be moved into a prominent location when they are in full bloom.

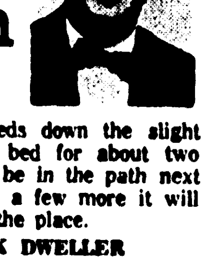
Then, the perennial border is also a spot for annuals. Perennials generally bloom in early summer or very late fall so that annuals planted between the perennial clumps provide the midsummer and early fall display that is otherwise lacking. Put late annuals between such perennial plants as columbine, which bloom early in the year, and then intersperse early blooming annuals between plants of chrysanthemums so that they will be out of the way by the time the mums are ready.

This addition of annuals keeps the perennial bed interesting all season long, for while such things as iris are gorgeous during their prime, they bloom only briefly and need help to fill out the summer.

CUPID MARIGOLDS add a welcome touch of color to the greenery of this yard. Flower seeds are landscaping 'tools.'

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Alpine Plants Not For South



By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Most of the beautiful little alpine plants of the mountains of central Europe are not for the hot, sometimes too dry, sometimes too wet Southern United States. The famous edelweiss and the skyblue tiny gentians that grow in alpine meadows do not last a week in our summers.

There are hot, dry mountains in Europe, however. Some of the mountains of Spain, Greece, the Near East and North Africa are as hot as we are here in the South in summer.

It is not surprising that some of the plants from these warmer regions do well in our Southern gardens.

SETTLED

A tiny, sweet - scented narcissus from the dry, hot mountains northwest of Madrid has settled down in my garden to stay. It likes the decayed granite gravel which I mixed with some leaf mold and chip mold, some garden soil and a little bone meal when I planted the bulbs about 10 years ago.

It is astonishing how this little sweet - smelling thing has spread itself by seeds down the slight slope of its bed for about two feet. It will be in the path next year, and in a few more it will be all over the place.

ROCK DWELLER

Some plants have to put up with such horrible conditions at home that they know how to appreciate a garden and will settle down in it and do better than they did at home in the wilds. The Sierra de Guaderrama that runs across the middle of Spain is a big range of granite mountains where living conditions are very hard.

Philip II built the famous Escorial out of this granite on a rise in the plain below. It seems very fitting that my little narcissus should be named N. Rupicola — dweller in the rocks.

TINY PLANTS

Some tiny plants spread themselves about to such an extent and bloom so profusely that they make a real show in the garden in spite of their size.

Narcissus rupicola is one of these, and your columnist predicts that this tiny flower will one day be widespread in the grass and in the beds of Southern gardens. It is very sweet - smelling, but not unpleasantly so. The tiny flowers are a little less than an inch across, bright yellow and usually just one to the rounded stem. They look like sweet jonquills with their small medium - sized cups, but they bloom later than jonquills. In fact, they are a delight after the big daffodils have finished and gone.

All the tiny little narcissi are good for the South. They are being offered more and more in bulb catalogues with the big daffodils in the fall, so keep a look out for them and get them when you purchase daffodils in October. Some of these little wild narcissi like meadow conditions where it is moist, while others like dry conditions. In September, we shall publish a column about the conditions for each species.

Plant Fall Bulbs Now

By AUDREY H. DAWSON

Now is the time to plant fall blooming bulbs. Get them to fit your color scheme. Lycous (sometimes called September lilies, spider or nerine lilies) comes in several colors. If you want red, buy Lradiata, L. Aurea is yellow, L. Squirmagera is a pale pink and Lalba is white. Be sure not to mix the colors if you plant these bulbs. Plant all one color in an area and if you want another color select another area.

These bulbs require a rich soil and should be well mulched. You may like to naturalize them in your landscape and leave them from year to year. They do better when left undisturbed.

Now is the time to divide and reset violets. Be sure to put them in fertile soil. If you have a small sunny area thet is hard to get the mower in and around then try using violets as a ground cover. They make a lovely ground cover if the location is sunny.

TIME TO RESET

Remember the latter part of this month or early in May is time to divide and reset chrysanthemums.

If you have not fertilized your shrubs, use one-half cupful per square yard area of a complete fertilizer as 8-8-8. You may want to use cottonseed meal if so use four to six pounds per 100 square feet.

EASTER EGGS

For centuries, in almost all countries, dyed eggs were exchanged as gifts during the spring, symbolizing natures awakening from the passiveness of winter. The idea of our American Easter Bunny who hides brightly colored eggs originated in Acient Egypt. Colored eggs and Easter Bunnies unite tradition and sentiment to pay tribute to Easter Sunday. Easter is almost here and you, Mrs. Homemaker, will be decorating Easter eggs.

One of the simplest ways to color the hard cooked eggs is to use wax crayons to make "homespun" designs of many colors on white eggs. Stripes are eyecatching and are easily made by drawing on the stripes with a white wax crayon before dyeing as the dye will not take through the wax.

For simple hard cooking of eggs without cracking them, cover the eggs in a pan with cold water, at least one inch above the egg, bring rapidly to boiling. Remove from heat, cover and let stand 20 minutes. Cool eggs promptly and thoroughly in cold water. Refrigerate until ready to decorate them.

After extensive research, a new line of color has been developed which has superior color fastness. The colors can be readily identified on fabrics by a selvage marking — savalux fast colors. The new savalux fast color is being introduced in drapery and slip cover fabrics of cotton and rayon. Later, however, colors will probably be selected for use on fabrics of other fibers. Light fasteness has been improved in yellows, pinks, red and oranges. Violets have better resistance to water spotting and browns keep the same shade in either daylight or artificial light. No one can guarantee that any color will be absolutely permanent, but "savalux" fast colors assure consumers of the greatest color-fastness that is commercially possible. With the use and care normally provided in a typical home "savalux" fast colors should stay fresh and bright for years and years.

SOMETHING NEW

There's something new for milady who wants to go for a swim this coming season and on to a party with well groomed hair style. Its the new swim cap called the wondercap. This cap is guaranteed to protect the swimmer's hair and ears from getting wet. The secret of this new cap is a water seal band around the inside that deepens in the areas behind the ears where water tends to seep easily under other swim caps. When the chin strap is fastened, the inner seal makes the cap completely watertight and comfortable.

There's something new in the quilted cooking foil. The new package is glamorous, delightfully feminine yet practical. The design is a departure from the industrial look, warm pleasant colors — pink, orange and gold now key the various kinds and sizes of quilted cooking foil.

FROZEN FOODS

There are two words that you, Mrs. Homemaker are hearing frequently about frozen foods, dehydrofreezing and freeze drying. Dehydrofreezing means that the dehydration process takes place first and then the freezing. The procedure is reversed with freeze drying. First the food is frozen and then it is dried. It is possible that because of dehydrofreezing that any day now you, Mrs. Homemaker, will buy a pound package of frozen peas that is equivalent of two pounds of fresh peas. This would be the result of dehydrofeezing, which is presently used commercially with peas, carrots, and diced potatoes. So far all these foods have been purchased by the military. Dehydrofrozen pimento has been used in pimento cheese for these past seven years.

Presently you find a few freeze dried foods on shelves (not requiring zero temperature) in shops calling to campers and other sportsmen who need lightweight nutritious foods to carry. Freeze drying is a much older process than dehydro - freezing. Freeze dried foods do not compete in price with either frozen foods or shelf foods, as so far that process has made them expensive, but their light weight and the fact that they do not need refrigeration makes them important for special uses.

A THOUGHT

My thought this week is entitled, "Life's Recipe:"

One cup of good thoughts, one cup of kind deeds, one cup of consideration for others, two cups of sacrifice for others and three cups of forgiveness.

Mix these thoroughly, and flavor with gifts of love and kindly service. Fold in four cups of prayer to lighten other ingredients. After pouring all this into your daily life, bake well with the heat of human kindness and serve with a smile.

SEW SIMPLE

By Eunice Farmer

The Tailor Trix Winner award of the week goes to Mrs. T. A. Lyons, New Haven, Ind., for this idea for hubby's trousers.

"My husband does a lot of work outdoors and the cuffs of his wash pants get just full of dirt, dried grass, etc. He suggested I sew snaps on where the cuffs are tacked at seams. It works like a charm. I unsnap the cuffs and clean them out before washing the pants, leave them unsnapped, they will wash cleaner, dry faster, and need to be snapped again after pressing. Such a simple thing and such a big help."

ELBOW DARTS

"Dear Eunice,

"My arms must be shorter than the pattern calls for because the elbow darts are always down too low for me. Is there a simple way of measuring for this?"

Mrs. C. M.

Dear Mrs. C.M.:

I would suggest that you baste the elbow darts in and not change them until after you have basted the sleeve into the armhole. When the sleeve is adjusted correctly, you can bend your elbow and the darts of fullness must be at the exact bend of your elbow. You will probably only have to do this once and you will know just how much to shorten all sleeves. This adjustment would mean taking a fold in the pattern ABOVE the elbow.

ADD LENGTH

"Dear Eunice,

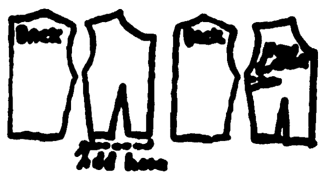
"If my dress is not long-waisted enough in front and I have to add to the bodice front, how can I make the side seams come out even?"

Mrs. M.T.

Dear Mrs. M.T.:

If you need additional length in the bodice front it is probably due to a large bust. The larger your bust measurement, the more dart control is needed. In order to make the side seams come out even, you will add to the front only, now pin a dart at the underarm, directly opposite the fullest part of the bust. This dart should take up the exact extra length added. You will find that the bodice front and back now come out even and also that you will have a much nicer fit.

Next week's column will discuss the woman who has to add to the back bodice and not to the front.



FELLED SEAMS

"Dear Mrs. Farmer,

"Could you please give instructions for making felled seams?"

Mrs. A.A.

Dear Mrs. A.A.:

A "felled" seam is a seam that has all the raw edges enclosed. It is found on sports wear, shirts, pajamas, etc. After stitching your regular ⅝ - inch seam, press both seams in one direction. Now trim the UNDER seam to ¼ - inch. The wider or TOP seam is now turned under at the raw edge and basted over the seam you have trimmed down. Machine stitch close to this turned edge. The machine stitching will show on the right side, so be sure your stitching is exactly the same distance from the seamline.

Many clothes that do not ravel are treated in a similar way and give the same appearance from the right side. After machine stitching your regular ⅝ - inch seam, again press the seams to one side. Now from the right side of your garment, machine stitch through these seams about ⅜ inch from the seam line. Instead of a folded and finished seam on the inside, the edges will still be raw. This should only be done on fabrics that do not ravel.

YOUR SEWING GLOSSARY:

Inter - facing: This is the term used to refer to the "extra" layer of fabric used in the fronts and collars of all garments. I prefer a woven-type interfacing in most cases. This can be purchased in various weights and you should choose the weight according to the type of faric your garment is made of and also the STYLE of the garment. Always cut the interfacing on the lengthwise grain of the fabric, just as you do with your garment.

Please send your questions to Sew Simple, in care of Monroe Morning World. If you want a collection of the 20 most frequently asked questions, send 25 cents and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope with your request to Eunice Farmer in care of this newspaper.

GARDEN CENTER NOTES

Confusion Is Seen In Classifications

By DR. JOHN WRIGHT
Guest Writer

One of the oldest practices of man is to classify objects and things round about him. Very often one hears somebody talking about a certain type of flower arrangement. There is much confusion relative to arrangement classifications because people often forget to state the basis on which the classification is being made.

There are many historic and national types of arrangements and they all have their value in the overall study of the art. Perhaps the most beneficial classification for the average arranger in this country is the one given in the Garden Club Handbook for contemporary American arrangements.

SIMILARITY

Similarity in name or description should not cause one to confuse these with other national types of arrangements. All of these are present - day and American.

Classification for the three major types is based on: 1. quantity of plant (or other) material used, 2. the amount of emphasis on the element line, and 3. openness in the arrangement.

Contemporary American flower arrangements are classifed as: 1. Line designs, 2. Massed - line designs, and 3. Massed designs. American line designs are often made with more material than the Oriental would use and with more emphasis on color and focal material. Massed - line design is truly American and might be called a hybrid between the Oriental line arrangement and the European mass arrangement. Contemporary massed designs are simplified as compared to period mass arrangements; colors and kinds are grouped and the number of kinds of material used are often kept to a minimum.

CHARACTERISTICS

Distinguishing characteristics of the contemporary American line design are: 1. Restraint in the quantity (amount) of material used. 2. A limited number of varieties used, usually three or fewer. 3. Openness of Silhouette with emphasis on voids. 4. Very lttle depth even at the focal point. 5. Strong emphasis on LINE. 6. Emphasis on simplicity, elimination of confusion and competing interests.

Massed - line designs may be characterized in the following manner: 1. A moderate amount of material is used (more than in a line arrangement). 2. The number of varieties of material may be increased to three or four depending on the skill of the arranger. 3. Openness of silhouette is emphasized but with decreasing emphasis on negative areas. 4. Depth at the focal point is increased and often emphasized and a strong center of interest or focal area is developed. 5. Line remains dominant, but light mass is added. 6. The greater amount of material, as compared to line, is handled to maintain simplicity and to eliminate conflicitng interests.

Contemporary massed designs have the following characteristics: 1. Large amounts of material are used, (Most people think of massed arrangements as being made on a large scale.) 2. The number of varieties of plant material may be increased to six or eight more. 3. Silhouette is closed. 4. Depth of the entire arrangement is emphasized. A flocal area is developed with dominant forms or colors. 5. FORM is dominant and line receives very little emphasis. 6. Forms and colors are grouped to create simplicity but a massed arrangement will not be as simple as one of the other two.

One should decide which of the above he is going to make before beginning the structural process. Arranging becomes much easier when we plan what we are going to do. Houses are planned! Automobiles are designed, but arrangements (according to some) are supposed to just happen!

(Dr. Wright showed picture slides from the State Flower Show last week on T. V. for the Garden Center and T. V. Show. This was such a timely program since we could show only five of the arrangements last week on our T. V. show. Hope you saw them. If you did I'm sure you enjoyed this program very much. Thanks to Dr. John Wright for bringing back these pictures and sharing them with us.)

This week — watch for another lovely flower show that will be brought to us from the Winnsboro Garden Club, of which Mrs. Sam Carriere is president.

Deanery Group Plans Activities At Meet Here

Information concerning the duties of various chairmen during the year ahead, was presented at a recent executive committee meeting of the Monroe Deanery Council of the Alexandria Diocesan Council of the National Council of Catholic Women.

Mrs. Helen B. Wasson, president of the Monroe Deanery said a calendar of meeting places and programs was also prepared. The next meeting of the group will be 2 p.m. Sunday, June 17 at St. Thomas Aquinas School in Ruston.

Those from Monroe attending recent meeting here were Miss Magdalan Amman, diocesan president; Mrs. W. E. Whetstone, cochairman; Mrs. Edmund Smith, foreign relief; Miss Edna Doyle, literature and libraries, and Mrs. Lucy Cooper, president, St. Matthew's Parish Council and CDA Court, St. Matthew's 1144.

Annual Type Flowers Are Versatile Lot

Annual flowers are versatile and give quick results. These characteristics combined with the fact that there is a very wide selection of flower colors and types put annuals at the top of the list when you begin to think of beauty about your home.

For the owner of a newly built home there is a double boon in annuals. First, there is the quick action that takes away that bare, raw look. Second, for only $2 or $3 (instead of $200 or $300), you can landscape your grounds with a dozen packets of flower seeds while you recover from that down payment.

SET OUT PLANTS

You can actually have bloom the first day if you set out started plants of such things as petunias, and you can have color in less than 60 days direct from seed with alyssum, candytuft, or other quick-blooming varieties. From then on you will have all kinds of color from midsummer to frost with a steady succession of flowers coming into their full glory.

Small trees and shrubs, freshly set out, have wide spaces between them which will eventually be filled by those plants, but in the interim those awkward spaces should be filled with annual flowers. They won't interfere with the growth of the permament plants, and they will make a house look like a home.

For homes with established plantings the places for annuals are ready-made and reserved for them. They include window boxes and planters, which are almost exclusively devoted to annual flowers, as well as individually potted plants which can be moved into a prominent location when they are in full bloom.

Then, the perennial border is also a spot for annuals. Perennials generally bloom in early summer or very late fall so that annuals planted between the perennial clumps provide the midsummer and early fall display that is otherwise lacking. Put late annuals between such perennial plants as columbine, which bloom early in the year, and then intersperse early blooming annuals between plants of chrysanthemums so that they will be out of the way by the time the mums are ready.

This addition of annuals keeps the perennial bed interesting all season long, for while such things as iris are gorgeous during their prime, they bloom only briefly and need help to fill out the summer.

SOUTHERN GARDENER

Alpine Plants Not For South

By WILLIAM LANIER HUNT

Most of the beautiful little alpine plants of the mountains of central Europe are not for the hot, sometimes too dry, sometimes too wet Southern United States. The famous edelweiss and the skyblue tiny gentians that grow in alpine meadows do not last a week in our summers.

There are hot, dry mountains in Europe, however. Some of the mountains of Spain, Greece, the Near East and North Africa are as hot as we are here in the South in summer.

It is not surprising that some of the plants from these warmer regions do well in our Southern gardens.

SETTLED

A tiny, sweet - scented narcissus from the dry, hot mountains northwest of Madrid has settled down in my garden to stay. It likes the decayed granite gravel which I mixed with some leaf mold and chip mold, some garden soil and a little bone meal when I planted the bulbs about 10 years ago.

It is astonishing how this little sweet - smelling thing has spread itself by seeds down the slight slope of its bed for about two feet. It will be in the path next year, and in a few more it will be all over the place.

ROCK DWELLER

Some plants have to put up with such horrible conditions at home that they know how to appreciate a garden and will settle down in it and do better than they did at home in the wilds. The Sierra de Guaderrama that runs across the middle of Spain is a big range of granite mountains where living conditions are very hard.

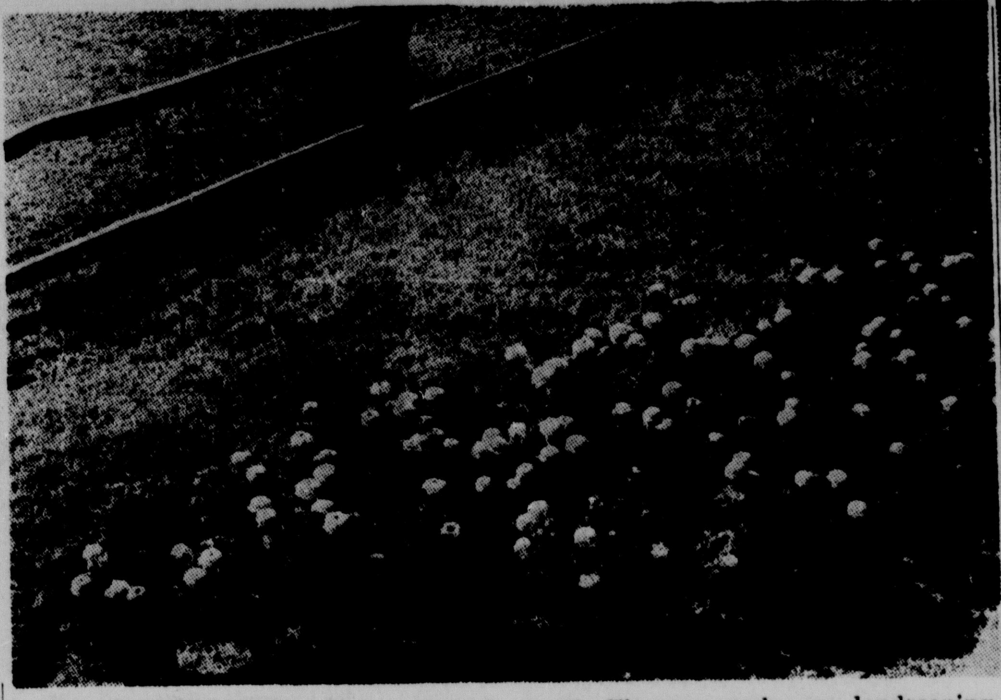
Philip II built the famous Escorial out of this granite on a rise in the plain below. It seems very fitting that my little narcissus should be named N. Rupicola — dweller in the rocks.

TINY PLANTS

Some tiny plants spread themselves about to such an extent and bloom so profusely that they make a real show in the garden in spite of their size.

Narcissus rupicola is one of these, and your columnist predicts that this tiny flower will one day be widespread in the grass and in the beds of Southern gardens. It is very sweet - smelling, but not unpleasantly so. The tiny flowers are a little less than an inch across, bright yellow and usually just one to the rounded stem. They look like sweet jonquills with their small medium - sized cups, but they bloom later than jonquills. In fact, they are a delight after the big daffodils have finished and gone.

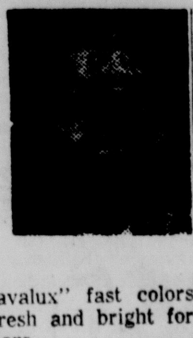
All the tiny little narcissi are good for the South. They are being offered more and more in bulb catalogues with the big daffodils in the fall, so keep a look out for them and get them when you purchase daffodils in October. Some of these little wild narcissi like meadow conditions where it is moist, while others like dry conditions. In September, we shall publish a column about the conditions for each species.



CUPID MARIGOLDS add a welcome touch of color to the greenery of this yard. Flower seeds are landscaping 'tools.'

EXTENSION NEWS

Plant Fall Bulbs Now



By AUDREY H. DAWSON

Now is the time to plant fall blooming bulbs. Get them to fit your color scheme. Lycous (sometimes called September lilies, spider or nerine lilies) comes in several colors. If you want red, buy Lradiata, L. Aurea is yellow, L. Squirmagera is a pale pink and Lalba is white. Be sure not to mix the colors if you plant these bulbs. Plant all one color in an area and if you want another color select another area.

These bulbs require a rich soil and should be well mulched. You may like to naturalize them in your landscape and leave them from year to year. They do better when left undisturbed.

Now is the time to divide and reset violets. Be sure to put them in fertile soil. If you have a small sunny area that is hard to get the mower in and around then try using violets as a ground cover. They make a lovely ground cover if the location is sunny.

TIME TO RESET

Remember the latter part of this month or early in May is time to divide and reset chrysanthemums.

If you have not fertilized your shrubs, use one-half cupful per square yard area of a complete fertilizer as 8-8-8. You may want to use cottonseed meal if so use four to six pounds per 100 square feet.

EASTER EGGS

For centuries, in almost all countries, dyed eggs were exchanged as gifts during the spring, symbolizing natures awakening from the passiveness of winter. The idea of our American Easter Bunny who hides brightly colored eggs originated in Acient Egypt. Colored eggs and Easter Bunnies unite tradition and sentiment to pay tribute to Easter Sunday. Easter is almost here and you, Mrs. Homemaker, will be decorating Easter eggs.

One of the simplest ways to color the hard cooked eggs is to use wax crayons to make "homespun" designs of many colors on white eggs. Stripes are eyecatching and are easily made by drawing on the stripes with a white wax crayon before dyeing as the dye will not take through the wax.

For simple hard cooking of eggs without cracking them, cover the eggs in a pan with cold water, at least one inch above the egg, bring rapidly to boiling. Remove from heat, cover and let stand 20 minutes. Cool eggs promptly and thoroughly in cold water. Refrigerate until ready to decorate them.

After extensive research, a new line of color has been developed which has superior color fastness. The colors can be readily identified on fabrics by a selvage marking — savalux fast colors. The new savalux fast color is being introduced in drapery and slip cover fabrics of cotton and rayon. Later, however, colors will probably be selected for use on fabrics of other fibers. Light fasteness has been improved in yellows, pinks, red and oranges. Violets have better resistance to water spotting and browns keep the same shade in either daylight or artificial light. No one can guarantee that any color will be absolutely permanent, but "savalux" fast colors assure consumers of the greatest color-fastness that is commercially possible. With the use and care normally provided in a typical home "savalux" fast colors should stay fresh and bright for years and years.

SOMETHING NEW

There's something new for milady who wants to go for a swim this coming season and on to a party with well groomed hair style. Its the new swim cap called the wondercap. This cap is guaranteed to protect the swimmer's hair and ears from getting wet. The secret of this new cap is a water seal band around the inside that deepens in the areas behind the ears where water tends to seep easily under other swim caps. When the chin strap is fastened, the inner seal makes the cap completely watertight and comfortable.

There's something new in the quilted cooking foil. The new package is glamorous, delightfully feminine yet practical. The design is a departure from the industrial look, warm pleasant colors — pink, orange and gold now key the various kinds and sizes of quilted cooking foil.

FROZEN FOODS

There are two words that you, Mrs. Homemaker are hearing frequently about frozen foods, dehydrofreezing and freeze drying. Dehydrofreezing means that the dehydration process takes place first and then the freezing. The procedure is reversed with freeze drying. First the food is frozen and then it is dried. It is possible that because of dehydrofreezing that any day now you, Mrs. Homemaker, will buy a pound package of frozen peas that is equivalent of two pounds of fresh peas. This would be the result of dehydrofeezing, which is presently used commercially with peas, carrots, and diced potatoes. So far all these foods have been purchased by the military. Dehydrofrozen pimento has been used in pimento cheese for these past seven years.

Presently you find a few freeze dried foods on shelves (not requiring zero temperature) in shops calling to campers and other sportsmen who need lightweight nutritious foods to carry. Freeze drying is a much older process than dehydro - freezing. Freeze dried foods do not compete in price with either frozen foods or shelf foods, as so far that process has made them expensive, but their light weight and the fact that they do not need refrigeration makes them important for special uses.

A THOUGHT

My thought this week is entitled, "Life's Recipe:"

One cup of good thoughts, one cup of kind deeds, one cup of consideration for others, two cups of sacrifice for others and three cups of forgiveness.

Mix these thoroughly, and flavor with gifts of love and kindly service. Fold in four cups of prayer to lighten other ingredients. After pouring all this into your daily life, bake well with the heat of human kindness and serve with a smile.

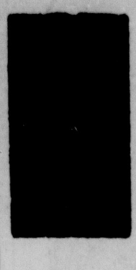
SEW SIMPLE

By Eunice Farmer



The Tailor Trix Winner award of the week goes to Mrs. T. A. Lyons, New Haven, Ind., for this idea for hubby's trousers.

"My husband does a lot of work outdoors and the cuffs of his wash pants get just full of dirt, dried grass, etc. He suggested I sew snaps on where the cuffs are tacked at seams. It works like a charm. I unsnap the cuffs and clean them out before washing the pants, leave them unsnapped, they will wash cleaner, dry faster, and need to be snapped again after pressing. Such a simple thing and such a big help."

ELBOW DARTS

"Dear Eunice,

"My arms must be shorter than the pattern calls for because the elbow darts are always down too low for me. Is there a simple way of measuring for this?"

Mrs. C. M.

Dear Mrs. C.M.:

I would suggest that you baste the elbow darts in and not change them until after you have basted the sleeve into the armhole. When the sleeve is adjusted correctly, you can bend your elbow and the darts of fullness must be at the exact bend of your elbow. You will probably only have to do this once and you will know just how much to shorten all sleeves. This adjustment would mean taking a fold in the pattern ABOVE the elbow.

ADD LENGTH

"Dear Eunice,

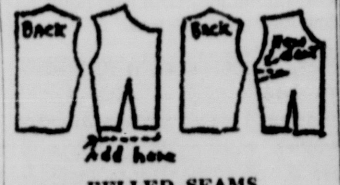
"If my dress is not long-waisted enough in front and I have to add to the bodice front, how can I make the side seams come out even?"

Mrs. M.T.

Dear Mrs. M.T.:

If you need additional length in the bodice front it is probably due to a large bust. The larger your bust measurement, the more dart control is needed. In order to make the side seams come out even, you will add to the front only, now pin a dart at the underarm, directly opposite the fullest part of the bust. This dart should take up the exact extra length added. You will find that the bodice front and back now come out even and also that you will have a much nicer fit.

Next week's column will discuss the woman who has to add to the back bodice and not to the front.



FELLED SEAMS

"Dear Mrs. Farmer,

"Could you please give instructions for making felled seams?"

Mrs. A.A.

Dear Mrs. A.A.:

A "felled" seam is a seam that has all the raw edges enclosed. It is found on sports wear, shirts, pajamas, etc. After stitching your regular ⅝ - inch seam, press both seams in one direction. Now trim the UNDER seam to ¼ - inch. The wider or TOP seam is now turned under at the raw edge and basted over the seam you have trimmed down. Machine stitch close to this turned edge. The machine stitching will show on the right side, so be sure your stitching is exactly the same distance from the seamline.

Many clothes that do not ravel are treated in a similar way and give the same appearance from the right side. After machine stitching your regular ⅝ - inch seam, again press the seams to one side. Now from the right side of your garment, machine stitch through these seams about ⅜ inch from the seam line. Instead of a folded and finished seam on the inside, the edges will still be raw. This should only be done on fabrics that do not ravel.

YOUR SEWING GLOSSARY:

Inter - facing: This is the term used to refer to the "extra" layer of fabric used in the fronts and collars of all garments. I prefer a woven-type interfacing in most cases. This can be purchased in various weights and you should choose the weight according to the type of faric your garment is made of and also the STYLE of the garment. Always cut the interfacing on the lengthwise grain of the fabric, just as you do with your garment.

Please send your questions to Sew Simple, in care of Monroe Morning World. If you want a collection of the 20 most frequently asked questions, send 25 cents and a long, self - addressed, stamped envelope with your request to Eunice Farmer in care of this newspaper.

Woman In N.O. Fatally Shot; Husband Held

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A 51-year-old woman was shot to death in her apartment Saturday by her husband, who told police he thought the .22 caliber revolver contained only blanks.

Mrs. Myrtle Virginia Lawver died in the bathroom of the dwelling a few minutes after she was shot.

Her husband, Harry Lawver, 55, an unemployed welder, told police the couple argued over a bottle of medicine prescribed for Mrs. Lawver. He said he pointed the weapon at her in an effort to frighten her into telling him where she had hidden the medicine.

Police Sgt. Cornelius Drumm said the woman had been treated for an illness Friday and given a bottle of medicine which her husband administered to her Lawver was booked at the Sixth District police station with murder.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A 51-year-old woman was shot to death in her apartment Saturday by her husband, who told police he thought the .22 caliber revolver contained only blanks.

Mrs. Myrtle Virginia Lawver died in the bathroom of the dwelling a few minutes after she was shot.

Her husband, Harry Lawver, 55, an unemployed welder, told police the couple argued over a bottle of medicine prescribed for Mrs. Lawver. He said he pointed the weapon at her in an effort to frighten her into telling him where she had hidden the medicine.

Police Sgt. Cornelius Drumm said the woman had been treated for an illness Friday and given a bottle of medicine which her husband administered to her.

CLIMAXES JFK'S DAY

Marines Stage Combat Assault

ONSLOW BEACH, N. C. (UPI) The U. S. Marines staged a full-scale combat assault on the North Carolina coast Saturday to show President Kennedy what they could do if he ever orders them into action.

After a morning spent watching the aerial and sea might of the Atlantic fleet, the President came ashore here in a helicopter to witness 9,000 Marines storm Onslow Beach in a simulated attack.

It was a classic Marine demonstration of how such operations have been refined since the Pacific invasions during World War II when Kennedy was skipper of PT Boat 109.

Dressed in battle gear, and with the sounds of guns booming in their ears, the Marines charged ashore in armored, amphibious tracked vehicles and in helicopters launched from specially-modified aircraft carriers standing offshore.

It was a thrilling climax to the day for Kennedy and his diplomatic, congressional and government guests. The President had spent most of the morning standing on the windswept bridge of the nuclear-powered carrier Enterprise—the world's greatest warship—watching the fleet maneuver.

He was treated to anti- submarine demonstrations and aerial maneuvers before he boarded a helicopter for the trip to Onslow Beach.

The President was joined on the beach by the Shah of Iran, who flew here from Washington after a three-day state visit.

Before embarking on a 22-mile helicopter trip from the Enterprise, the president praised the skill and courage of the men of the Atlantic fleet.

From the hanger deck of the Enterprise, he spoke by radio to every ship in the force.

"The U. S. Navy has helped secure the freedom of people thousands of miles away and to preserve the freedom of their countries," he said.

The President watched the assault from a beach-side bleacher. He saw the Marines come ashore, supported by Naval aircraft from the carriers Enterprise and Forrestal as well as their own close-support teams.

The assault was supported by 34 amphibious force ships which had taken up their positions off Onslow Beach during the day and Friday night while the President was cruising down the Atlantic coast and watching naval Demonstrations by more ships.

LSU Expecting Coed Enrollment To Hit Record

BATON ROUGE (Special) — An all-time record enrollment of more than 3700 coeds is expected on the Louisiana State University campus here next fall, University officials announced.

The increasing numbers of young women, who will make up almost one-third of LSU's expected enrollment of 11,500 here, are not causing concern among housing officials, however. Dean of Women Helen B. Gordon said the University expects for the first time in recent years to be able to accept all women applicants, out-of-state coeds included.

Until this year, LSU had limited campus housing to Louisiana residents and daughters of alumni because of a dormitory space shortage. The University has removed its housing prioroties this year, but Dean Gordon warned that late applicants will have little choice of accommodations.

LSU's present housing facilities for women, together with modern construction slated for completion by September, will provide campus housing for about 2500 undergraduate women. Some 370 of these living spaces were added last fall when two new women's dormitories were opened.

Now under construction on the Baton Rouge campus are a four-story dormitory and a dormitory group composed. of seven small units, which combined will accommodate nearly 700 additional coeds.

MRS. ELEANORE MacCURDY

Panhellenic Workshop Set Monday

Responsibilities as a collegiate member and alumnae of national social sororities will be emphasized at a Panhellenic workshop Monday at 6:30 p.m. in Stubbs Hall 100 on the Northeast Louisiana State College campus.

The meeting is open to all alumnae and collegiates, Miss Frances Baldwin, Northeast Panhellenic Council adviser, said.

An honorary member of Alpha Omicron Pi, Mrs. MacCurdy assisted in colonizing the AOPI chapter at Utah State University.

She currently holds offices in the following organizations: first vice president of the League of Women Voters in Shreveport; board of directors, League of Women Voters of Louisiana; first vice president, Shreveport Writers Club; recording secretary, Centenary Women's Club; and moderator, church circle, First Presbyterian Church.

Fund Is Started To Aid Victim In Stabbing Case

Mrs. Fern Dell Brown, who was stabbed at least six times on April 6, has been in a serious condition ever since and has exhausted her finances.

She is the mother and sole supporter of two children and is in desperate financial circumstances.

Members of her church at Mangham and other friends have started a fund raising campaign in an effort to raise approximately $1,500 to provide for her hospital costs and incidental expenses which have been forced upon her.

Anyone wishing to make donations may do so by mailing them to the Newlight Baptist Church in Mangham or taking them directly to any fire station in the Twin Cities, according to Rev. Dewey Miles, pastor of the church.

All checks should be made payable to the Newlight Baptist Church, Rev. Miles said.

Mrs. Brown, a resident at 27-A Louis Lock Apartments in Monroe, was allegedly attacked by her husband in a local 5-and-10 cent store where she is employed. Hospital aurhorities reported that she received 12 pints of blood to replace what was lost in the incident.

Goldwater Hits 'Police State' JFK Tactics

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)— Sen. Barry Goldwater Saturday termed President Kennedy's attack on proposed steel price hikes "something you'd expect in a police state."

Goldwater said he was sorry the industry backed down and rescinded its proposed price increases.

The Arizona Republican arrived here en route to Vandenberg Air Force Base, California.

He said the steel industry "was justified in raising the price because of increasing costs, but the President, who doesn't understand economics, couldn't see that."

Goldwater said Kennedy is "after business all the time. Why doesn't he go after labor, too." He said Kennedy has had nothing to say about strikes at missile bases.

A Ruston girl and a Monroe child were injured in separate accidents yesterday.

Two-year-old Calvin A. Bickford Jr. of 209 Miro St., was rushed to Conway Memorial hospital after an automobile backed over him while he was playing near a driveway on Jackson Street.

However, hospital authorities reported his injuries to be minor — mostly bruises. Monroe police identified the driver of the car that struck the child as Negro Robert Adams, 43, of 2912 Cypress St., West Monroe.

According to witnesses, Adams was backing out of the driveway at 718 Jackson St. at 1:30 p.m. and could not see the child playing in the path of his car. The vehicle backed over the boy, and Adams was starting to pull forward when Houston Powell, Negro of Route Two, Monroe, shouted for him to stop.

The child crawled out from under the right side of the vehicle and was taken to the hospital. No charges were filed in the accident.

Troop F, state police reported a three - car collision on U. S. Highway 80 at 12:20 p.m. approximately eight miles west of West Monroe.

A 20-year-old Ruston girl, Wenonah Watts, was taken to St. Francis hospital by Kilpatrick ambulance for treatment of bruises and minor injuries she received in the accident.

According to investigating troppers, Irazone Robinson Osborne, Negro, 42, of Grambling, had stopped in the eastbound traffic lane behind four vehicles when her car was struck in the rear.

Charles L. Midyett, 22, of 104 Calvin St., Ruston, following directly behind the Negro woman, skidded approximately 24 feet into the rear of her car, bounced off and was struck in the rear of his car and knocked back into the Osborne vehicle.

Midyett was struck by another eastbound car operated by William R. Cockerham, 29 of Ruston. Both Cockerham and Midyett charged with following too close in traffic.

Miss Watts was a passenger in the Midyett vehicle.

FDR Grandson Plans To Wed Young Socialite

NEW CANAAN, Conn. (AP) — Franklin Delano Roosevelt III, 23, a grandson of the late president, is engaged to marry a prominent young socialite.

The prospective bride is Miss Grace Rumsey Goodyear, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Goodyear, New Canaan, who announced the engagement. The ceremony will take place in June.

Roosevelt, an ensign with the Navy in the Far East, is the son of Mrs. Benjamin S. Warren Jr., Grosse Point Farms, Mich., and Fishers Island, N.Y., and Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. Washington, a former U.S. representative from New York.

Miss Goodyear, a sophomore at Smith College, is also the granddaughter of Grace R. Goodyear, Youngstown, N.Y., and Charles W. Goodyear, Buffalo, N.Y., and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Robins Jr. Darien, Conn.

The prospective bridegroom, also a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Du Pont, Wilmington, Del., was christened in the White House on Jan. 7, 1939, when he was six months old. It was the first such ceremony in the executive mansion since President Benjamin Harrison's granddaughter was christened in 1889.

Odom Opposes Compromise In Land Dispute

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Frank Odom, former Register of the State Land Office, said Saturday he is "unalterably opposed" any compromise of the Ward-McIlhenny land dispute.

The comment from the former administrative lieutenant of the late Gov. Earl K. Long aroused differences of opinion from Mrs. Ellen Bryan Moore, present land office register.

Mrs. Moore said controversy over ownership of the 14,000-acre estate donated to the state years ago for a game refuge is a matter over which "the office of the register of state lands has absolutely no jurisdiction."

Odom denied, in making the statement, that he was running for any office.

Odom said the dispute was "near and dead" to Long's heart, and "in my capacity as register of state lands, I had information which enlightened me quite a bit on the background and deatils of this claim" by the Ward-McIlhenny heirs.

Attorneys for the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries commission have proposed a compromise of the long-standing lawsuit filed by the heirs — reportedly on a 50-50 basis.

The attorneys argue the state could get title to the land, for use only as a wild life refuge, under terms of the donation. But they say if the state should drill for oil on the land, it would go back to the donors' heirs.

Wild Life Commission representatives are holding private meetings with lawmakers over the state to explain the nature of a proposed compromise.

AT LITTLE THEATRE

Suspense Keynote Of Murder Plot

By JOHN CALE
Staff Critic

An eight - member cast, three of whom were newcomers to the local stage, did a convincing job with the Audrey and William Roos breath - stopper, "Speaking of Murder."

In the Friday - the - Thirteenth opening night cast were:

Alan Slakter as Ricky Ashton
Jo Ann Ussery as Connie Barnes Ashton
Carl Slakter as Charles Ashton
Lee Gonzales as Annabelle Logan
Donnavae Hughes as Mrs. Walsworth
Janice Hattaway as Mildred
Harold Odom as Lt. Mitchell

By the time the first act ran its course, it was clear this was no ordinary mystery play with the least suspected person proving to be the killer. Mrs. Walsworth already knows Annabelle Logan, governess for the two Ashton children, killed the first Mrs. Ashton and reminds her of this constantly in order to collect forced payments for gin and other necessities.

Annabelle doesn't like the arrangement, so she counts Mrs. Walsworth in on the proposed plans to murder Mrs. Ashton No. 2. As the two women went through these lines, the audience was convinced there was the will and the way.

Mrs. Walsworth hated the idea of stuffing anyone into an airtight safe, but, then she made it plain she thought going on welfare was "utterly distasteful." As for Annabelle, she had figured she was the rightful owner of Charles Ashton and his estate from the first.

Both Lee Gonzales and Donnavae Hughes handled their parts expertly. The latter, whose role depicted a transplanted, middleaged English gin-swigger, injected just enough of the unreal to make the plot believable.

ACTRESS

There was hardly enough Beverly Hills affectation in Jo Ann Ussery's scenes where she portrayed a screen star displaced to New York. However, her work in Act II, where she sold her new son on the idea of going with her to the television studio, brought out some of the best acting of the evening. Alan Slakter, 11, carried his full-sized part like a veteran in the role of Ricky Ashton.

His real - life as well as father-on-stage, Carl Slakter, managed to remain unsuspecting about his governess' intentions without appearing dense.

Harold Odum lent his real daughter, Susan, to the play's Ashton family to play the part of little Jane while he himself came in for a last act's detective part. Since he didn't have a crime to solve when he arrived on the scene, it required a different sort of acting to avoid usual "something smells fishy" approach. Fine work for a first day try at the stage.

Janice Hattaway, speech education major at Northeast, earned another Little Theatre credit with her portrayal of Mildred, the Ashton's maid.

One final constructive remark for dog lovers. Please bring that dachshund, Joe, out for a curtain call.

The Strauss Playhouse has apparently earned a national reputation through its handling of "Bye Bye Birdie." Director Richard Clark has announced the release of "Come Blow Your Horn" to the local theatre for a presentation next month — before its run on Broadway is complete. This speaks well for Clark and the many other persons who have who have worked so tirelessly for good theatre in northeast Louisiana.

Body Of Fire Victim Found

OPELOUSAS, La. (AP) — The body of Mrs. Claudine Mohlenbrock Cheek, who burned to death in her country home at Barbreck, St. Landry Parish, last Sunday, was found Friday night.

Mrs. Cheek, in her late 60's, lived alone, and her closest neighbor lived a half-mile away.

Milvurn St. Amand, a rice farmer who leases some of Mrs. Cheek's land, discovered the body in the burned plantation home when he went there Friday night to offer Mrs. Cheek a ride to Opelousas.

Deputy sheriff Bill Soileau said the house was seen burning last Sunday, but it was not reported.

CLIMAXES JFK'S DAY

Marines Stage Combat Assault

ONSLOW BEACH, N. C. (UPI) The U. S. Marines staged a full-scale combat assault on the North Carolina coast Saturday to show President Kennedy what they could do if he ever orders them into action.

After a morning spent watching the aerial and sea might of the Atlantic fleet, the President came ashore here in a helicopter to witness 9,000 Marines storm Onslow Beach in a simulated attack.

It was a classic Marine demonstration of how such operations have been refined since the Pacific invasions during World War II when Kennedy was skipper of PT Boat 109.

Dressed in battle gear, and with the sounds of guns booming in their ears, the Marines charged ashore in armored, amphibious tracked vehicles and in helicopters launched from specially-modified aircraft carriers standing offshore.

It was a thrilling climax to the day for Kennedy and his diplomatic, congressional and government guests. The President had spent most of the morning standing on the windswept bridge of the nuclear-powered carrier Enterprise—the world's greatest warship—watching the fleet maneuver.

He was treated to anti- submarine demonstrations and aerial maneuvers before he boarded a helicopter for the trip to Onslow Beach.

The President was joined on the beach by the Shah of Iran, who flew here from Washington after a three-day state visit.

Before embarking on a 22-mile helicopter trip from the Enterprise, the president praised the skill and courage of the men of the Atlantic fleet.

From the hanger deck of the Enterprise, he spoke by radio to every ship in the force.

"The U. S. Navy has helped secure the freedom of people thousands of miles away and to preserve the freedom of their countries," he said.

The President watched the assault from a beach-side bleacher. He saw the Marines come ashore, supported by Naval aircraft from the carriers Enterprise and Forrestal as well as their own close-support teams.

The assault was supported by 34 amphibious force ships which had taken up their positions off Onslow Beach during the day and Friday night while the President was cruising down the Atlantic coast and watching naval Demonstrations by more ships.

LSU Expecting Coed Enrollment To Hit Record

BATON ROUGE (Special) — An all-time record enrollment of more than 3700 coeds is expected on the Louisiana State University campus here next fall, University officials announced.

The increasing numbers of young women, who will make up almost one-third of LSU's expected enrollment of 11,500 here, are not causing concern among housing officials, however. Dean of Women Helen B. Gordon said the University expects for the first time in recent years to be able to accept all women applicants, out-of-state coeds included.

Until this year, LSU had limited campus housing to Louisiana residents and daughters of alumni because of a dormitory space shortage. The University has removed its housing prioroties this year, but Dean Gordon warned that late applicants will have little choice of accommodations.

LSU's present housing facilities for women, together with modern construction slated for completion by September, will provide campus housing for about 2500 undergraduate women. Some 370 of these living spaces were added last fall when two new women's dormitories were opened.

Now under construction on the Baton Rouge campus are a four-story dormitory and a dormitory group composed of seven small units, which combined will accommodate nearly 700 additional coeds.

MRS. ELEANORE MacCURDY

Panhellenic Workshop Set Monday

Responsibilities as a collegiate member and alumnae of national social sororities will be emphasized at a Panhellenic workshop Monday at 6:30 p.m. in Stubbs Hall 100 on the Northeast Louisiana State College campus.

The meeting is open to all alumnae and collegiates, Miss Frances Baldwin, Northeast Panhellenic Council adviser, said.

Miss Carol Shipp, college student from Bosco, is president of the council.

Workshop speakers will be Mrs. Eleanore Dietrich MacCurdy of Shreveport, national supervisor of Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority, and Mrs. Wanda Hinkle of Monroe, province president of Phi Mu Sorority.

Mrs. MacCurdy will discuss responsibilities as a collegiate member, and Mrs. Hinkle will stress responsibilities as an alumnae.

An honorary member of Alpha Omicron Pi, Mrs. MacCurdy assisted in colonizing the AOPI chapter at Utah State University.

She currently holds offices in the following organizations: first vice president of the League of Women Voters in Shreveport; board of directors, League of Women Voters of Louisiana; first vice president, Shreveport Writers Club; recording secretary, Centenary Women's Club; and moderator, church circle, First Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. MacCurdy also is affiliated with the Mental Health Association, Association for Gifted Children, and the Women's Department Club.

She is in charge of the Teacher Placement Bureau at Centenary College, where her husband, Dr. Robert D. Douglas MacCurdy, heads the Department of Education and Psychology.

Fund Is Started To Aid Victim In Stabbing Case

Mrs. Fern Dell Brown, who was stabbed at least six times on April 6, has been in a serious condition ever since and has exhausted her finances.

She is the mother and sole supporter of two children and is in desperate financial circumstances.

Members of her church at Mangham and other friends have started a fund raising campaign in an effort to raise approximately $1,500 to provide for her hospital costs and incidental expenses which have been forced upon her.

Anyone wishing to make donations may do so by mailing them to the Newlight Baptist Church in Mangham or taking them directly to any fire station in the Twin Cities, according to Rev. Dewey Miles, pastor of the church.

All checks should be made payable to the Newlight Baptist Church, Rev. Miles said.

Mrs. Brown, a resident at 27-A Louis Lock Apartments in Monroe, was allegedly attacked by her husband in a local 5-and-10 cent store where she is employed. Hospital aurhorities reported that she received 12 pints of blood to replace what was lost in the incident.

Goldwater Hits 'Police State' JFK Tactics

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI)— Sen. Barry Goldwater Saturday termed President Kennedy's attack on proposed steel price hikes "something you'd expect in a police state."

Goldwater said he was sorry the industry backed down and rescinded its proposed price increases.

The Arizona Republican arrived here en route to Vandenberg Air Force Base, California.

He said the steel industry "was justified in raising the price because of increasing costs, but the President, who doesn't understand economics, couldn't see that."

Goldwater said Kennedy is "after business all the time. Why doesn't he go after labor, too." He said Kennedy has had nothing to say about strikes at missile bases.

Two Accidents Injure Child, Girl Saturday

A Ruston girl and a Monroe child were injured in separate accidents yesterday.

Two-year-old Calvin A. Bickford Jr. of 209 Miro St., was rushed to Conway Memorial hospital after an automobile backed over him while he was playing near a driveway on Jackson Street.

However, hospital authorities reported his injuries to be minor — mostly bruises. Monroe police identified the driver of the car that struck the child as Negro Robert Adams, 43, of 2912 Cypress St., West Monroe.

According to witnesses, Adams was backing out of the driveway at 718 Jackson St. at 1:30 p.m. and could not see the child playing in the path of his car. The vehicle backed over the boy, and Adams was starting to pull forward when Houston Powell, Negro of Route Two, Monroe, shouted for him to stop.

The child crawled out from under the right side of the vehicle and was taken to the hospital. No charges were filed in the accident.

Troop F, state police reported a three - car collision on U. S. Highway 80 at 12:20 p.m. approximately eight miles west of West Monroe.

A 20-year-old Ruston girl, Wenonah Watts, was taken to St. Francis hospital by Kilpatrick ambulance for treatment of bruises and minor injuries she received in the accident.

According to investigating tropers, Irazone Robinson Osborne, Negro, 42, of Grambling, had stopped in the eastbound traffic lane behind four vehicles when her car was struck in the rear.

Charles L. Midyett, 22, of 104 Calvin St., Ruston, following directly behind the Negro woman, skidded approximately 24 feet into the rear of her car, bounced off and was struck in the rear of his car and knocked back into the Osborne vehicle.

Midyett was struck by another eastbound car operated by William R. Cockerham, 29 of Ruston. Both Cockerham and Midyett charged with following too close in traffic.

Miss Watts was a passenger in the Midyett vehicle.

FDR Grandson Plans To Wed Young Socialite

NEW CANAAN, Conn. (AP) — Franklin Delano Roosevelt III, 23, a grandson of the late president, is engaged to marry a prominent young socialite.

The prospective bride is Miss Grace Rumsey Goodyear, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Goodyear, New Canaan, who announced the engagement. The ceremony will take place in June.

Roosevelt, an ensign with the Navy in the Far East, is the son of Mrs. Benjamin S. Warren Jr., Grosse Point Farms, Mich., and Fishers Island, N.Y., and Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. Washington, a former U.S. representative from New York.

Miss Goodyear, a sophomore at Smith College, is also the granddaughter of Grace R. Goodyear, Youngstown, N.Y., and Charles W. Goodyear, Buffalo, N.Y., and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Robins Jr. Darien, Conn.

The prospective bridegroom, also a grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Du Pont, Wilmington, Del., was christened in the White House on Jan. 7, 1939, when he was six months old. It was the first such ceremony in the executive mansion since President Benjamin Harrison's granddaughter was christened in 1889.

Odom Opposes Compromise In Land Dispute

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Frank Odom, former Register of the State Land Office, said Saturday he is "unalterably opposed" any compromise of the Ward-McIlhenny land dispute.

The comment from the former administrative lieutenant of the late Gov. Earl K. Long aroused differences of opinion from Mrs. Ellen Bryan Moore, present land office register.

Mrs. Moore said controversy over ownership of the 14,000-acre estate donated to the state years ago for a game refuge is a matter over which "the office of the register of state lands has absolutely no jurisdiction."

Odom denied, in making the statement, that he was running for any office.

Odom said the dispute was "near and dead" to Long's heart, and "in my capacity as register of state lands, I had information which enlightened me quite a bit on the background and deatils of this claim" by the Ward-McIlhenny heirs.

Attorneys for the Louisiana Wild Life and Fisheries commission have proposed a compromise of the long-standing lawsuit filed by the heirs — reportedly on a 50-50 basis.

The attorneys argue the state could get title to the land, for use only as a wild life refuge, under terms of the donation. But they say if the state should drill for oil on the land, it would go back to the donors' heirs.

Wild Life Commission representatives are holding private meetings with lawmakers over the state to explain the nature of a proposed compromise.

AT LITTLE THEATRE

Suspense Keynote Of Murder Plot

By JOHN CALE
Staff Critic

An eight - member cast, three of whom were newcomers to the local stage, did a convincing job with the Audrey and William Roos breath - stopper, "Speaking of Murder."

In the Friday - the - Thirteenth opening night cast were:

Alan Slakter as Ricky Ashton
Jo Ann Ussery as Connie Barnes Ashton
Carl Slakter as Charles Ashton
Lee Gonzales as Annabelle Logan
Donnavae Hughes as Mrs. Walsworth
Janice Hattaway as Mildred
Harold Odom as Lt. Mitchell

By the time the first act ran its course, it was clear this was no ordinary mystery play with the least suspected person proving to be the killer. Mrs. Walsworth already knows Annabelle Logan, governess for the two Ashton children, killed the first Mrs. Ashton and reminds her of this constantly in order to collect forced payments for gin and other necessities.

Annabelle doesn't like the arrangement, so she counts Mrs. Walsworth in on the proposed plans to murder Mrs. Ashton No. 2. As the two women went through these lines, the audience was convinced there was the will and the way.

Mrs. Walsworth hated the idea of stuffing anyone into an airtight safe, but, then she made it plain she thought going on welfare was "utterly distasteful." As for Annabelle, she had figured she was the rightful owner of Charles Ashton and his estate from the first.

Both Lee Gonzales and Donnavae Hughes handled their parts expertly. The latter, whose role depicted a transplanted, middleaged English gin-swigger, injected just enough of the unreal to make the plot believable.

ACTRESS

There was hardly enough Beverly Hills affectation in Jo Ann Ussery's scenes where she portrayed a screen star displaced to New York. However, her work in Act II, where she sold her new son on the idea of going with her to the television studio, brought out some of the best acting of the evening. Alan Slakter, 11, carried his full-sized part like a veteran in the role of Ricky Ashton.

His real - life as well as father-on-stage, Carl Slakter, managed to remain unsuspecting about his governess' intentions without appearing dense.

Harold Odum lent his real daughter, Susan, to the play's Ashton family to play the part of little Jane while he himself came in for a last act's detective part. Since he didn't have a crime to solve when he arrived on the scene, it required a different sort of acting to avoid usual "something smells fishy" approach. Fine work for a first day try at the stage.

Janice Hattaway, speech education major at Northeast, earned another Little Theatre credit with her portrayal of Mildred, the Ashton's maid.

One final constructive remark for dog lovers. Please bring that dachshund, Joe, out for a curtain call.

The Strauss Playhouse has apparently earned a national reputation through its handling of "Bye Bye Birdie." Director Richard Clark has announced the release of "Come Blow Your Horn" to the local theatre for a presentation next month — before its run on Broadway is complete. This speaks well for Clark and the many other persons who have who have worked so tirelessly for good theatre in northeast Louisiana.

Body Of Fire Victim Found

OPELOUSAS, La. (AP) — The body of Mrs. Claudine Mohlenbrock Cheek, who burned to death in her country home at Barbreck, St. Landry Parish, last Sunday, was found Friday night.

Mrs. Cheek, in her late 60's, lived alone, and her closest neighbor lived a half mile away.

Milvurn St. Amand, a rice farmer who leases some of Mrs. Cheek's land, discovered the body in the burned plantation home when he went there Friday night to offer Mrs. Cheek a ride to Opelousas.

Deputy sheriff Bill Soileau said the house was seen burning last Sunday, but it was not reported.

An Exceptional profit opportunity!

ECONO CREST

COIN-OPERATED DRY CLEANING

- Tremendous Potential Market

The exciting new ECONO-CREST coin operated dry cleaning machine, engineered by the American Laundry Machinery division of The McGraw-Edison Company, makes self-service dry cleaning easier than doing the laundry . . . easy, quick, thoroughly clean and unbelievably inexpensive. Housewives will now dry clean so many more items than ever before . . . blankets, slip covers, draperies, children's clothing, work clothes . . . so many items usually neglected. Experts agree, and field tests bear them out, that the dry cleaning industry which already accounts for $1.9 billion in sales annually, will soon expand many times over.

- Backed By The World's Largest

In developing ECONO-CREST self-service dry cleaning for its Franchised ECON-O-WASH coin - operated laundries, American Laundry Machinery Industries gives the investor the distinctive advantage of over 50 years of successful dry cleaning experience. As the world's largest manufacturer of commercial laundry and dry cleaning equipment, we pioneered petroleum dry cleaning systems over half a century ago; back in the 20's we introduced the first commercially practical dry cleaning machine for the new synthetic solvents. Now, constant research and field testing have combined to produce the ECONO-CREST machine . . . a complete miniaturized professional dry cleaning plant designed for simple self-service.

- Maximum Profits, 90% Financing

Tests have shown that coin-operated dry cleaning not only yields a handsome profit in itself, but also boosts the volume of the coin laundry in which it is installed. These high profit returns are available to you at the lowest terms in the industry . . . financing up to 90% of the cost of your laundry and dry cleaning equipment.

- Minimum Time Required

Franchised ECON-O-WASH coin-operated laundry and dry cleaning centers are designed to be unattended, which means that there is no thought of giving up your present job or profession. It also means that the Franchised ECON-O-WASH lends itself ideally to chain operation for larger investors or groups. (One successful owner has built a chain of 17 ECON-O-WASH centers in his area; many grow to six and more.)

- The Only Company In Both Fields!

Be sure to look into this exceptional profit opportunity offered by the only company with experience in both coin-operated laundry operations and professional dry cleaning manufacture. Write today for full information. There's no obligation, of course.

An Exceptional profit opportunity!

ECONO CREST
COIN-OPERATED DRY CLEANING

- Tremendous Potential Market

The exciting new ECONO-CREST coin operated dry cleaning machine, engineered by the American Laundry Machinery division of The McGraw-Edison Company, makes self-service dry cleaning easier than doing the laundry . . . easy, quick, thoroughly clean and unbelievably inexpensive. Housewives will now dry clean so many more items than ever before . . . blankets, slip covers, draperies, children's clothing, work clothes . . . so many items usually neglected. Experts agree, and field tests bear them out, that the dry cleaning industry which already accounts for $1.9 billion in sales annually, will soon expand many times over.

- Backed By The World's Largest

In developing ECONO-CREST self-service dry cleaning for its Franchised ECON-O-WASH coin - operated laundries, American Laundry Machinery Industries gives the investor the distinctive advantage of over 50 years of successful dry cleaning experience. As the world's largest manufacturer of commercial laundry and dry cleaning equipment, we pioneered petroleum dry cleaning systems over half a century ago; back in the 20's we introduced the first commercially practical dry cleaning machine for the new synthetic solvents. Now, constant research and field testing have combined to produce the ECONO-CREST machine . . . a complete miniaturized professional dry cleaning plant designed for simple self-service.

- Maximum Profits, 90% Financing

Tests have shown that coin-operated dry cleaning not only yields a handsome profit in itself, but also boosts the volume of the coin laundry in which it is installed. These high profit returns are available to you at the lowest terms in the industry . . . financing up to 90% of the cost of your laundry and dry cleaning equipment.

- Minimum Time Required

Franchised ECON-O-WASH coin-operated laundry and dry cleaning centers are designed to be unattended, which means that there is no thought of giving up your present job or profession. It also means that the Franchised ECON-O-WASH lends itself ideally to chain operation for larger investors or groups. (One successful owner has built a chain of 17 ECON-O-WASH centers in his area; many grow to six and more.)

- The Only Company In Both Fields!

Be sure to look into this exceptional profit opportunity offered by the only company with experience in both coin-operated laundry operations and professional dry cleaning manufacture. Write today for full information. There's no obligation, of course.

ENGINEER FIRINGS

Attorney Fires Blast At Davis

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — An attorney for one of four fired state Highway Department engineers described the discharges Saturday as "perhaps the most flagrant attempt by the (Gov. Jimmie H.) Davis administration to cover its mismanagement.'

Kenneth Burgess of Shreveport, attorney for Charles E. Brasher, who plans to appeal his discharge to the Civil Service Commission, said in a statement:

"Faced with a mandate by the Bureau of Public Roads to clean up the flagrant mismanagement of its highway program with the very positive threat of stopping federal aid . . . director Ray Burgess evidently has chosen to sacrifice these loyal employes in an attempt to save the federal aid funds from being withheld.

"After marshalling the evidence known to be available, these irresponsible persons in the top level of management within and without the state Department of Highways will be fully exposed and these loyal employes will be reinstated."

The attorney said he did not believe Highway Director Burgess would be successful in forestalling withdrawal of federal aid. Burgess was in Washington Friday conferring with Bureau of Public Roads officials.

"The recent furore of a $72 million deficit in the state, will be a ripple on a mill pond as compared to the loss of millions in federal highway support," attorney Burgess's statement said.

He concluded:

"I am firmly convinced that with the evidence present available to me that the hearing before the Civil Service Commission will shake the capital at Baton Rouge to its very foundation."

Besides Brasher, other engineers whose discharges were announced Friday were Alfred E. Simpson, 37, Bossier City; Ben Barnes, 55, Minden; and James G. Merritt, 47, Minden.

In announcing the firings, Highway Director Burgess said they were due to irregularities involving road construction contracts.

Brasher said he felt he was being persecuted and that if he had done anything wrong it was minor. Barnes and Merritt declined comment and Simpson could not be reached.

Dr. Wilson Will Be Member Of Inspecting Group

RUSTON (Special) — Dr. J. B. Wilson, dean of the School of Arts and Sciences at Louisiana Tech, will serve as a member of the visiting committee to inspect East Tennessee State College, through Wednesday.

The visitation is sponsored by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, following a two - year period of self - evaluation by the administration and faculty of the college.

Other members of the visiting team are President Leo W. Jenkins, East Carolina College, chairman; Dean R. L. Cravens, Western Kentucky State College; Dr. C. T. Sharpton, University of Alabama; A. H. Rawlinson, University of South Carolina; and Dean Robert H. Wienefeld, University of South Carolina.

On the same dates the institution will also be visited by a committee representing the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education.

The Southern Association committee was appointed by Gordon the Commission on Colleges and Universities of the Association.

PLAN SPACE RESEARCH

BONN (AP)—The West German Scientific World Space Research Commission will be set up shortly. Atomic Minister Siegfried Balke said the commission would have to start from scratch because West Germany entered the space travel race late.

IT'S CLEANUP TIME AGAIN

Yes, it's cleanup time, all across America, and you and your neighbors will be burning last year's grass, old papers, trash, and the piles of limbs from the trees that fell last winter.

Smokey Bear says that careless debris burning is one of the principal causes of forest fires, year after year.

So when you're ready to strike that match, won't you heed SMOKEY's simple rules?

1. Check with your local fire warden or fire department before you burn! You may need a permit for any fire outdoors!
2. Have tools, water, and enough help to be sure your fire can't get away!
3. Don't burn on dry, windy days, when fires run fast and sparks and embers fly!
4. Never leave a fire—any fire—burning unattended!

Remember- only YOU can PREVENT FOREST FIRES!

Landscaping Ups Home Value

A well done landscape can be one of the chief resources of a home property. In addition to its aesthetic or utility purpose, a sound landscape often increases the real estate value of the home.

This is why this spring, 50 million homeowners are expecting to improve their properties with gardening programs ranging in size from a few shrubs to complete landscaping.

HIGHER PRICE

Home improvement through landscaping, usually brings a higher price to the homeowner. at time of resale. Well-landscaped homes bring 15 to 20 per cent more in the real estate markets, according to the American Association of Nurserymen.

Independent studies show that a minimum of four per cent of the total value of the property invested in landscaping and planting will bring the higher return when and if the property is sold.

A sound requirement is always a basic landscape plan which can be used to guide the planting of the property from year to year. With a basic plan the homeowner does not have to plant all at once unless he wishes to. He can purchase plants piecemeal and when the landscape is finished he will have an artistic planting with excellent design.

ADVICE

Today professional landscape advice is available at modest cost to all homeowners, although just a few decades ago this service was associated only with wealthy people who desired it for privacy and prestige.

Many nurserymen now have landscape specialists on their staffs to provide plans, and the emphasis is currently on more relaxed and easy, informal living.

It is more economical for the homeowner, when an experienced landscape nurseryman lays out the basic plan, the landscape nurseryman does not look at a property in terms of so many plants as an amateur is likely to do. He considers the topography of the land and the planting in terms of artistic design that will fit well in its surroundings, providing plenty of space for garden living or privacy, or whatever else may be desired in addition to the foundation planting or lawn.

EFFECTIVE

All homeowners, no matter how small their properties may be, can have good, effective landscaping.

What is good landscaping?

Good landscaping makes the house look attractive from the street; unifying house and land by use of trees and shrubs to provide a pleasing "lived-in" look to the house . . . Sound landscaping includes a garden or outdoor living area, or patio planted for outdoor recreation, dining and entertaining.

Proper landscaping includes trees and shrubs that supply adequate shade and privacy to the living area. Where homes are exposed to cold winds in winter, proper planting of windbreaks offer more comfort on the property and lower fuel bills . . .A well - planted property provides plenty of cut flowers for use inside the house.

The homeowner can achieve unlimited advantages from his land. The exterior of his home can be as lovely, as comfortable and as valuable as he makes it.

Have Proper Acoustics For The Musicians

Whether a beginner, or an accomplished music - maker, it's more fun to play when the sound is rich, full and in a proper acoustical setting.

For this reason, more and more families are planning room alteration, decoration and even furniture placement to compliment their musical interests. With more than 33,000,000 amateur music makers in the United States this year, according to the American Music Conference, music rooms and music corners are on their way back.

EASY

Proper acoustical settings for at-home musical adventures are relatively easy to achieve. Often, existing rugs, drapes and furniture are sufficient to absorb echoes. Or, correct placement of the instrument may be all that is required.

If a spinet piano or organ is to be the center of musical activity, best results can be obtained by positioning the instrument against a "short wall."

Other instruments may sound best if played in a corner of the room. In this way, corner walls act in the same manner as the cone of a hi-fi speaker and direct the sound.

TILE

If additional sound absorbing materials are needed, use acoustical tile. This material can eliminate most echo problems, is usually inexpensive, and comes in a variety of textures and patterns.

Hardwood wall paneling also can be used to advantage if major room alteration is planned. Paneled walls resist vibration, thereby eliminating distorted sound waves.

Easy-To-Clean Products Help Casual Living

Today's accent on casual living has inspired the modern housewife to seek easy-to-clean-and-maintain homebuilding products which will make her day's work easier and shorter.

Housewives agree that the most difficult and time - consuming phase of home-cleaning is caring for walls and doors. Kitchen walls are especially difficult to maintain, and usually require re-painting or refinishing every two years.

After extensive research and product testing, a leading wood products manufacturer has now developed a new line of prefinished plywood paneling and matching flush doors with the warmth and beauty of expensive hand-rubbed wood.

Sunshades And Fences Make Patio Areas More Enjoyable

Terraces, patios, and breezeways are three of the more common areas for outdoor living. Dressing them up for greater utility during the summer months is a very popular pastime.

Some of the more practical accessories for pleasant outdoor living areas are permanent overhead sunshades, solid or partially open trellises, arbors, and fences. Some or all of them in varying combinations and with attractive landscaping will provide a literal bower for family relaxation and informal entertaining.

Sunshades that are, or appear to be, extensions of the roof are often completely covered to provide an area that is secure from showers. An adjacent area can then be covered with an open sunshade that consists of a decorative wood pattern.

Vertical sunshades also serve a variety of purposes in outdoor planning. They are often used to set off one area from another, or to provide privacy for part of the area.

FENCING PRIVACY

If privacy is an objective, handsome fences in new designs will fullfill this requirement without giving a "fenced-in" feeling. In fact, there are fences that give a measure of protection yet do not completely exclude light and breeze. These are ideal for setting off an area containing a swimming pool.

A high fence can be made of vertical planks mounted alternately on the front and back of a framework to keep kids and animals out but let breezes through, or with blocks cut from two-by-fours and put up in an open-work design. Vines and shrubs can be trained against this type of fence to fill in during the summer and give an added measure of privacy.

DO-IT-YOURSELF

Of course, it is possible to engage a contractor to execute any or all of the plans you make, but most of these improvements can be made by the homemaker who is an amateur craftsman and enjoys wood working.

Selection of lumber is important, and should be done with the advice of your local lumber dealer. Since they are extremely workable and widely available, any one of the 11 woods from the Western Pine region will be a wise choice.

Remember that care in construction and finishing will pay big dividends in good appearance and long life. All parts that are underground should be treated with a preservative, preferably one that contains pentachlorophenol, to guard against rotting and termites. Exposed ends above the ground should be similarly treated.

When the construction and finishing are completed, don't forget that final touch of landscaping. Trees and shrubs are the answer to that barren look and give a lived-in appearance.

Neat Trick

Suspend small objects to be painted by a string from an overhead support. This provides out-of-the-way drying space while allowing rotating while painting all sides.

WHOLESALE TO EVERYONE

CAN BE FUN

Selection Of Right Wallpaper Is Basic To Good Decoration

Picking the right kind of wallpaper can be pretty much like picking your new spring hat. You can have fun, or you can spend several exhausting and inconclusive hours trying to make up your mind. So pick your paper carefully, reminds the Wallpaper Council, and you'll live happily with it ever after.

It is best to have some idea of what you're after before you get into the store. The wallpaper people in your local store will be happy to help you solve your decorating problems, but they can't make up your mind for you. So be prepared to give them some idea of the type of furniture you have, the color combinations of your accessories, and a general idea of what you want.

With the correct wallpaper, there is no doubt but that you can easily alter and improve any room in the house.

Rooms in compact, modern ranch homes can be made to appear more spacious, while larger ambling rooms can take on that comfortable, intimate look, with the right wallpaper with the proper texture, pattern and tone.

PRE-TEST EFFECT

Many wallpaper stores will let you have a strip of wallpaper, so that you can tape it up on your wall and let your family live with it a while.

The new living-dining room areas provide lots of family use, so that walls must be subdued, yet provide an ever-pleasing background. Textured wallpapers are usually the answer here. They come in a variety of effects and colors, and will soften and enhance the plain surfaces of modern furnishings.

A room badly cut up with too many windows or doors calls for ingenious handling. If this problem room happens to be your dining room, paper one or even two walls with an interesting bold pattern. Then use plain colored and textured papers on the cut-up surfaces, with woodwork and doors painted to match. There are plenty of such matching papers now available.

TO BRIGHTEN ROOM

A dark room, removed from natural sunlight, should be papered in soft yellows or off-white tones to introduce light and spaciousness.

Dormer windows often present another difficult problem. A small scaled all-over pattern on the ceiling and walls or the dormer, and matching plain papers on the other walls, will give a most pleasant and decorative effect. Sloping walls will easily blend into the ceiling, if you just use the same small-textured design on both ceilings and dormer.

If you plan to do the job yourself, select your papers, keeping this fact in mind. There are many pre-trimmed and pre-pasted papers on the market which will ease your job considerably. If papers are untrimmed, your dealer can most likely trim them for you free.

Loans Insured By FHA Made For 'Add-Ons'

If you are considering adding a new recreation room or bedroom but are worried about the cost, consider an FHA loan. These loans can be made through the contractor or building materials dealer who is handling your job.

It is important when undertaking a major financial step such as a home expansion to make sure that the work is well-planned and adequate for the future. Dealers will make helpful suggestions on materials that will give good service.

Best Is Often Cheapest Way

In home construction and improvement, as in other things, the best is usually the cheapest.

Using materials such as copper plumbing, seasoned lumber and genuine ceramic tile may coast a little more initially, but in the long run the saving is going to be substantial.

Landscaping Ups Home Value

A well done landscape can be one of the chief resources of a home property. In addition to its aesthetic or utility purpose, a sound landscape often increases the real estate value of the home.

This is why this spring, 50 million homeowners are expecting to improve their properties with gardening programs ranging in size from a few shrubs to complete landscaping.

HIGHER PRICE

Home improvement through landscaping, usually brings a higher price to the homeowner, at time of resale. Well-landscaped homes bring 15 to 20 per cent more in the real estate markets, according to the American Association of Nurserymen.

Independent studies show that a minimum of four per cent of the total value of the property invested in landscaping and planting will bring the higher return when and if the property is sold.

A sound requirement is always a basic landscape plan which can be used to guide the planting of the property from year to year. With a basic plan the homeowner does not have to plant all at once unless he wishes to. He can purchase plants piecemeal and when the landscape is finished he will have an artistic planting with excellent design.

ADVICE

Today professional landscape advice is available at modest cost to all homeowners, although just a few decades ago this service was associated only with wealthy people who desired it for privacy and prestige.

Many nurserymen now have landscape specialists on their staffs to provide plans, and the emphasis is currently on more relaxed and easy, informal living.

It is more economical for the homeowner, when an experienced landscape nurseryman lays out the basic plan, the landscape nurseryman does not look at a property in terms of so many plants as an amateur is likely to do. He considers the topography of the land and the planting in terms of artistic design that will fit well in its surroundings, providing plenty of space for garden living or privacy, or whatever else may be desired in addition to the foundation planting or lawn.

EFFECTIVE

All homeowners, no matter how small their properties may be, can have good, effective landscaping.

What is good landscaping?

Good landscaping makes the house look attractive from the street; unifying house and land by use of trees and shrubs to provide a pleasing "lived-in" look to the house . . . Sound landscaping includes a garden or outdoor living area, or patio planted for outdoor recreation, dining and entertaining.

Proper landscaping includes trees and shrubs that supply adequate shade and privacy to the living area. Where homes are exposed to cold winds in winter, proper planting of windbreaks offer more comfort on the property and lower fuel bills . . . A well - planted property provides plenty of cut flowers for use inside the house.

The homeowner can achieve unlimited advantages from his land. The exterior of his home can be as lovely, as comfortable and as valuable as he makes it.

Have Proper Acoustics For The Musicians

Whether a beginner, or an accomplished music - maker, it's more fun to play when the sound is rich, full and in a proper acoustical setting.

For this reason, more and more families are planning room alteration, decoration and even furniture placement to compliment their musical interests. With more than 33,000,000 amateur music makers in the United States this year, according to the American Music Conference, music rooms and music corners are on their way back.

EASY

Proper acoustical settings for at-home musical adventures are relatively easy to achieve. Often, existing rugs, drapes and furniture are sufficient to absorb echoes. Or, correct placement of the instrument may be all that is required.

If a spinet piano or organ is to be the center of musical activity, best results can be obtained by positioning the instrument against a "short wall."

Other instruments may sound best if played in a corner of the room. In this way, corner walls act in the same manner as the cone of a hi-fi speaker and direct the sound.

TILE

If additional sound absorbing materials are needed, use acoustical tile. This material can eliminate most echo problems, is usually inexpensive, and comes in a variety of textures and patterns.

Hardwood wall paneling also can be used to advantage if major room alteration is planned. Paneled walls resist vibration, thereby eliminating distorted sound waves.

Easy-To-Clean Products Help Casual Living

Today's accent on casual living has inspired the modern housewife to seek easy-to-clean-and-maintain homebuilding products which will make her day's work easier and shorter.

Housewives agree that the most difficult and time - consuming phase of home-cleaning is caring for walls and doors. Kitchen walls are especially difficult to maintain, and usually require re-painting or refinishing every two years.

After extensive research and product testing, a leading wood products manufacturer has now developed a new line of prefinished plywood paneling and matching flush doors with the warmth and beauty of expensive hand-rubbed wood.

Sunshades And Fences Make Patio Areas More Enjoyable

Terraces, patios, and breezeways are three of the more common areas for outdoor living. Dressing them up for greater utility during the summer months is a very popular pastime.

Some of the more practical accessories for pleasant outdoor living areas are permanent overhead sunshades, solid or partially open trellises, arbors, and fences. Some or all of them in varying combinations and with attractive landscaping will provide a literal bower for family relaxation and informal entertaining.

Sunshades that are, or appear to be, extensions of the roof are often completely covered to provide an area that is secure from showers. An adjacent area can then be covered with an open sunshade that consists of a decorative wood pattern.

Vertical sunshades also serve a variety of purposes in outdoor planning. They are often used to set off one area from another, or to provide privacy for part of the area.

FENCING PRIVACY

If privacy is an objective, handsome fences in new designs will fullfill this requirement without giving a "fenced-in" feeling. In fact, there are fences that give a measure of protection yet do not completely exclude light and breeze. These are ideal for setting off an area containing a swimming pool.

A high fence can be made of vertical planks mounted alternately on the front and back of a framework to keep kids and animals out but let breezes through, or with blocks cut from two-by-fours and put up in an open-work design. Vines and shrubs can be trained against this type of fence to fill in during the summer and give an added measure of privacy.

DO-IT-YOURSELF

Of course, it is possible to engage a contractor to execute any or all of the plans you make, but most of these improvements can be made by the homemaker who is an amateur craftsman and enjoys wood working.

Selection of lumber is important, and should be done with the advice of your local lumber dealer. Since they are extremely workable and widely available, any one of the 11 woods from the Western Pine region will be a wise choice.

Remember that care in construction and finishing will pay big dividends in good appearance and long life. All parts that are underground should be treated with a preservative, preferably one that contains pentachlorophenol, to guard against rotting and termites. Exposed ends above the ground should be similarly treated.

When the construction and finishing are completed, don't forget that final touch of landscaping. Trees and shrubs are the answer to that barren look and give a lived-in appearance.

Neat Trick

Suspend small objects to be painted by a string from an overhead support. This provides out-of-the-way drying space while allowing rotating while painting all sides.

Remodeling Sound Investment

By CARROLL K. O'ROURKE
Chairman, National Home
Improvement Council

Home remodeling in the past few years has become one of the most active segments of the American economy — and with good reason. Homeowners everywhere are finding that the improvement and modernization of their homes is one of the soundest and most sensible investments that any family can make.

BOOST

Unlike other so-called consumer purchases, a remodeling project is not likely to be used up or worn out as time passes. Rather, a well-planned project, using quality materials and expert workmanship, usually increases the value of a home by more than the cost of the project.

The homeowner who renews his housing investment through periodic remodeling projects and continuing maintenance will find that his home's market value is substantially above the amount of his investment.

As the demand for home improvement services has increased, the skills and products of industry have expanded, too. Through the efforts of the National Home Improvement Council and other industry organizations, it is far safer and more convenient today to purchase modernization products and services than it has ever been before.

TRAINED

Thousands of contractors and dealers have been trained in the procedures that permit them to carry out remodeling projects with professional skill, efficiency and reliability.

Even so, it's a good idea to "investigate before you invest." There are still some unscrupulous operators whose only objective is to defraud unwary homeowners, giving them inferior materials and services at drastically inflated prices.

Follow these basic rules:

Make sure your home remodeling contractor or dealer is an established local businessman, with a place of business that you can visit for first-hand observation.

INQUIRE

Ask if he belongs to the Home Improvement Council, the Better Business Bureau and other organizations dedicated to maintaining high business standards.

Ask to see a list of customers the firm has previously served, then check with some of those references.

Make sure you don't sign anything that you don't clearly understand.

By observing those simple precautions, you can be sure that you will be getting the most out of remodeling — your best investment and a wonderful family adventure.

Carpets Hide Worn Flooring

If your floors are in need of repair or refinishing, 'hide' them under a carpet. The idea is not as 'wacky' as it sounds. Replacement of worn floors, or resanding and finishing is an expensive item in home improvement budgets.

Colorful and practical carpeting, laid wall-to-wall along with a soft, springy underlay, can eliminate the need for most repairs. The savings realized can help pay for a large share of the cost of a good quality carpet.

Auto-Tacker Speeds Job Of Fixing Up

Building a family room in the basement finishing off an add-on room? Insulating your attic?

You can take a lot of work out of these projects by using an automatic tacker.

Fastening the insulation to the studs, attaching vapor barrier materials, putting up ceiling tile, and staple - nailing wall plankings to the furring strips, are jobs made easy with an all-purpose tacker.

Such a tacker saves you all the work of securing a nail, setting it, and then driving it in with a hammer. Instead, you just position the tacker, squeeze the handle — zip — in goes the tight-gripping staple. And, your other hand is free to hold your material in position.

Many home improvement projects never are started because of the amount of time and work involved. A time - saver and worksaver, like an automatic staple tacker, helps to get things under way and completed.

THE WARM LOOK OF WOOD enhances this ultra-modern kitchen with a handsome, glowing personality. The solid beauty and practicality of wood is ideal for wall coverings and built-ins. A distinctive "island" composed of stove and chopping block is shown centered in the room.

THAN IN PAST

Air Conditioning Is More Available

Officials of home builders associations throughout the nation, as well as U. S. Government agencies, estimate that within the next decade, all new home construction will include central air conditioning.

Once considered a luxury to be enjoyed only by the wealthy, central air conditioning is now within the easy reach of the average homeowning family. Unlike those consumer products which have gone up in price in the past several years, the cost of central air conditioning has actually been reduced.

MADE POSSIBLE

This price reduction has been made possibly primarily through numerous technological advances. Now entirely new systems greatly reduce installation costs — the major part of the central air conditioning expense —and permit fast, easy installation.

Today's modern central air conditioners may be used in conjunction with existing heating systems, with a gas or oil furnace as part of a new system or, in the case of the heat pump air conditioner as a self-contained year round system.

In addition to its summer-time cooling function and convenience, a central air conditioning system provides clean, filtered air all year round, a boon to all those people allergic to dust and pollen. Because the air is dust free, there is less cleaning and dusting to be done in an air conditioned home with fewer bills for cleaning of draperies, rugs and other household articles.

The addition of central air conditioning to an existing home is one of the best ways for the owner to maintain the future value of his home while increasing its immediate resale value.

BIG TICKET

Central air conditioning is, of course, a "big ticket" purchase, but depending upon the type of home and whether or not heating equipment is needed, central air conditioning may be added to an existing home from around $500 to $1,200 for the average installation. This expenditure may be amortized over reasonable periods in most instances.

The point for the home owner to bear in mind when planning to add central air conditioning is that the value of his house is automatically and substantially increased, usually from $1,000 to $2,500. Thus, while enjoying all the comfort, cleanliness and health benefits of central air conditioning, the home owner has made a potential profit as well.

Folding Door Forms More Floor Space

The single largest demand among home owners and new home buyers today is for more space!

For example, in a six room home, an average of 90 square feet of space is lost just in the area that swinging doors eat up. That's why more and more homeowners are abandoning hinged swinging doors and replacing them with folding doors. Folding doors fold completely inside the doorway, instead of swinging out into the room — striking furniture or blocking off corners and other entranceways.

In addition, a large number of remodeling experts have found folding doors the simplest and most economical way of adding an extra room. As a room divider, a folding door is ideal. Actually it serves as a movable wall.

If you want two rooms, just extend the folding door. But when you want to use the whole area—fold back your divider and you have got the full room again.

Folding doors may be used to create a family room or to partition off an extra bedroom. Installation can be made in less than a hour; with no construction mess to clean up.

There are doors in all price classifications. They range from inexpensive models which are single sheet thickness with cores of venetian blind slats or chipboard — to top quality doors such as one with welded steel frames and tough vinyl coverings.

CAN BE FUN

Selection Of Right Wallpaper Is Basic To Good Decoration

Picking the right kind of wallpaper can be pretty much like picking your new spring hat. You can have fun, or you can spend several exhausting and inconclusive hours trying to make up your mind. So pick your paper carefully, reminds the Wallpaper Council, and you'll live happily with it ever after.

It is best to have some idea of what you're after before you get into the store. The wallpaper people in your local store will be happy to help you solve your decorating problems, but they can't make up your mind for you. So be prepared to give them some idea of the type of furniture you have, the color combinations of your accessories, and a general idea of what you want.

With the correct wallpaper, there is no doubt but that you can easily alter and improve any room in the house.

Rooms in compact, modern ranch homes can be made to appear more spacious, while larger ambling rooms can take on that comfortable, intimate look, with the right wallpaper with the proper texture, pattern and tone.

PRE-TEST EFFECT

Many wallpaper stores will let you have a strip of wallpaper, so that you can tape it up on your wall and let your family live with it a while.

The new living-dining room areas provide lots of family use, so that walls must be subdued, yet provide an ever-pleasing background. Textured wallpapers are usually the answer here. They come in a variety of effects and colors, and will soften and enhance the plain surfaces of modern furnishings.

A room badly cut up with too many windows or doors calls for ingenious handling. If this problem room happens to be your dining room, paper one or even two walls with an interesting bold pattern. Then use plain colored and textured papers on the cut-up surfaces, with woodwork and doors painted to match. There are plenty of such matching papers now available.

TO BRIGHTEN ROOM

A dark room, removed from natural sunlight, should be papered in soft yellows or off-white tones to introduce light and spaciousness.

Dormer windows often present another difficult problem. A small scaled all-over pattern on the ceiling and walls or the dormer, and matching plain papers on the other walls, will give a most pleasant and decorative effect. Sloping walls will easily blend into the ceiling, if you just use the same small-textured design on both ceilings and dormer.

If you plan to do the job yourself, select your papers, keeping this fact in mind. There are many pre-trimmed and pre-pasted papers on the market which will ease your job considerably. If papers are untrimmed, your dealer can most likely trim them for you free.

Loans Insured By FHA Made For 'Add-Ons'

If you are considering adding a new recreation room or bedroom but are worried about the cost, consider an FHA loan. These loans can be made through the contractor or building materials dealer who is handling your job.

It is important when undertaking a major financial step such as a home expansion to make sure that the work is well-planned and adequate for the future. Dealers will make helpful suggestions on materials that will give good service.

Best Is Often Cheapest Way

In home construction and improvement, as in other things, the best is usually the cheapest.

Using materials such as copper plumbing, seasoned lumber and genuine ceramic tile may coast a little more initially, but in the long run the saving is going to be substantial.

APARTMENT ANGLE

Oversize House Can Aid Income

Couples in their 50's, with "too much house" and retirement coming along, could transofrm part of their home into a fine apartment. This would give them a number of advantages, according to John Concord, housing expert.

They can remain in the old, familiar neighborhood among friends and associations that have become part of their lives.

They can increase their income from the apartment's rental and gain tax deductions for the expense of maintaining rented property.

They can live more comfortably, perhaps on the ground floor, leaving the stair climbing for the renters.

In many homes, an attic or a basement are the obvious locations for such an apartment. It's attractiveness is of prime importance, as deluxe apartments always are in demand. A premium remodeling usually costs little more than a less attractive conversion, and the apartment will bring higher rent.

For instance, use of woodgrain finished hardwood paneling gives rooms a luxurious appearance.

These woodgrained hardboard panels are easy to work with. In fact, they are easily installed by a handy man, further reducing remodeling costs. Since they are factory - finished, on - the - job decorating is eliminated and maintenance expense greatly reduced.

Since single folk or young couples are likeliest renters of such apartments, it is advisable to properly furnish the rooms; selecting furniture that fits the general decorative scheme.

Essentials like chairs, tables, lamps, rugs and accessories make a homelike atmosphere and help bring a better choice of applicants from which to select a renter and will appreciably reduce tenant turnover.

Closet storage facilities can be stretched and made attractive by covering one or more walls with Peg - Board panels. Another strategic spot for this versatile paneling is on the inside of doors. Shelves on brackets and hooks for hanging, transform it into a real storage haven.

Should the conversion leave a shortage of closets, it is relatively simple to make a storage wall using lumber framing and attractive hardboard panels for sides and doors.

Tool Storing Is Made Simple With Hardboard

It's a sure bet — if you're a do-it-yourself hobbyist — that you have a work bench, but you may not have as an efficient arrangement for storing tools.

So here's a suggestion: Build a tool rack to put on the wall above your work bench. Make it with a sheet of perforated hardboard. Fasten it with wood screws to a framework of one-by-two lumber.

You'll find a wide variety of fixtures and hangers at your building materials dealer's.

Portable Type Swim Pools On Increase

Side by side with the evergrowing number of excavated pool installations round the country, are an ever-increasing number of homes with above-ground portable pools.

Million of units of portable pools dot the nation's landscape as homeowners set up "pint-sized" to "king-sized" models. Most of these are rigid-frame models with separate vinyl plastic liners, while others are the family-sized circular tank types.

Portable pools range from 6 to 18 feet in diameter and from 15 to 36 inches deep. They hold from 275 to 5,500 gallons of water.

Larger above-ground pools up to 24 feet in diameter, 4 feet deep, and with a capacity of 13,600 gallons are popular too. Some are constructed of aluminum sidewall supports that protect the plastic liner. In addition, a sturdy tubular steel frame of an interlocking design serves as the over-all outside support.

It is not advisable to set up the pool on tar paper, black top or any other asphalt or oil-base material that would cause a hardening of the liner. Also, avoid setting up the pool on grass or ground that has been recently treated with chemical compounds.

Roof Drainage Upkeep Simple

It's easy for the home handyman to keep up his own gutters and downspouts, says the Roof Drainage Manufacturers Institute.

First, however, check your ladder and all scaffolding equipment. Observe fundamental safety rules when climbing.

Five to 10 years can be added to the life of your roof drainage system by cleaning out all debris in spring and fall. While doing that, check for corroded points and spots where paint is flaking off.

Ventilation Aids Air Conditioning

Modern air conditioners—whether window types or central systems which cool the whole house—are scientifically designed to deliver cool air at various capacities, depending on their size.

But you can help your air conditioning system deliver peak performance at minimum expense by making sure your attic is properly insulated and ventilated.

ACOUSTICAL CEILING

Noise Reduction Materials

Acoustical ceiling tiles are the most effective single anti-noise measure you can take in your home. They soak up noise like a sponge soaks up water, and absorb 75 to 85 per cent of the sound that would otherwise bounce back into the room.

These tiles are natural home do-it-yourself materials. They can be installed easily by the homeowner if he follows the instructions carefully (each manufacturer provides special instructions for his own materials).

The three main ways of installing sound conditioning materials are cementing, nailing, or stapling and by means of mechanical suspension systems. The method you use will depend upon the ceiling you have.

If your ceiling is of smooth, strong plaster or plaster-board, cementing the acoustical tiles to the surface by means of a special adhesive is best. Make sure the surface is clean, dry, and in good condition, and the paint is sound.

First thing to do in cementing is to make a center-line down the length of the room, and another at right angles to it across the room. Placement of the first tile is important, so that the border tiles will have equal widths.

A putty knife or a small trowel is the only tool you need for applying the cement to the back of the tile. After the adhesive is applied, the tile is pressed into place. Cement spots should be the size of a walnut, and should be back about 1" from the tile edges.

If there are too many bumps in the ceiling, furring strips will have to be nailed to it and the acoustical tile attached to them. Nailing or stapling are generally the best methods of attaching acoustical materials to a solid wood backing or to wood strips.

Some perforated materials come with shallow holes in the corners for nailing. Both perforated and many other kinds of tiles come with tongue - and - groove joints, and with a wide flange through which either nails or staples are driven. Stapling with a staple gun is particularly quick and easy with this type of tile.

Housepower Important Factor

The homemaker's skillful use of the electrical conveniences at her command begins with the basic understanding of the sources and controls of power inside the home. These are the wires, outlets and switches which determine both electrical capacity and flexibility.

Housepower refers to the total electric capacity of a house. When there is full housepower, it means that the house is adequately wired, and the whole electrical system performs unobtrusively and efficiently.

MEASURED

Electricity is measured in terms of volts, amperes and watts. It is available in any quantity, but if more electirc power is desired in the home, then the size of the "service entrance" must be increased. The size of the wires in the service entrance determines the amount of current available in the home; the larger the wire the more electricity it can carry all at once.

In most older homes the electric service entrance was planned to provide electricity only for lights and a few small appliances (perhaps 30 or 60 amperes). The 100-ampere service entrance is the minimum capacity recommended today by electrical authorities as stated in American Standard Requirements for Residential Wiring.

PREVIOUS

Most houses built prior to 1940 rely on one or two 15-amp circuits. Today, however, there will be a minimum of one general purpose circuit for each 375 or 500 square feet of floor area, depending upon the size of the wire in the circuit. And the minimum requirement today to serve small appliances is two such circuits, to permit efficient operation of electrical appliances.

Although houses built or completely rewired in the past 10 to 15 years have the types of circuits described here, rapidly changing needs for electricity have led to a recommendation that general purpose circuits be divided into two classes: one to be used only for built-in lighting, and the other to serve convenience outlets located throughout the home for all plug-in appliances and portable lamps.

Better Living Is Bolstered By Air Conditioning

Is any home truly modern without central air conditioning? Most experts — including the Federal Housing Administration — think not. Recently, more and more builders across the country, are including air conditioning even in economy-priced tract homes, or are installing gas furnaces which are easily adaptable to add-on units.

Adding a gas or electric unit is no major problem in a house where ductwork has been correctly installed. Since no extensive remodeling is needed, prices are reasonable.

Cover Affords Swimming Pool Safety Measure

With permanent swimming pools being built at a rate of more than 50,000 per year in the United States, safety afforded by modern pool covers becomes increasingly important for the millions of swimmers, safety officials agree.

A permanent aluminum pool cover which automatically locks into place, opens and closes accordion-style via a switch cord which secures power from either a battery or electricity, has been developed and patented.

With this cover on, owners may now leave their pools unattended for even months at a time and be sure that children and or adults will not have access to their pool. When this all-metal cover is in place, it is impossible to enter the pool. It cannot be opened without the owner's removable switch cord.

NATURAL PLYWOOD wall paneling goes up as easily as wallpaper adding permanent beauty to any room. Plywood continues in popularity in home remodeling and improvement projects. Shown: Bamboo plywood applied with adhesive.

FOR HOUSE

Know Essentials For Heating Plan

If someone ever compiles a list of "pet peeves," it's a safe bet that it will include the shock that comes from putting warm feet on a cold, cold floor when you get up in the morning.

The expert whose business it is know about such things, points out that cold floors, violate modern standards of indoor winter comfort and that they are indications of operating or design deficiencies in the home heating system.

COLD FLOORS

In most instances, cold floors exist in otherwise modern homes simply because the homeowner has not been aware of better systems or because of financial considerations. When a qualified and competent dealer is asked to shave off a few dollars from the installation cost of a designed system, the customer is unwittingly asking for cold floors or other comfort failures.

When installing a new heating system, the homeowner can assure himself of top comfort performance and true economy by using a check list as follows:

How warm will the floors be? A good comfort system will keep floor temperatures within two degrees of the thermostat setting.

Will the home be drafty? If the system is adjusted for continuous air circulation, air in the house will be circulated continously, but at a rate that is imperceptible to occupants.

QUESTIONS

Will there be a blanket of cold air on the floor? There will not be, if the warm air diffusers are located at the base of the outside walls, under the windows.

Will the system produce a dollar's worth of comfort out of the heating unit and its fuel? It will, if the difference between floor and ceiling temperatures is not over 4½ degrees when the outside temperature is at 30, or 8 degrees difference when the outdoor temperature is zero.

Will it eliminate stagnant air? Continuous circulation of air prevents formation of those unpleasant odor pockets of stale household scents or dark snow or rain - soaked clothes.

Will temperatures in room corners be the same as in the center of the room and temperatures be the same from room to room? A well - designed modern forced warm air system can provide uniform heating throughout the house.

Will the temperature be steady? Thermostated with modern controls to keep pace with weather's vagaries, your house thermometer and your comfort should be as steady as a clock.

Carport Patio Can Stretch Storing Space

In searching for expandable space around the home when the need arises — many people look first at the attached garage. Because it's often an integral part of the house, it's logically convertible into a part of the home's living area.

The next question, of course: is—"what happens to the car, the children's bikes, garden tools and all the rest that goes into a typical garage"?

An ideal solution can be found in a combination carport-patio which offers a bonus of ample storage sapce. A central storeroom area provides the foundation for a cantilevered roof of translucent plastic panels. One side offers year-round weather protection for the family car while the other half of the overhang serves a a shelter for outdoor family activities.

Making the structure is an excellent do-it-yourself project. The plastic paneling is as easy to work with as wood is light-weight and requires a minimum of stock lumber for its supporting framework.

Planting

Set strawberry plants so that crown is even with soil level. If it is higher, roots dry out; if lower, crown may smother and the plant die. Firm soil around roots; water plant.

Tight Seal

Keep paint can rims clean so that lids will fit tight. This way paint can be stored for a longer period of time without hardening. To keep rims clean punch several nail holes in the bottom of the groove so that accumulated paint can drip down.

THAN IN PAST

Air Conditioning Is More Available

Officials of home builders associations throughout the nation, as well as U. S. Government agencies, estimate that within the next decade, all new home construction will include central air conditioning.

Once considered a luxury to be enjoyed only by the wealthy, central air conditioning is now within the easy reach of the average homeowning family. Unlike those consumer products which have gone up in price in the past several years, the cost of central air conditioning has actually been reduced.

MADE POSSIBLE

This price reduction has been made possibly primarily through numerous technological advances. Now entirely new systems greatly reduce installation costs — the major part of the central air conditioning expense —and permit fast, easy installation.

Today's modern central air conditioners may be used in conjunction with existing heating systems, with a gas or oil furnace as part of a new system or, in the case of the heat pump air conditioner as a self-contained year round system.

In addition to its summer-time cooling function and convenience, a central air conditioning system provides clean, filtered air all year round, a boon to all those people allergic to dust and pollen. Because the air is dust free, there is less cleaning and dusting to be done in an air conditioned home with fewer bills for cleaning of draperies, rugs and other household articles.

The addition of central air conditioning to an existing home is one of the best ways for the owner to maintain the future value of his home while increasing its immediate resale value.

BIG TICKET

Central air conditioning is, of course, a "big ticket" purchase, but depending upon the type of home and whether or not heating equipment is needed, central air conditioning may be added to an existing home from around $500 to $1,200 for the average installation. This expenditure may be amortized over reasonable periods in most instances.

The point for the home owner to bear in mind when planning to add central air conditioning is that the value of his house is automatically and substantially increased, usually from $1,000 to $2,500. Thus, while enjoying all the comfort, cleanliness and health benefits of central air conditioning, the home owner has made a potential profit as well.

Folding Door Forms More Floor Space

The single largest demand among home owners and new home buyers today is for more space!

For example, in a six room home, an average of 90 square feet of space is lost just in the area that swinging doors eat up. That's why more and more homeowners are abandoning hinged swinging doors and replacing them with folding doors. Folding doors fold completely inside the doorway, instead of swinging out into the room — striking furniture or blocking off corners and other entranceways.

In addition, a large number of remodeling experts have found folding doors the simplest and most economical way of adding an extra room. As a room divider, a folding door is ideal. Actually it serves as a movable wall.

If you want two rooms, just extend the folding door. But when you want to use the whole area—fold back your divider and you have got the full room again.

Folding doors may be used to create a family room or to partition off an extra bedroom. Installation can be made in less than a hour; with no construction mess to clean up.

There are doors in all price classifications. They range from inexpensive models which are single sheet thickness with cores of venetian blind slats or chipboard — to top quality doors such as one with welded steel frames and tough vinyl coverings.

PLANT WORLD

Increase Noted In Garden Living

The beauty and wholesomeness of garden living has taken America by storm. Today, with the development of smaller houses in communities throughout the country, many homeowners have discovered that one way to extend their houses is by using their outdoor space to full advantage. With the aid of vines, shrubbery and shade trees, they are making the patio a delightful place to dine, entertain and relax.

MANY IDEAS

Nurserymen have many ideas to show how you can plan and plant such an outdoor space this spring, says the American Association of Nurserymen. Good planting plans, among other things, will indicate how the garden living room can be protected from cold or hot winds, whether in fall or the hot summer months. These plantings both increase comfort and lengthen the outdoor season.

In the usually small space of the patio the homeowner can develop a small but beautiful plant world in which it is a thrilling and luxurous experience to get away from it all.

SHADE TREE

At least one shade tree is important in the patio not only for coolness, but for the lacy, everchanging patterns of sun and shade that it casts on walls, floor and other plants. The wealth of foliage and flowering plants for the patio, developed in recent years, provides a wide choice.

Flowering plants and vines in baskets and jardinieres or boxes add to the luxurious feeling of the patio, and they can be changed when the choicest flowers are in season.

The secret of the most delightful patios is the simplicity of plant life hugging the walls, not enroaching too much on the living space, but frequently being changed to capitalize on the best in the plant world at any given time.

ENGINEERING INSECT

Termite Damage Is Costly Matter

Although blind and brainless, the termite is an engineering genius.

This migrant, pin-sized insect is so shrewd that man's most modern construction practices fail to halt his attacks on wood and other cellulose material used in building.

The termite seeks out wood and infests it: probing through the ground to penetrate the most minute of foundation cracks.

Despite increased use of cements and metal in foundation construction, termite damage continues to climb. Losses by termite damage are second only to fire losses — amounting to 250 million dollars a year, more than $685,000 a day, according to figures released by sponsors of the termite control program.

Many mistakenly believe that a slab foundation can protect a house from termites. Far from being free from termites, houses with slab construction are often termite traps, making control difficult and expensive.

However termite control problems can be reduced by a few minor construction details when a house is being built or extensively remodeled by proper ventilation, proper drainage, adequate clearance under joist construction and removable baseboards in slab construction.

No home is really termite proof, but many are termite protected by wise construction and continued watchfulness.

One of the best control measures is the use of chemical insecticides impregnated into the ground around the foundations.

Chemicals are especially effective when used during constructoin and immediately upon completion of the foundation.

MOBILE air-conditioners can be rolled from room to room and installed in almost any window in a few seconds. Adjusting handle raises or lowers it to window sill height.

Plan Family Rooms For Many Uses

Now the family room plan can be used for everyone since every house isn't the same—and the family room must be built in the available space. And, the family room should be designed for the members of the family who will be using it.

If there are several children in the family, the room should have plenty of storage space for games, toys and should be able to take hard wear.

Mom and Dad also should have a vote in the new family room plan. If Mom is interested in flowers for example, include a spot for her displays.

Dad may need a corner of the family room for a desk and filing cabinet, which also could be used by the youngsters for homework and hobby activities.

ACOUSTICAL CEILING

Noise Reduction Materials

Acoustical ceiling tiles are the most effective single anti-noise measure you can take in your home. They soak up noise like a sponge soaks up water, and absorb 75 to 85 per cent of the sound that would otherwise bounce back into the room.

These tiles are natural home do-it-yourself materials. They can be installed easily by the homeowner if he follows the instructions carefully (each manufacturer provides special instructions for his own materials).

The three main ways of installing sound conditioning materials are cementing, nailing, or stapling and by means of mechanical suspension systems. The method you use will depend upon the ceiling you have.

If your ceiling is of smooth, strong plaster or plaster-board, cementing the acoustical tiles to the surface by means of a special adhesive is best. Make sure the surface is clean, dry, and in good condition, and the paint is sound.

First thing to do in cementing is to make a center-line down the length of the room, and another at right angles to it across the room. Placement of the first tile is important, so that the border tiles will have equal widths.

A putty knife or a small trowel is the only tool you need for applying the cement to the back of the tile. After the adhesive is applied, the tile is pressed into place. Cement spots should be the size of a walnut, and should be back about 1" from the tile edges.

If there are too many bumps in the ceiling, furring strips will have to be nailed to it and the acoustical tile attached to them. Nailing or stapling are generally the best methods of attaching acoustical materials to a solid wood backing or to wood strips.

Some perforated materials come with shallow holes in the corners for nailing. Both perforated and many other kinds of tiles come with tongue - and - groove joints, and with a wide flange through which either nails or staples are driven. Stapling with a staple gun is particularly quick and easy with this type of tile.

Hardboards Variety Aids Remodelers

Hardboard is one of the most versatile and most-widely used of man-made ropducts.

The do-it-yourself enthusiast can put it to 1,001 uses in home workshop projects.

It's also a building material used in remodeling projects, new homes, commercial strctures and farm buildings.

MADE OF WOOD

Hardboard is made of natural wood by separating the individual wood fibers, leaving each surrondued by its natural adhesive agent, and rearranging them in a matted form under heat and pressure.

The hardboard panel made by the proecess is dense, grainless an dhas great strength, uniformity, durability and adaptability. It can be sawed, drilled, curved, die-stamped, shaped, perforated, printed, painted and laminated. Its smooth, hard surface resists water damage and abrasive action.

It can be fastened with nails, adhesives, staples, screws, rivets and bolts. It will not slitp, splinter or crack, and it takes practically any finish beautifully.

THICKNESS VARIES

Hardboard panels range from ½" to 5-16" thick; most common sizes are ⅛", 3-16" and ¼". Standard panels are 4' x 6'; although other sizes are available in hardboards.

In addition to standard hardboard, which is brown in color, there are tempered, perforated and predecorated hardboards.

You can purchase hardboard from most lumber yards, building materials dealers and hardware stores under more than a score of brand names.

Wall-Mounted Vanitory Mirror Covers Opening

Today's homeowner wants the luxury of a large mirrored area in the bathroom or dressing room. Frequently when remodeling a bathroom, it's expensive to replace a small, old-fashioned cabinet with a larger, more modern one. Wall opening has to be increased and often leads to ex-ensive relocation of plumbing.

A wall-mounted vanitory mirror unit will cover the old rough wall opening, and is ideally suited to remodeling work. Vanitory mirrors are available in widths ranging from two to four feet.

A compartment beneath the mirror with sliding mirrored doors, is designed to hold the cosmetics and medicines)you like to have handy.

MAKE A FAMILY ROOM useful for every one in the family with hobby-inviting features. Here a first floor bay window, in a family room, displays lovely flowers while the workbench on the adjacent wall can be used for Mom's flower arangement or by Dad and the youngsters for home work.

Plant Roses For Beauty, Fragrance

Perhaps the most thrilling experience for the home gardener is to pluck the first lovely rose bloom that appears and to sniff its fragrance.

Some of the roses listed as very fragrant, according to the American Rose Society, are:

LIST

Crimson Glory, Etoile de Hollande, Good News, Kodes Perfecta, Lady Luck, living, Mirandy, Pink Peace, Pink Princess, Rose of Freedom, Sutter's Gold, Tapestry, The Doctor, Jiminy Cricket, Ma Perkins, High Time, Pink Chiffon, Spartan, Texan and Merry Widow.

A trip to a nursery when roses are in bloom in containers is a sure way for the home owner to find the roses whose aroma he likes best, simply by going around and sniffing the flowers, says the American Association of Nurserymen.

Most local nurserymen have their favorite roses with respect to their fragrance, while nursery catalogues almost invariably stress the fragrance of a rose if it has outstanding aroma.

BEST ROSES

However, the "best" rose is the one you like best and from which you get the most pleasure and results.

A number of fine regional nurserymen growers of roses bring out excellent new varieties, one or two each a year.

Less Repair

The plumbing system in a modern home represents about 10 per cent of the value of the house. It pays to make repairs while they're small.

Planned Planting

Flowering shrubs show off to best advantage when massed in tiers according to height . . . low-growing ones in front.

Paper Patterns Neatness Aid In Linoleum Work

Paper patterns help do a neater job when you have to fit linoleum against an irregular wall outline, according to a mechanics magazine. Paste pieces of heavy paper together with the edges butting snugly against the irregular outline.

Lay the pattern in position on the floor and coat it with rubber cement. Also apply cement to the back of the linoleum at the point where it will come over the paper.

When the cement is nearly dry, place the linoleum in position, pressing the portion to be cut on the paper.

Build Closet Wall To Gain Storing Space

To the lady of the house, "conquering space" means discovering new storage room — rather than rocketing to the moon.

Now a new plan for a bedroom closet wall deserves the designation of "space maker" say its designers, makers of lumber, plywood and other assorted wood building products.

The plan provides twin closets "his" and "hers" on either side of the head of the bed. It is a neat solution to the otherwise vexing storage problem in many, many homes since most bedrooms have unused space along one wall. Usually, you do not even need to rearrange furniture; other times, moving the bed to another wall makes the addition practical, simple.

Closets require only 2-foot depth, and they can be as wide as the room allows. Even a 2-foot wide closet provides storage for at least a dozen men's suits or two or three times as many dresses. Above and below the clothes on hangers, there's added space for shoes, hats, accessories.

These built-ins are simple with either lumber or plywood. Finished natural or with a light stain, the warmth and beauty of wood adds restful charm and updates the home. Choose a light-colored, economical wood such as western hem-lock that readily accepts a wide range of stain tones or one of the new prefinished Craftwall hardwood panelings offered in a half-dozen woods and even more finishes.

For the advanced do-it-yourselfer, building a closet wall probably falls into the "moderately easy" category. When built by a professional, the project would go fast, cause little disruption of the home and usually cost only $350-$450 complete, unless there are unusually complicated conditions.

Keep Smaller Garden Tools, Seed Together

Here's a handy tip for the gardener for the busy planting season ahead.

That is, a small wooden or heavy cardboard box with a handle and partitions to hold all the small equipment needed for seed sowing. Thus packages of seed, labels, stakes, twine, a trowel and any special gadgets will be kept together, and neither time nor temper will be lost hunting for small essential items whenever a little planting can be done.

As the season advances and chores change, more timely equipment can be exchanged for the seed-sowing items.

Varied Models Of Dishwashers Being Installed

Home dishwashers are rapidly taking their places along side of refrigerators and ranges in more and more new and older American homes.

Kitchen modernization projects these days, include built-in dishwasher models, free - standing models or dishwasher - sink combinations. These are now installed with a minimum of change, effort and expense.

Homemakers (the children and dads, too) welcome the day when they can gain the dividends of more convenience, extra sanitation, and the big saving of work and time — thanks to a modern dishwasher.

BLANKETS of mineral wool, cut to size, are stapled neatly to attic knee walls. Finished room will be comfortable, draft-free.

Tapered wooden shingles make handy shims, table leg eveners, can be wedged into large cracks to be filled with calking, etc.

Change Cited In Insulation Siding Quality

Though mineral-surface insulating siding has been used as a building materials product for over 30 years, people are talking about it with new enthusiasm.

Inherent insulation properties are the same, but the quality of design, color and texture has been completely overhauled and upgraded. New, wider selections of insulating siding styles and colors, along with added texture, are permanently embossed right at the factory; no painting is required; ease of maintenance is a boon to the busy homeowner.

Buyers today are not only color and quality conscious, they demand product versatility. The rich, two-toned effect that natural stone or brick combined with siding gives any home — whether new construction or modernized—is a forward trend.

Insulating siding is architecturally compatible with all exterior sidewall materials. Striated panels in clapboard design, surfaced with colorful mineral granules, offer the rich textured look with deep shadowlines that people want.

Use For Clay

Two lumps of modeling clay make a wonderful holder when soldering or glueing two small awkwardly shaped pieces. Just push each part into its lump of clay, then line up in the desired position.

APARTMENT ANGLE

Oversize House Can Aid Income

Couples in their 50's, with "too much house" and retirement comming along, could transofrm part of their home into a fine apartment. This would give them a number of advantages, according to John Concord, housing expert.

They can remain in the old, familiar neighborhood among friends and associations that have become part of their lives.

They can increase their income from the apartment's rental and gain tax deductions for the expense of maintaining rented property.

They can live more comfortably, perhaps on the ground floor, leaving the stair climbing for the renters.

In many homes, an attic or a basement are the obvious locations for such an apartment. It's attractiveness is of prime importance, as deluxe apartments always are in demand. A premium remodeling usually costs little more than a less attractive conversion, and the apartment will bring higher rent.

For instance, use of woodgrain finished hardwood paneling gives rooms a luxurious appearance.

These woodgrained hardboard panels are easy to work with. In fact, they are easily installed by a handy man, further reducing remodeling costs. Since they are factory - finished, on - the - job decorating is eliminated and maintenance expense greatly reduced.

Since single folk or young couples are likeliest renters of such apartments, it is advisable to properly furnish the rooms; selecting furniture that fits the general decorative scheme.

Essentials like chairs, tables, lamps, rugs and accessories make a homelike atmosphere and help bring a better choice of applicants from which to select a renter and will appreciably reduce tenant turnover.

Closet storage facilities can be stretched and made attractive by covering one or more walls with Peg - Board panels. Another strategic spot for this versatile paneling is on the inside of doors. Shelves on brackets and hooks for hanging, transform it into a real storage haven.

Should the conversion leave a shortage of closets, it is relatively simple to make a storage wall using lumber framing and attractive hardboard panels for sides and doors.

Tool Storing Is Made Simple With Hardboard

It's a sure bet — if you're a do-it-yourself hobbyist — that you have a work bench, but you may not have as an efficient arrangement for storing tools.

So here's a suggestion: Build a tool rack to put on the wall above your work benchh. Make it with a sheet of perforated hardboard. Fasten it with wood screws to a framework of one-by-two lumber.

You'll find a wide variety of fixtures and hangers at your building materials dealer's.

Portable Type Swim Pools On Increase

Side by side with the evergrowing number of excavated pool installations round the country, are an ever-increasing number of homes with above-ground portable pools.

Million of units of portable pools dot the nation's landscape as homeowners set up "pint-sized" to "king-sized" models. Most of these are rigid-frame models with separate vinyl plastic liners, while others are the family-sized circular tank types.

Portable pools range from 6 to 18 feet in diameter and from 15 to 36 inches deep. They hold from 275 to 5,500 gallons of water.

Larger above-ground pools up to 24 feet in diameter, 4 feet deep, and with a capacity of 13,600 gallons are popular too. Some are constructed of aluminum sidewall supports that protect the plastic liner. In addition, a sturdy tubular steel frame of an interlocking design serves as the over-all outside support.

It is not advisable to set up the pool on tar paper, black top or any other asphalt or oil-base material that would cause a hardening of the liner. Also, avoid setting up the pool on grass or ground that has been recently treated with chemical compounds.

Roof Drainage Upkeep Simple

It's easy for the home handyman to keep up his own gutters and downspouts, says the Roof Drainage Manufacturers Institute.

First, however, check your ladder and all scaffolding equipment. Observe fundamental safety rules when climbing.

Five to 10 years can be added to the life of your roof drainage system by cleaning out all debris in spring and fall. While doing that, check for corroded points and spots where paint is flaking off.

IN HOUSE

Efficient Cooling Plan Is Needed

On a day when you awaken feeling at peace with the world — when you want to 'get at' things you've been putting off and see others around you abuzz with activity — it's not a big dose of vitamins — it's the weather!

Chances are that the temperature is about 70 degrees the humidity about 50 per cent — and there is a gentle stirring of clean air. Nature is giving a demonstration of the climate conditions which suit humans best.

Scientists and researchers call this an "optimum day." Insurance statistics and court records show that on such days there are fewer accidents, fewer deaths and fewer serious arguments. In general, people do better jobs and feel better.

While homeowners may not have reduced this to such simple terms when considering an air conditioning system, actually this is the secret for specifying the comfort conditions you want.

FACTORS

There are important factors for the homeowner to consider when planning a program of air conditioning. Be sure to check the following points carefully:

Temperature and humidity should be held within the comfort zone: 70-78 degrees as far as temperature is concerned and 30-35 per cent relative humidity. Heat gain calculations are necessary to determine proper size of the mechanical equipment.

Provide air circulation in all rooms so that cool air will not stratify on the floor. Your dealer will design an adequate distribution and return air system so no perceptible air movement will impinge on occupants and cause discomfort.

Even though windows remain closed for summer cooling, a constant supply of fresh air can be provided with a dampering arrangement which brings in outside air, filters it, cools it and dehumidifies it before circulating it through the house.

For those suffering from asthma, hayfever, or sinus ailments or for dust-free living, you can have country-fresh air by including an electrostatic filtering device which removes cigarette smoke, pollen and other airborne junk.

Remember that the home has both relaxing areas and working areas. Cooler temperatures are important in the working areas because physical activity generates heat. Warmer temperatures in relaxing areas prevent chills while sitting still. Your dealer can provide for this either by balancing the flow of air to the various rooms or by installing electronic zone controls.

SPECIALIST ADVISES

Improving Home Increases Convenience, Beauty, Value

By PAUL SHOEMAKER
TREASURER
The National Home
Improvement Council

These days millions of families are discovering how to live better. The secret? Remodeling to have "a new home at the old address." Improving the home has a number of advantages now being discovered in one out of every five households countrywide.

Modernizing gives new comfort, new convenience, new pleasure and, most important of all, increases property value of many out-of-date houses.

Sound, sensible home improvement increases value well beyond the cost of the improvement. For that reason remodeling becomes an investment rather than an expense and is like "putting money in the bank."

PET PROJECT

Most families have their pet fix-up project.

Here's a quick rundown of some of the most popular: A remodeled kitchen is the favorite of home - makers everywhere who want new appliances to relieve the work load. Modern cabinets, lighting, new walls, flooring and ceilings are wanted to provide cherry surroundings in the "household center". New rooms are needed too, (from additional baths to converting the attic or basement, to adding on to the present structure.)

In addition to these, there are many more popular modernizing projects. Such things as swimming pools, breezeways, new heating and cooling equipment, additional storage space, wall paneling, wall papering and others to fit everyone's budget. All are guaranteed to make the home a better place in which to live.

The great need is to take care of growing families, give proper room for children's activities, for dad and mom to relax at day's end, for the whole family to live together in greater comfort.

Exterior face lifting (and I don't mean adding a TV antenna). Modern, up-to-date families think of outside remodeling as well as making the home inside more comfortable. Outside fix-up can range from a new paint job to re-siding to turning an old-fashioned porch into a sun room.

Here's important news. Home improvement financing is now readily obtainable at low rates. Improving your home today is as easy as buying a new car or financing a luxury vacation. For example, most homeowners can obtain sums up to $10,000 and repay over 20 years time under a government insured program. You can borrow lesser amounts, of course.

Tamp Soil

Tamp soil gently with the hoe blade after sowing seeds in rows. You'll provide close contact between soil and seeds; get flower or vegetable seeds off to a far stronger start.

Ceiling Tile Installation Is Simplified

Now's the time when do-it-yourselfers dust of the list of projects that await their skills. A favorite project, judging by the increased sales of ceiling-tile products at this season, is acoustical treatment of family living spaces.

Ceiling-tile installation is a good project for the home handy man, one that's easy to do professionally, and a job that's becoming easier with new developments in application methods.

PREVIOUSLY

Previously, unfinished ceiling had to be covered first with 1" x 2" wood furring strips in a separate operation before tile was nailed or stapled into place. This is no longer necessary. A leading manufacturer is now marketing a ceiling-tile system that utilizes a new metal "Clip-Strip" which goes up in the same operation as the tiles, automatically aligns them, and eliminates the need or individual fastening of the tiles.

Most important step in applying ceiling-tile is the planning. First make a scale drawing of the area to be covered, marking off one-foot squares for the tiles. The best appearance is obtained by using a pattern with wide border tiles, at least 6 inches or more. Border tiles can be cut with a small cross-cut hand-saw.

A wide selection of acoustical tile styles to suit all tastes is available. They range all the way up to 75 per cent sound absorption, depending on the method of attachment. Some of the newest patterns are shown in dramatic, sculptured effects, ideal for more formal living areas in the home.

IN REVAMPING

Modern Kitchen Economy Is Goal

Modern building materials, plus the skill of today's home improvement specialists, make it possible to revitalize a kitchen with few or now expensive alterations of basic room dimensions on almost any size budget.

Consultation with a home improvement specialist is of prime importance in any remodeling job and may mean extra dollars saved.

More and more kitchen remodeling plans are now including noise-quieting, acoustical ceiling tile. In addition to subduing normal kitchen racket, decorative acoustical tile complements any room decor.

For an added dash of low-cost luxury, install attractive woodgrain finishes and several color tones, these hardboard panelings are scuff - proof, cleanable and easily applied directly over over old walls with furring strips or adhesive.

Here are a few tips to consider when you're planning a new kitchen:

Relate the size of the kitchen to its functions: are an eating area, a laundry area or a sewing corner needed?

Check to see if moving a wall or windows will add more room and greater efficiency.

Plan for plenty of storage. This is probably the major complaint against outdated kitchens.

With thoughtful pre - planning, making the best possible use of modern building materials and consultation with a modernization expert, your new kitchen can be tailored exactly to both budget and needs.

Shower Height

A shower bath installation at 72 inches above the floor has been proved to be the most convenient height for most people.

Housepower Important Factor

The homemaker's skillful use of the electrical conveniences at her command begins with the basic understanding of the sources and controls of power inside the home. These are the wires, outlets and switches which determine both electrical capacity and flexibility.

Housepower refers to the total electric capacity of a house. When there is full housepower, it means that the house is adequately wired, and the whole electrical system performs unobtrusively and efficiently.

MEASURED

Electricity is measured in terms of volts, amperes and watts. It is available in any quantity, but if more electirc power is desired in the home, then the size of the "service entrance" must be increased. The size of the wires in the service entrance determines the amount of current available in the home; the larger the wire the more electricity it can carry all at once.

In most older homes the electric service entrance was planned to provide electricity only for lights and a few small appliances (perhaps 30 or 60 amperes). The 100-ampere service entrance is the minimum capacity recommended today by electrical authorities as stated in American Standard Requirements for Residential Wiring.

PREVIOUS

Most houses built prior to 1940 rely on one or two 15-amp circuits. Today, however, there will be a minimum of one general purpose circuit for each 375 or 500 square feet of floor area, depending upon the size of the wire in the circuit. And the minimum requirement today to serve small appliances is two such circuits, to permit efficient operation of electrical appliances.

Although houses built or completely rewired in the past 10 to 15 years have the types of circuits described here, rapidly changing needs for electricity have led to a recommendation that general purpose circuits be divided into two classes: one to be used only for built-in lighting, and the other to serve convenience outlets located throughout the home for all plug-in appliances and portable lamps.

Better Living Is Bolstered By Air Conditioning

Is any home truly modern without central air conditioning? Most experts — including the Federal Housing Administration — think not. Recently, more and more builders across the country, are including air conditioning even in economy-priced tract homes, or are installing gas furnaces which are easily adaptable to add-on units.

Adding a gas or electric unit is no major problem in a house where ductwork has been correctly installed. Since no extensive remodeling is needed, prices are reasonable.

Cover Affords Swimming Pool Safety Measure

With permanent swimming pools being built at a rate of more than 50,000 per year in the United States, safety afforded by modern pool covers becomes increasingly important for the millions of swimmers, safety officials agree.

A permanent aluminum pool cover which automatically locks into place, opens and closes accordion-style via a switch cord which secures power from either a battery or electricity, has been developed and patented.

With this cover on, owners may now leave their pools unattended for even months at a time and be sure that children and or adults will not have access to their pool. When this all-metal cover is in place, it is impossible to enter the pool. It cannot be opened without the owner's removable switch cord.

NATURAL PLYWOOD wall paneling goes up as easily as wallpaper adding permanent beauty to any room. Plywood continues in popularity in home remodeling and improvement projects. Shown: Bamboo plywood applied with adhesive.

Observe Codes When Planning Building Work

Nearly all communities exercise some municipal control over building projects, including major jobs of home remodeling, by means of building regulations or codes, which vary. The prime purpose of codes is two-fold:

They protect the community interests by specifying the quality, location, and appearance of construction projects.

They protect individuals against dangers to life and health from unsafe construction materials and assembly.

When remodeling, be sure to investigate the need of getting a building permit. Plans of the proposed building project must usually be submitted at the time when applying for a permit. Codes generally are enforced by the fee-and-permit system.

Old Kitchens Modernized By Built-Ins

Although built-ins are not new to American homeowners, the trend in recent years is to have more and more items built into a specific area. Special storage areas, book cases, furniture, etc., have been designed for some time as a means of conserving space and eliminating hard-to-clean areas.

The biggest trend of recent years, however, is for more built-ins in the kitchen. Now almost any appliance or gadget can be designed to become a part of the total kitchen.

CONSIDERATIONS

Why is the kitchen the popular place for built-ins? Here are some of the major considerations. Appearance — built-ins aid the integration of the parts into a total, unbroken line. Livability—with the coming of the kitchen-family room the demand for furniture style cabinetry increased. The blending of the appliances—ovens, range tops, dishwashers and refrigerator-freezers — help maintain this 'living' style kitchen.

Cleanliness — the elimination of cracks, corners and under areas to collect dirt, crumbs and odors is a blessing to housewives who demand freedom for modern day living.

Convenience — bringing the oven, refrigerator and freezer up to a workable height has been a boon to housewives. And separating the oven and cook top as well as refrigerator and freezer, to locate them where most convenient, enables kitchen planning experts to provide ease of work with good looks.

FOR HOUSE

Know Essentials For Heating Plan

If someone ever compiles a list of "pet peeves," it's a safe bet that it will include the shock that comes from putting warm feet on a cold, cold floor when you get up in the morning.

The expert whose business it is know about such things, points out that cold floors, violate modern standards of indoor winter comfort and that they are indications of operating or design deficiencies in the home heating system.

COLD FLOORS

In most instances, cold floors exist in otherwise modern homes simply because the homeowner has not been aware of better systems or because of financial considerations. When a qualified and competent dealer is asked to shave off a few dollars from the installation cost of a designed system, the customer is unwittingly asking for cold floors or other comfort failures.

When installing a new heating system, the homeowner can assure himself of top comfort performance and true economy by using a check list as follows:

How warm will the floors be? A good comfort system will keep floor temperatures within two degrees of the thermostat setting.

Will the home be drafty? If the system is adjusted for continuous air circulation, air in the house will be circulated continously, but at a rate that is imperceptible to occupants.

QUESTIONS

Will there be a blanket of cold air on the floor? There will not be, if the warm air diffusers are located at the base of the outside walls, under the windows.

Will the system produce a dollar's worth of comfort out of the heating unit and its fuel? It will, if the difference between floor and ceiling temperatures is not over 4½ degrees when the outside temperature is at 30, or 8 degrees difference when the outdoor temperature is zero.

Will it eliminate stagnant air? Continuous circulation of air prevents formation of those unpleasant odor pockets of stale household scents or dark snow or rain - soaked clothes.

Will temperatures in room corners be the same as in the center of the room and temperatures be the same from room to room? A well - designed modern forced warm air system can provide uniform heating throughout the house.

Will the temperature be steady? Thermostated with modern controls to keep pace with weather's vagaries, your house thermometer and your comfort should be as steady as a clock.

Carport Patio Can Stretch Storing Space

In searching for expandable space around the home when the need arises — many people look first at the attached garage. Because it's often an integral part of the house, it's logically convertible into a part of the home's living area.

The next question, of course; is—"what happens to the car, the children's bikes, garden tools and all the rest that goes into a typical garage"?

An ideal solution can be found in a combination carport-patio which offers a bonus of ample storage sapce. A central storeroom area provides the foundation for a cantilevered roof of translucent plastic panels. One side offers year-round weather protection for the family car while the other half of the overhang serves a a shelter for outdoor family activities.

Making the structure is an excellent do-it-yourself project. The plastic paneling is as easy to work with as wood is light-weight and requires a minimum of stock lumber for its supporting framework.

Planting

Set strawberry plants so that crown is even with soil level. If it is higher, roots dry out; if lower, crown may smother and the plant die. Firm soil around roots; water plant.

Tight Seal

Keep paint can rims clean so that lids will fit tight. This way paint can be stored for a longer period of time without hardening. To keep rims clean punch several nail holes in the bottom of the groove so that accumulated paint can drip down.

Chandeliers Light Up New Home Decor

Your "eye-Q" is high if you look up — not down. The fashion trend for residential lighting, according to originators of many firsts in the home furnishing field, is to chandeliers. These symbols of elegance now return as a major focal point in today's home.

Decorators more and more favor the chandelier as a basic decorative theme for a distinctively designed room.

LUXURIOUS

Luxurious embellishment is the keynote in today's decorative schemes. Elegant and elaborate accessories are used to bring flair to even the most moderately appointed interiors. The use of color too is more vibrant. Bold, lavish splashes of red and blue appear where one would least expect to find them.

Pendants and ceiling fixtures now happily combine stylized designs with modern lighting techniques.

A chandelier in modern terms may be a cluster of individual pendants suspended to give dramatic emphasis as well as excellent illmuination to an area. Some of these pendants are boldly scaled, others abound in vari-colored glass or plastic, and some are formed of wicker in black.

NEW APPROACHES

For those whose tastes are frankly on the "champagne level," there are elegant new approaches to crystal chandeliers. These are quite lavish, with the added "plus" of flexible controlled lighting. A light source is concealed within the crystal, and brings out all the brilliance of the sparkling prisms.

Hardboard Panel Ideal In Fix-Up Home Projects

Hardboard is a material of a-thousand-and-one uses that home-owners and handy-men are familiar with.

Among the most commonly used in and around the home are these: standard hardboard—plain or perforated — that is smooth on one sidde and screened on the back; temperated hardboard that is extra hard, strong, and more resistant to weather and abrasion, and tempered hardboard thats smooth on both sides.

FOR RELAXATION

Plan For 'Indoor' Element Outside

For true relaxation in outdoor living, your patio or swimming pool area should be planned as carefully as your living room.

Such indoor conveniences as a telephone, radio and TV, electric coffee maker, frying pan and portable refrigerator can add much to your pleasure.

The important thing is proper planning and a primary point in this is the correct placement of special conveniences both for ease of use and safety. When circuits for electrical appliances are planned, the placement of outdoor furniture should be taken into consideration. Avoid stretching cords across open spaces — a common cause of accidents about the home. Enough outlets should be installed to adequately handle the number of appliances needed.

The telephone site also should be planned ahead for the greatest possible convenience and with the arrangement of outdoor furniture in mind. When the phone is placed in a spot handy to a table and some comfortable chairs, it can make it easier to place and answer calls.

With the telephone, it's possible to have the same neat appearance of concealed phone wiring (whereby phone wires are channeled out of sight in the manner of electrical wiring) outside the house as well as inside.

The telephone company should be consulted when the outdoor area is in the early planning stage. It makes sense to have the telephone wire run beneath a concrete surface — a difficult feat if the concrete is already in.

Efficient Space Can Be Added Inside Garage

Here are some suggestions that will help you add efficient space to your garage without making it any larger:

Cover interior walls with perforated hardboard, so that tools can be hung instead of piling them in a corner. Build wall cabinets for storage of small objects: corner cabinets to hold garden and lawn equipment and work clothes and a drop-leaf work table so you can lower it against the wall when it's not in use.

Plan a storage platform suspended from the ceiling to hold screens, storm windows, hardboard panels and other large, flat objects.

Just imagine the convenience of once-a-day dishwashing! Your family-size Frigidaire dishwasher holds a whole day's dishes for an average family of four, and washes every dish in water too hot to touch. Handy racks pull out for easy front-loading, and you can forget about any special rinsing or scraping!

FOR RESIDENCES

Trend To Lighter Roof Tones Seen

The saying "there's nothing new under the sun" may still apply to many things, but it doesn't apply to roofs. There are many new developments under the sun (and rain, too) as far as roofing is concerned. For instance:

Dark colors are giving way to lighter shades on residential roofs, with snow-white shingles a particular favorite of new homeowners. These light colors not only reflect the taste of modern homeowners but also reflect the rays of the sun better and keep the house cooler in the summer.

LAST WORD

The last word on what kind of shingle to use when a new roof is put on is being spoken more and more by the woman of the house, who is insisting on roof colors that conform with the color scheme of the rest of the house. As a result, a record number of shingle colors are now on the market.

Shingles are also being made to blend with the lines of a house. A new shingle with 50 per cent wider tabs is designed to enhance the low, sweeping look of ranch homes and split-levels.

Flat and low - incline roofs are being used more and more on private homes, with whole developments of flat-roofed homes going up.

Shingle tabs aren't ripping off or flying away as they used to during a windstorm. A new shingle has hidden adhesive bands under each tab that seal the shingles down so effectively they will stay down even when battered by winds of hurricane force.

ROOF ENEMY

And speaking of the sun, roofing specialists point out that it's the roof's greatest enemy because the drying effect of the sun's rays causes roofing to crack and admit moisture. That's why, they report, shingles with extra coatings of sun-resistant minerals are also becoming more popular in home construction and re-roofing projects.

Food Wastes Disposers In Varied Styles

If you are planning to improve your kitchen for better living, more convenient serving, ease of cooking — and freedom from extra clean-up chores — then consider the installation of a modern food-waste disposer.

If you already enjoy the convenience of a disposer, you may now be considering stepping-up to a newer, more efficient model.

Household disposers, engineered for quiet, speed and efficiency, and designed to satisfy every homemaker's need regardless of the type of food waste, or size of the budget, are available today.

A versatile line features a variety of models for every budget — including the top-of-the-line that gets rid of even large bones in less than one-third of the time.

With considerably less noise than the most efficient competitive unit on the market, this particular model has a new mechanical design which assures greater speed and added quiet.

House Noise Is Modified By Carpeting

No efficient homemaker would consider hiding dirt under a rug, but a rug or a carpet can help "hide" noise.

Noise can be a serious problem. Older homes especially, may be totally lacking in acoustical materials, while many new home-owners are faced with increased noise problems, too.

The extensive use of glass and other hard, reflective surfaces; radios, record players and T.V.; lower ceilings in smaller rooms, and mechanical, labor-saving devices around the home — all contribute to higher noise levels.

These make "sound conditioning" more important than ever.

There are two types of noise: airborne noise that "floats" through the house, such as conversation or traffic sounds from outdoors — and impact noises caused by footsteps and dropped objects.

That carpeting in the home can reduce such noises up to fifty per cent . . . has been proved by extensive laboratory tests.

You can literally "decorate for peace and quiet," as well as for beauty with your choice of carpeting. Tests further prove that all carpet fibers and textypes—both cut pile and looped pile—are highly efficient sound absorbers.

File Cleaner

Trim the bristles of an old stiff bristle toothbrush until they're only about one - fourth inch long. This make a dandy tool for cleaning clogged files when a metal file card isn't handy.

ENGINEERING INSECT

Termite Damage Is Costly Matter

Although blind and brainless, the termite is an engineering genius.

This migrant, pin-sized insect is so shrewd that man's most modern construction practices fail to halt his attacks on wood and other cellulose material used in building.

The termite seeks out wood and infests it; probing through the ground to penetrate the most minute of foundation cracks.

Despite increased use of cements and metal in foundation construction, termite damage continues to climb. Losses by termite damage are second only to fire losses — amounting to 250 million dollars a year, more than $685,000 a day, according to figures released by sponsors of the termite control program.

Many mistakenly believe that a slab foundation can protect a house from termites. Far from being free from termites, houses with slab construction are often termite traps, making control difficult and expensive.

However termite control problems can be reduced by a few minor construction details when a house is being built or extensively remodeled by proper ventilation, proper drainage, adequate clearance under joist construction and removable baseboards in slab construction.

No home is really termite proof, but many are termite protected by wise construction and continued watchfulness.

One of the best control measures is the use of chemical insecticides impregnated into the ground around the foundations.

Chemicals are especially effective when used during constructoin and immediately upon completion of the foundation.

MOBILE air-conditioners can be rolled from room to room and installed in almost any window in a few seconds. Adjusting handle raises or lowers it to window sill height.

Plan Family Rooms For Many Uses

Now the family room plan can be used for everyone since every house isn't the same—and the family room must be built in the available space. And, the family room should be designed for the members of the family who will be using it.

If there are several children in the family, the room should have plenty of storage space for games, toys and should be able to take hard wear.

Mom and Dad also should have a vote in the new family room plan. If Mom is interested in flowers for example, include a spot for her displays.

Dad may need a corner of the family room for a desk and filing cabinet, which also could be used by the youngsters for homework and hobby activities.

PLANT WORLD

Increase Noted In Garden Living

The beauty and wholesomeness of garden living has taken America by storm. Today, with the development of smaller houses in communities throughout the country, many homeowners have discovered that one way to extend their houses is by using their outdoor space to full advantage. With the aid of vines, shrubbery and shade trees, they are making the patio a delightful place to dine, entertain and relax.

MANY IDEAS

Nurserymen have many ideas to show how you can plan and plant such an outdoor space this spring, says the American Association of Nurserymen. Good planting plans, among other things, will indicate how the garden living room can be protected from cold or hot winds, whether in fall or the hot summer months. These plantings both increase comfort and lengthen the outdoor season.

In the usually small space of the patio the homeowner can develop a small but beautiful plant world in which it is a thrilling and luxurous experience to get away from it all.

SHADE TREE

At least one shade tree is important in the patio not only for coolness, but for the lacy, ever-changing patterns of sun and shade that it casts on walls, floor and other plants. The wealth of foliage and flowering plants for the patio, developed in recent years, provides a wide choice.

Flowering plants and vines in baskets and jardinieres or boxes add to the luxurious feeling of the patio, and they can be changed when the choicest flowers are in season.

The secret of the most delightful patios is the simplicity of plant life hugging the walls, not encroaching too much on the living space, but frequently being changed to capitalize on the best in the plant world at any given time.

Supply Of Hot Water Essential For The Home

When you start your plans to better your home, dont overlook the fact that you really better your living with plenty of hot water, available automatically when you want it.

Today we use hot water lavishly, without a second thought—and enjoy its wonderful benefits until suddenly the water heater fails to work properly.

We just turn on the tap for a shower, a shave, laundry, the babys bath, dishwashing — and the other countless household tasks.

BASEMENT IS TRANSFORMED into a comfortable, attractive family room at modest cost. Cabinet under recess houses record player and forms back for built-in seats.

Hardboards Variety Aids Remodelers

Hardboard is one of the most versatile and most-widely used of man-made ropducts.

The do-it-yourself enthusiast can put it to 1,001 uses in home workshop projects.

It's also a building material used in remodeling projects, new homes, commercial strctures and farm buildings.

MADE OF WOOD

Hardboard is made of natural wood by separating the individual wood fibers, leaving each surrondued by its natural adhesive agent, and rearranging them in a matted form under heat and pressure.

The hardboard panel made by the proecess is dense, grainless an dhas great strength, uniformity, durability and adaptability. It can be sawed, drilled, curved, die-stamped, shaped, perforated, printed, painted and laminated. Its smooth, hard surface resists water damage and abrasive action.

It can be fastened with nails, adhesives, staples, screws, rivets and bolts. It will not slitp, splinter or crack, and it takes practically any finish beautifully.

THICKNESS VARIES

Hardboard panels range from ½" to 5-16" thick; most common sizes are ⅛", 3-16" and ¼". Standard panels are 4' x 6'; although other sizes are available in hardboards.

In addition to standard hardboard, which is brown in color, there are tempered, perforated and predecorated hardboards.

You can purchase hardboard from most lumber yards, building materials dealers and hardware stores under more than a score of brand names.

Wall-Mounted Vanitory Mirror Covers Opening

Today's homeowner wants the luxury of a large mirrored area in the bathroom or dressing room. Frequently when remodeling a bathroom, it's expensive to replace a small, old-fashioned cabinet with a larger, more modern one. Wall opening has to be increased and often leads to ex-ensive relocation of plumbing.

A wall-mounted vanitory mirror unit will cover the old rough wall opening, and is ideally suited to remodeling work. Vanitory mirrors are available in widths ranging from two to four feet.

A compartment beneath the mirror with sliding mirrored doors, is designed to hold the cosmetics and medicines)you like to have handy.

MAKE A FAMILY ROOM useful for every one in the family with hobby-inviting features. Here a first floor bay window, in a family room, displays lovely flowers while the workbench on the adjacent wall can be used for Mom's flower arangement or by Dad and the youngsters for home work.

Plant Roses For Beauty, Fragrance

Perhaps the most thrilling experience for the home gardener is to pluck the first lovely rose bloom that appears and to sniff its fragrance.

Some of the roses listed as very fragrant, according to the American Rose Society, are:

LIST

Crimson Glory, Etoile de Hollande, Good News, Kodes Perfecta, Lady Luck, living, Mirandy, Pink Peace, Pink Princess, Rose of Freedom, Sutter's Gold, Tapestry, The Doctor, Jiminy Cricket, Ma Perkins, High Time, Pink Chiffon, Spartan, Texan and Merry Widow.

A trip to a nursery when roses are in bloom in containers is a sure way for the home owner to find the roses whose aroma he likes best, simply by going around and sniffing the flowers, says the American Association of Nurserymen.

Most local nurserymen have their favorite roses with respect to their fragrance, while nursery catalogues almost invariably stress the fragrance of a rose if it has outstanding aroma.

BEST ROSES

However, the "best" rose is the one you like best and from which you get the most pleasure and results.

A number of fine regional nurserymen growers of roses bring out excellent new varieties, one or two each a year.

Less Repair

The plumbing system in a modern home represents about 10 per cent of the value of the house. It pays to make repairs while they're small.

Planned Planting

Flowering shrubs show off to best advantage when massed in tiers according to height . . . low-growing ones in front.

Paper Patterns Neatness Aid In Linoleum Work

Paper patterns help do a neater job when you have to fit linoleum against an irregular wall outline, according to a mechanics magazine. Paste pieces of heavy paper together with the edges butting snugly against the irregular outline.

Lay the pattern in position on the floor and coat it with rubber cement. Also apply cement to the back of the linoleum at the point where it will come over the paper.

When the cement is nearly dry, place the linoleum in position, pressing the portion to be cut on the paper.

Build Closet Wall To Gain Storing Space

To the lady of the house, "conquering space" means discovering new storage room — rather than rocketing to the moon.

Now a new plan for a bedroom closet wall deserves the designation of "space maker" say its designers, makers of lumber, plywood and other assorted wood building products.

The plan provides twin closets ("his" and "hers" on either side of the head of the bed. It is a neat solution to the otherwise vexing storage problem in many, many homes since most bedrooms have unused space along one wall. Usually, you do not even need to rearrange furniture; other times, moving the bed to another wall makes the addition practical, simple.

Closets require only 2-foot depth, and they can be as wide as the room allows. Even a 2-foot wide closet provides storage for at least a dozen men's suits or two or three times as many dresses. Above and below the clothes on hangers, there's added space for shoes, hats, accessories.

These built-ins are simple with either lumber or plywood. Finished natural or with a light stain, the warmth and beauty of wood adds restful charm and updates the home. Choose a light-colored, economical wood such as western hem-lock that readily accepts a wide range of stain tones or one of the new prefinished Craftwall hardwood panelings offered in a half-dozen woods and even more finishes.

For the advanced do-it-yourselfer, building a closet wall probably falls into the "moderately easy" category. When built by a professional, the project would go fast, cause little disruption of the home and usually cost only $350-$450 complete, unless there are unusually complicated conditions.

Keep Smaller Garden Tools, Seed Together

Here's a handy tip for the gardener for the busy planting season ahead.

That is, a small wooden or heavy cardboard box with a handle and partitions to hold all the small equipment needed for seed sowing. Thus packages of seed, labels, stakes, twine, a trowel and any special gadgets will be kept together, and neither time nor temper will be lost hunting for small essential items whenever a little planting can be done.

As the season advances and chores change, more timely equipment can be exchanged for the seed-sowing items.

Varied Models Of Dishwashers Being Installed

Home dishwashers are rapidly taking their places along side of refrigerators and ranges in more and more new and older American homes.

Kitchen modernization projects these days, include built-in dishwasher models, free - standing models or dishwasher - sink combinations. These are now installed with a minimum of change, effort and expense.

Homemakers (the children and dads, too) welcome the day when they can gain the dividends of more convenience, extra sanitation, and the big saving of work and time — thanks to a modern dishwasher.

BLANKETS of mineral wool, cut to size, are stapled neatly to attic knee walls. Finished room will be comfortable, draft-free.

Tapered wooden shingles make handy shims, table leg eveners, can be wedged into large cracks to be filled with calking, etc.

Change Cited In Insulation Siding Quality

Though mineral-surface insulating siding has been used as a building materials product for over 30 years, people are talking about it with new enthusiasm.

Inherent insulation properties are the same, but the quality of design, color and texture has been completely overhauled and upgraded. New, wider selections of insulating siding styles and colors, along with added texture, are permanently embossed right at the factory; no painting is required; ease of maintenance is a boon to the busy homeowner.

Buyers today are not only color and quality conscious, they demand product versatility. The rich, two-toned effect that natural stone or brick combined with siding gives any home — whether new construction or modernized—is a forward trend.

Insulating siding is architecturally compatible with all exterior sidewall materials. Striated panels in clapboard design, surfaced with colorful mineral granules, offer the rich textured look with deep shadowlines that people want.

Use For Clay

Two lumps of modeling clay make a wonderful holder when soldering or glueing two small awkwardly shaped pieces. Just push each part into its lump of clay, then line up in the desired position.

Ceiling Tile Installation Is Simplified

Now's the time when do-it-yourselfers dust of the list of projects that await their skills. A favorite project, judging by the increased sales of ceiling-tile products at this season, is acoustical treatment of family living spaces.

Ceiling-tile installation is a good project for the home handy man, one that's easy to do professionally, and a job that's becoming easier with new developments in application methods.

PREVIOUSLY

Previously, unfinished ceiling had to be covered first with 1" x 2" wood furring strips in a separate operation before tile was nailed or stapled into place. This is no longer necessary. A leading manufacturer is now marketing a ceiling-tile system that utilizes a new metal "Clip-Strip" which goes up in the same operation as the tiles, automatically aligns them, and eliminates the need or individual fastening of the tiles.

Most important step in applying ceiling-tile is the planning. First make a scale drawing of the area to be covered, marking off one-foot squares for the tiles. The best appearance is obtained by using a pattern with wide border tiles, at least 6 inches or more. Border tiles can be cut with a small cross-cut hand-saw.

A wide selection of acoustical tile styles to suit all tastes is available. They range all the way up to 75 per cent sound absorption, depending on the method of attachment. Some of the newest patterns are shown in dramatic, sculptured effects, ideal for more formal living areas in the home.

IN REVAMPING

Modern Kitchen Economy Is Goal

Modern building materials, plus the skill of today's home improvement specialists, make it possible to revitalize a kitchen with few or now expensive alterations of basic room dimensions on almost any size budget.

Consultation with a home improvement specialist is of prime importance in any remodeling job and may mean extra dollars saved.

More and more kitchen remodeling plans are now including noise-quieting, acoustical ceiling tile. In addition to subduing normal kitchen racket, decorative acoustical tile complements any room decor.

For an added dash of low-cost luxury, install attractive wood-grain finishes and several color tones, these hardboard panelings are scuff - proof, cleanable and easily applied directly over over old walls with furring strips or adhesive.

Here are a few tips to consider when you're planning a new kitchen:

Relate the size of the kitchen to its functions: are an eating area, a laundry area or a sewing corner needed?

Check to see if moving a wall or windows will add more room and greater efficiency.

Plan for plenty of storage. This is probably the major complaint against outdated kitchens.

With thoughtful pre - planning, making the best possible use of modern building materials and consultation with a modernization expert, your new kitchen can be tailored exactly to both budget and needs.

Shower Height

A shower bath installation at 72 inches above the floor has been proved to be the most convenient height for most people.

IN HOUSE

Efficient Cooling Plan Is Needed

On a day when you awaken feeling at peace with the world — when you want to 'get at' things you've been putting off and see others around you abuzz with activity — it's not a big dose of vitamins — it's the weather!

Chances are that the temperature is about 70 degrees the humidity about 50 per cent — and there is a gentle stirring of clean air. Nature is giving a demonstration of the climate conditions which suit humans best.

Scientists and researchers call this an "optimum day." Insurance statistics and court records show that on such days there are fewer accidents, fewer deaths and fewer serious arguments. In general, people do better jobs and feel better.

While homeowners may not have reduced this to such simple terms when considering an air conditioning system, actually this is the secret for specifying the comfort conditions you want.

FACTORS

There are important factors for the homeowner to consider when planning a program of air conditioning. Be sure to check the following points carefully:

Temperature and humidity should be held within the comfort zone: 70-78 degrees as far as temperature is concerned and 30-35 per cent relative humidity. Heat gain calculations are necessary to determine proper size of the mechanical equipment.

Provide air circulation in all rooms so that cool air will not stratify on the floor. Your dealer will design an adequate distribution and return air system so no perceptible air movement will impinge on occupants and cause discomfort.

Even though windows remain closed for summer cooling, a constant supply of fresh air can be provided with a dampering arrangement which brings in outside air, filters it, cools it and dehumidifies it before circulating it through the house.

For those suffering from asthma, hayfever, or sinus ailments or for dust-free living, you can have country-fresh air by including an electrostatic filtering device which removes cigarette smoke, pollen and other airborne junk.

Remember that the home has both relaxing areas and working areas. Cooler temperatures are important in the working areas because physical activity generates heat. Warmer temperatures in relaxing areas prevent chills while sitting still. Your dealer can provide for this either by balancing the flow of air to the various rooms or by installing electronic zone controls.

SPECIALIST ADVISES

Improving Home Increases Convenience, Beauty, Value

By PAUL SHOEMAKER
TREASURER
The National Home
Improvement Council

These days millions of families are discovering how to live better. The secret? Remodeling to have "a new home at the old address." Improving the home has a number of advantages now being discovered in one out of every five households countrywide.

Modernizing gives new comfort, new convenience, new pleasure and, most important of all, increases property value of many out-of-date houses.

Sound, sensible home improvement increases value well beyond the cost of the improvement. For that reason remodeling becomes an investment rather than an expense and is like "putting money in the bank."

PET PROJECT

Most families have their pet fix-up project.

Here's a quick rundown of some of the most popular: A remodeled kitchen is the favorite of home - makers everywhere who want new appliances to relieve the work load. Modern cabinets, lighting, new walls, flooring and ceilings are wanted to provide cherry surroundings in the "household center". New rooms are needed too, (from additional baths to converting the attic or basement, to adding on to the present structure.)

In addition to these, there are many more popular modernizing projects. Such things as swimming pools, breezeways, new heating and cooling equipment, additional storage space, wall paneling, wall papering and others to fit everyone's budget. All are guaranteed to make the home a better place in which to live.

The great need is to take care of growing families, give proper room for children's activities, for dad and mom to relax at day's end, for the whole family to live together in greater comfort.

Exterior face lifting (and I don't mean adding a TV antenna). Modern, up-to-date families think of outside remodeling as well as making the home inside more comfortable. Outside fix-up can range from a new paint job to re-siding to turning an old-fashioned porch into a sun room.

Here's important news. Home improvement financing is now readily obtainable at low rates. Improving your home today is as easy as buying a new car or financing a luxury vacation. For example, most homeowners can obtain sums up to $10,000 and repay over 20 years time under a government insured program. You can borrow lesser amounts, of course.

Tamp soil gently with the hoe blade after sowing seeds in rows. You'll provide close contact between soil and seeds; get flower or vegetable seeds off to a far stronger start.

Professor Greengrass shows Hardway Harry

How to take the BENDS out of WEEDING

It's painfully obvious, Harold, that you're performing this operation the hard way.

Yeah? How else wouldja weed?

Quite simple, my friend. Just spray your lawn with WEED-B-GON. It takes the bends and backaches out of weeding.

This astonishing chemical weed killer can actually distinguish weeds from grass. WEED-B-GON annihilates weeds, leaves grass unharmed.

Well, I'm gonna Keep pullin' weeds. Then I know I've got the roots!

Absolutely unnecessary, Harold. WEED-B-GON Kills weeds, roots and all. A hormone weed killer, it forces weeds to grow old and die from the roots up!

Say, Prof., WEED-B-GON sure beats weeding!

And you can re-seed any time with WEED-B-GON. So shouldn't you weed the new way? —with WEED-B-GON and the wonderful ORTHO Lawn Sprayer!

ORTHO

CALIFORNIA CHEMICAL CO. ORTHO DIVISION, 200 Bush St., San Francisco, Calif.

PLANNED LIGHTING arrangements give this rustic interior the warm glow of comfortable living. Matching transitional wall brackets dramatize the beauty of the hallway cabinet. Living room appointments are highlighted by pulldown.

Old Kitchens Modernized By Built-Ins

Although built-ins are not new to American homeowners, the trend in recent years is to have more and more items built into a specific area. Special storage areas, book cases, furniture, etc., have been designed for some time as a means of conserving space and eliminating hard-to-clean areas.

The biggest trend of recent years, however, is for more built-ins in the kitchen. Now almost any appliance or gadget can be designed to become a part of the total kitchen.

CONSIDERATIONS

Why is the kitchen the popular place for built-ins? Here are some of the major considerations. Appearance — built-ins aid the integration of the parts into a total, unbroken line. Livability—with the coming of the kitchen-family room the demand for furniture style cabinetry increased. The blending of the appliances—ovens, range tops, dishwashers and refrigerator-freezers — help maintain this 'living' style kitchen.

Cleanliness — the elimination of cracks, corners and under areas to collect dirt, crumbs and odors is a blessing to housewives who demand freedom for modern day living.

Convenience — bringing the oven, refrigerator and freezer up to a workable height has been a boon to housewives. And separating the oven and cook top as well as refrigerator and freezer, to locate them where most convenient, enables kitchen planning experts to provide ease of work with good looks.

Observe Codes When Planning Building Work

Nearly all communities exercise some municipal control over building projects, including major jobs of home remodeling, by means of building regulations or codes, which vary. The prime purpose of codes is two-fold:

They protect the community interests by specifying the quality, location, and appearance of construction projects.

They protect individuals against dangers to life and health from unsafe construction materials and assembly.

When remodeling, be sure to investigate the need of getting a building permit. Plans of the proposed building project must usually be submitted at the time when applying for a permit. Codes generally are enforced by the fee-and-permit system.

FOR RESIDENCES

Trend To Lighter Roof Tones Seen

The saying "there's nothing new under the sun" may still apply to many things, but it doesn't apply to roofs. There are many new developments under the sun (and rain, too) as far as roofing is concerned. For instance:

Dark colors are giving way to lighter shades on residential roofs, with snow-white shingles a particular favorite of new homeowners. These light colors not only reflect the taste of modern homeowners but also reflect the rays of the sun better and keep the house cooler in the summer.

LAST WORD

The last word on what kind of shingle to use when a new roof is put on is being spoken more and more by the woman of the house, who is insisting on roof colors that conform with the color scheme of the rest of the house. As a result, a record number of shingle colors are now on the market.

Shingles are also being made to blend with the lines of a house. A new shingle with 50 per cent wider tabs is designed to enhance the low, sweeping look of ranch homes and split-levels.

Flat and low - incline roofs are being used more and more on private homes, with whole developments of flat-roofed homes going up.

Shingle tabs aren't ripping off or flying away as they used to during a windstorm. A new shingle has hidden adhesive bands under each tab that seal the shingles down so effectively they will stay down even when battered by winds of hurricane force.

ROOF ENEMY

And speaking of the sun, roofing specialists point out that it's the roof's greatest enemy because the drying effect of the sun's rays causes roofing to crack and admit moisture. That's why, they report, shingles with extra coatings of sun-resistant minerals are also becoming more popular in home construction and reroofing projects.

Food Wastes Disposers In Varied Styles

If you are planning to improve your kitchen for better living, more convenient serving, ease of cooking — and freedom from extra clean-up chores — then consider the installation of a modern food-waste disposer.

If you already enjoy the convenience of a disposer, you may now be considering stepping-up to a newer, more efficient model.

Household disposers, engineered for quiet, speed and efficiency, and designed to satisfy every homemaker's need regardless of the type of food waste, or size of the budget, are available today.

A versatile line features a variety of models for every budget — including the top-of-the-line that gets rid of even large bones in less than one-third of the time.

With considerably less noise than the most efficient competitive unit on the market, this particular model has a new mechanical design which assures greater speed and added quiet.

House Noise Is Modified By Carpeting

No efficient homemaker would consider hiding dirt under a rug, but a rug or a carpet can help "hide" noise.

Noise can be a serious problem. Older homes especially, may be totally lacking in acoustical materials, while many new home-owners are faced with increased noise problems, too.

The extensive use of glass and other hard, reflective surfaces; radios, record players and T.V.; lower ceilings in smaller rooms, and mechanical, labor-saving devices around the home — all contribute to higher noise levels.

These make "sound conditioning" more important than ever.

There are two types of noise: airborne noise that "floats" through the house, such as conversation or traffic sounds from outdoors — and impact noises caused by footsteps and dropped objects.

That carpeting in the home can reduce such noises up to fifty per cent . . . has been proved by extensive laboratory tests.

You can literally "decorate for peace and quiet," as well as for beauty with your choice of carpeting. Tests further prove that all carpet fibers and textypes—both cut pile and looped pile—are highly efficient sound absorbers.

File Cleaner

Trim the bristles of an old stiff bristle toothbrush until they're only about one - fourth inch long. This make a dandy tool for cleaning clogged files when a metal file card isn't handy.

BATHROOM takes on a new beauty and utility via this lavatory-vanity combination that offers storage space, ample counter-top area and easy-cleaning features.

Chandeliers Light Up New Home Decor

Your "eye-Q" is high if you look up — not down. The fashion trend for residential lighting, according to originators of many firsts in the home furnishing field, is to chandeliers. These symbols of elegance now return as a major focal point in today's home.

Decorators more and more favor the chandelier as a basic decorative theme for a distinctively designed room.

LUXURIOUS

Luxurious embellishment is the keynote in today's decorative schemes. Elegant and elaborate accessories are used to bring flair to even the most moderately appointed interiors. The use of color too is more vibrant. Bold, lavish splashes of red and blue appear where one would least expect to find them.

Pendants and ceiling fixtures now happily combine stylized designs with modern lighting techniques.

A chandelier in modern terms may be a cluster of individual pendants suspended to give dramatic emphasis as well as excellent illmuination to an area. Some of these pendants are boldly scaled, others abound in varicolored glass or plastic, and some are formed of wicker in black.

NEW APPROACHES

For those whose tastes are frankly on the "champagne level," there are elegant new approaches to crystal chandeliers. These are quite lavish, with the added "plus" of flexible controlled lighting. A light source is concealed within the crystal, and brings out all the brilliance of the sparkling prisms.

Hardboard Panel Ideal In Fix-Up Home Projects

Hardboard is a material of a-thousand-and-one uses that homeowners and handy-men are familiar with.

Among the most commonly used in and around the home are these: standard hardboard—plain or perforated — that is smooth on one sidde and screened on the back; temperated hardboard that is extra hard, strong, and more resistant to weather and abrasion, and tempered hardboard thats smooth on both sides.

FOR RELAXATION

Plan For 'Indoor' Element Outside

For true relaxation in outdoor living, your patio or swimming pool area should be planned as carefully as your living room.

Such indoor conveniences as a telephone, radio and TV, electric coffee maker, frying pan and portable refrigerator can add much to your pleasure.

The important thing is proper planning and a primary point in this is the correct placement of special conveniences both for ease of use and safety. When circuits for electrical appliances are planned, the placement of outdoor furniture should be taken into consideration. Avoid stretching cords across open spaces — a common cause of accidents about the home. Enough outlets should be installed to adequately handle the number of appliances needed.

The telephone site also should be planned ahead for the greatest possible convenience and with the arrangement of outdoor furniture in mind. When the phone is placed in a spot handy to a table and some comfortable chairs, it can make it easier to place and answer calls.

With the telephone, it's possible to have the same neat appearance of concealed phone wiring (whereby phone wires are channeled out of sight in the manner of electrical wiring) outside the house as well as inside.

The telephone company should be consulted when the outdoor area is in the early planning stage. It makes sense to have the telephone wire run beneath a concrete surface — a difficult feat if the concrete is already in.

Efficient Space Can Be Added Inside Garage

Here are some suggestions that will help you add efficient space to your garage without making it any larger:

Cover interior walls with perforated hardboard, so that tools can be hung instead of piling them in a corner. Build wall cabinets for storage of small objects: corner cabinets to hold garden and lawn equipment and work clothes and a drop-leaf work table so you can lower it against the wall when it's not in use.

Plan a storage platform suspended from the ceiling to hold screens, storm windows, hardboard panels and other large, flat objects.

Just imagine the convenience of once-a-day dishwashing! Your family-size Frigidaire dishwasher holds a whole day's dishes for an average family of four, and washes every dish in water too hot to touch. Handy racks pull out for easy front-loading, and you can forget about any special rinsing or scraping!

JIM, IT'S JUST A SHORT COURSE!
NEXT THEY'LL HAVE A REQUIRED COURSE IN THE TWIST!!

NO ONE MOVES!
OF COURSE SHE'S RIGHT— I AM THE ONE WITH TRANSISTORS IN MY TEETH!
SO I CAN BROADCAST TO A LINE-OF-SIGHT RECEIVER...
BUT I AM NOT GIVING UP...
WHY, I'LL HOLD IT!
I AM TAKING THE GIRL AS A HOSTAGE AND ESCAPING IN THE AIRCRAFT...
IF YOU TRY TO STOP ME, I SHALL SHOOT HER— AS I SHOT THE CANADIAN!
THE CORNERED AGENT CLIMBS ABOARD THE BUSH PLANE, PULLING HIYU ALONG... ONCE INSIDE SHE KNOCKS THE YOUNG GIRL UNCONSCIOUS—THEN STARTS THE ALREADY WARMED-UP ENGINE
AS SHE WHIPS THE AIRCRAFT AROUND, TWO AIRMEN LUNGE AT THE TAIL ASSEMBLY— AND, AS IF SHE ANTICIPATED THIS MOVE, THE FUGITIVE FIRES TWICE FROM THE WINDOW...
AS THE BUSH PLANE ROARS ON DOWN THE STRIP, STEVE RACES TOWARD THE HELICOPTER THAT WAS TO CARRY THE CHORUS GIRLS BACK TO CIVILIZATION...
THE UNARMED HELICOPTER CANNOT MATCH THE SPEED OF THE STANDARD AIRCRAFT— SO THE PILOT RADIOS TO THE NEAREST FIGHTER BASE THAT THE ESCAPING AIRCRAFT IS HEADED FOR OPEN ICE... AND THE SOVIET COAST...
THE FUGITIVE GIRL IS LISTENING —AND SWINGS THE BUSH PLANE AROUND...
TOWARD THE UNINHABITED INTERIOR —WHERE A WHITE WALL OF WEATHER WILL COVER HER FROM THE FIGHTERS— AND EVERYTHING ELSE WHEN SHE RUNS OUT OF FUEL....

Professor Greengrass shows Hardway Harry
How to take the BENDS out of WEEDING
It's painfully obvious, Harold, that you're performing this operation the hard way.
Yeah? How else wouldja weed?
Quite simple, my friend. Just spray your lawn with WEED-B-GON. It takes the bends and backaches out of weeding.
ORTHO WEED-B-GON
This astonishing chemical weed killer can actually distinguish weeds from grass. WEED-B-GON annihilates weeds, leaves grass unharmed.
Well, I'm gonna Keep pullin' weeds. Then I know I've got the roots!
Absolutely unnecessary, Harold. WEED-B-GON Kills weeds, roots and all. A hormone weed Killer, it forces weeds to grow old and die from the roots up!
Later
Say, Prof., WEED-B-GON sure beats weeding!
And you can re-seed any time with WEED-B-GON. So shouldn't you weed the new way? —with WEED-B-GON and the wonderful ORTHO Lawn Sprayer!

THEY SAY A GIGANTIC MONSTER HAS RISEN FROM THE CRATER HARBOR AND IS DEVOURING ALL ON THE ISLAND!

YES. THE REPLY IS, THOSE ON THE ISLAND MUST HAVE FOUND THE CAPITALIST SWINE'S WINE CELLAR; THAT THERE ARE NO MONSTERS!
